Sails Aboard Cruiser Houston After Trip to Annapolis.

Two of His Sons Accompany Him

Ayres' Appointment Is Announced Prior to Departure.

Annapolis, Md., July 1 (Spl.). With a minimum of ceremony, President Roosevelt tonight boarded the cruiser Houston and began his Hawaiian cruise.

(Associated Press.)

President Roosevelt left the White House by automobile early last night for Annapolis, where he will board the cruiser Houston for his ocean voyage to Hawaii.

A large crowd gathered outside the Executive Mansion to see Mr. Roosevelt and members of his party off on the ride to the Naval Academy and the start of the 13,000-mile trip.

Mrs. Roosevelt and the President's children were in the party. Franklin, jr., and John Roosevelt will accompany their father, on the Houston.

The President spent a busy day at his desk before departing. Among other things he appointed Representative Ayres (Democrat), Kansas, as a member of the Federal Trade Commission to succeed James Landis, who was named to the new Stock Exchange and Securities Commission Saturday night.

Confers With Moffett.

After making that appointment, Mr. Roosevelt conferred with James A. Moffett who was selected Saturday to head the Administration's housing program.

In the conference also were Frank C. Walker, retiring director of the executive council, who organized the housing program and Harry L. Hopkins, Federal Relief Administrator.

Moffett will start his work immediately at the request of the President. Walker will remain here for a while to assist in organizing the National campaign for building of new homes and modernization of old ones.

When the President left his desk was virtually free of all work. He cleared away most of his pressing business Saturday with the appointment of the Stock Exchange and Securities Commission and the commission to regulate the communications systems. He also announced signing of the farm mortgage moratorium and railroad pension bills.

Wants to Rest.

In addition to members of his family those accompanying Mr. Roosevelt to Annapolis included

U. S. Restores 5 Per Cent Pay

Another 5 per cent of the Federal employes 15 per cent pay cut was restored yesterday, the Associated Press reports.

Under the terms of the independent offices bill, passed by Congress over President Roosevelt's veto experts figured it would cost about $125,000,000 more than budget estimates for the new fiscal year which began today.

The independent offices bill also provided for restoration of veterans' compensation which was cut by the economy act. The total cost of both restorations was figured at $228,000,000 more than budget estimates.

Government workers received the first 5 per cent restoration last February. The President is empowered to give back the third and final 5 per cent on next January 1 if he finds a rise in living costs warrants it. Soldiers, sailors and other members of the military are included.

Here the restoration will put approximately $15,000,000 more into the pockets of the men and women in Government service.

Mill Quits, Blaming Code; Hill Town Hit

Shutdown of Lumber Plant at Nellys Ford, Va., Held Due to NRA Demands; Majority of Residents Made Jobless.

By C. B. Carr.

Nellys Ford, Va., July 1.—A story of business adversity allegedly brought about by the demand of NRA code authorities that sawmills in this semimountainous region operate under the lumber code was unfolded here today by a group of lumbermen, who have made their living for generations through sawing virgin timber.

A. G. Small, veteran Nellys Ford lumberman, told how he had been forced to close down his sawmill thereby throwing a majority of his fellow townsmen out of work.

"For 20 years and more I have hewn timber out of these hills," Small said, "and I was able to make a good living and provide a livelihood for my townsmen until the NRA authorities informed me that I either had to operate under the code or close the mill."

Small related that it was impossible for him to operate under the lumber code because of wage and tax requirements.

He pointed out that the timbermen of this section had worked for years for a dollar a day. They were satisfied, Small said, because he had to haul the lumber a great distance before it could be sold at even a moderate price.

On May 1 he closed the mill after the code authorities demanded that he increase his wages from $1 a day to a minimum of $2.28 per day of eight hours. They also demanded $1.50 tax per 1,000 feet on all lumber sawed from September 1 to May 1

Public Debt Is Raised to $27,053,141,414.48, All-Time Record.

(Associated Press.)

A deficit of $3,989,496,035.42 was announced yesterday by the Treasury for the first full fiscal year of the Roosevelt administration.

The Government spent $7,105,050,084.95 against an income of $3,115,554,049.53 and borrowed $4,514,468,854.33 to cover the difference and leave a sizable margin to carry into the new year.

The borrowings ran the Nation's public debt to an all-time peak of $27,053,141,414.48, against which the Treasury had a cash remainder on hand of $2,581,922,240.16, a sum $1,719,717,019.55 greater than that with which the year began.

Disbursements were divided into $4,004,135,550.81 for emergency recovery program purposes and $3,100,914,534.14 for routine Government expenses, the latter figure being $765,000,924.74 less than for the prevous year.

Emergency Outlays Itemized.

The principal items of the emergency outlays were $1,714,932,338.15 for the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, $645,226,128.77 for the Public Works Administration, $716,162,892.29 for the Civil Works Administration, $340,742,149.08 for emergency relief and $331,940,851.40 for the Civilian Conservation Corps.

In this connection, officials pointed out that the RFC has collateralized repayable loans outstanding to a total of $1,722,000,000 (estimated as of June 8) and that the PWA holds State and municipal bonds totaling $149,335,229.75.

In an accompanying summary of the regular daily statement for the close of business last night, the end of the fiscal year, the Treasury noted that $359,864,092.90 had been diverted to "meeting sinking fund and other statutory requirements," so that the deficit, exclusive of debt retirements, was $3,629,631,942.52.

Similarly it deducted the balance of cash on hand, $2,581,922,240.16, from the gross public debt of $27,053,141,414.48, to produce a net public figure of $24,471,219,174.32. That is a customary procedure.

"Book" Profits Not Counted.

The statistics take no account of the book profit which the Treasury realized on its gold stocks due to the reduction in the gold weight of the dollar. This figure, $2,811,375,756.72, and the $2,000,000,000 exchange stabilization fund, taken from it, are carried in separate accounts.

New Maine Law Draws Boyoctt of Cosmetic Makers

Portland, Me., July 1 (AP).—A virtual boycott of Maine as a market for cosmetics was predicted by dealers tonight as the State's new law on toilet preparations became effective.

Intending to protect consumers and produce revenue, the last legislature passed a law providing that manufacturers of preparations for the hair, face and hands must register at a cost of $1 each article offered for sale.

Manufacturers have notified merchants of their intention to drop the Maine market from their merchandising list. Maine is the pioneer in such legislation.

Marie Dressler Passes Fairly Restful Night

Santa Barbara, Calif., July 1 (AP). Marie Dressler, veteran actress of the stage and screen, critically ill at the home of friends here, passed a "fairly comfortable" night, her physicians reported today. They said there had been no change in her condition.

Miss Dressler, who lapsed into a coma Friday, was able today to recognize attendants, and made efforts to speak to them. The actress is suffering from cancer.

Yanks Defeat Nats, 5-2, for 7th Straight

Young Johnny Broaca, who graduated from Yale last month to a job on the Yankee pitching staff, introduced himself to the Nats yesterday and the pleasure of the meeting was entirely Broaca's, what with the Nats being held to seven hits.

The Nats sent Earl Whitehill, an old hand, out to tilt with Broaca on the pitching mound at Griffith Stadium, but a home run off the bat of Bill Dickey with a man on base persuaded Manager Joe Cronin to persuade Whitehill to leave the scene in the sixth inning. The upshot of the matter was that the Yankees won the ball game, 5 to 2, and nursed their winning streak safely through its seventh game in full view of 15,000 fans.

Yanks Increase Lead.

The effect of Broaca's peformance was two-fold, sending the Yankees into a one-game lead over the Tigers, who split a twin bill with the Browns yesterday at St. Louis, and dropping the Nats into fifth place behind the revivified Red Sox, who ground the Athletics under foot up in Philadelphia.

There was nothing spectacular about the pitching of the bespectacled Broaca—just a good day's work by a journeyman pitcher, but his control was perfect. Nary a Nat did he walk, and in the one inning that he appeared in distress, he whipped a nice fast ball into the plate that delivered him from jeopardy.

One reason the Nats didn't win was because they didn't get any runners on base after Joe Cronin made the seventh hit off Broaca with none out in the sixth inning. After that, the college lad retired the next twelve batters in one-two-three order, which is letter perfect.

Score In First.

The Nats led the Yankees for about five minutes at the start of the game. Buddy Myer, who was to make three of the seven hits credited to the local boys, led off the first inning with a double to

Duke Forces In PWA Fight

(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press.)

The Duke Endowment last night initiated a public campaign for revocation by the Public Works Administration of a $2,767,000 loan and grant to Greenwood County, S. C., for a municipal power plant that would compete with the Duke Power Co.

Anticipating a PWA hearing today, Dr. W. S. Rankin made public a memorandum addressed to more than 300 beneficiaries of the organization founded in 1924 by the late tobacco multimillionaire, James B. Duke.

"The Federal Government," it said, "is pursuing policies which, unless abandoned, will seriously cripple, if not destroy, the Duke Power Co."

The endowment largely relies on that company, Dr. Rankin explained in handing out the document, for funds distributed annually in North and South Carolina to various hospitals, orphanages and churches, as well as Duke University, Davidson, Johnson, Smith and Furman Colleges.

It was revealed that Senator Bailey and Representatives Doughton and Bulwinkle, of North Carolina, had interceded with the Administration to get reconsideration of the loan. When the hearing was granted, identity of the objecting organization was not made public here.

Final Darrow Blast Backs Little Fellow

Roosevelt Is Told NRA Now "an Adjunct" to Monopolies.

Report Calls Codes Too Drastic; Steel Men's Insolence Cited.

By Frank Getty.

The Darrow board made its final appeal for the "little fellow" in industry yesterday.

In a third report to President Roosevelt, the board declared the National recovery act not only has failed to fulfill its purpose, but has become, in some instances, "not the foe but the adjunct of depression."

Monopolies have been fostered by NRA and nothing done to restrain them, the report asserted. Small enterprises are being suppressed and the consumer entirely overlooked.

There are too many codes, and they are too drastic and attempt too much, the board found, declaring "there seems to be a sinister purpose to entrench monopolistic practices and evil conditions in the processes of the recovery act."

Couched in spicy and vigorous language, characteristic of its retired chairman, Clarence Darrow, the board's report flays the revised steel code as oppressive and charges "purposed contempt," "chill insolence," "gouging" and "brigandage" against officials of United States Steel and other leaders of the industry.

Code Resignations Urged.

Wholesale resignations of existing code authorities are demanded.

Covering in detail the faults it found in 12 major codes, the National Recovery Review Board, to give it its official title, submitted strongly worded findings and recommendations, and announced it had gone into recess until it hears from the President. The report was signed by Darrow, W. W. Neal, Fred P. Mann., sr., and Samuel C. Henry.

While the report did not, as forecast, charge "betrayal" of small enterprises by NRA, it pointed out that such concerns "can not, without ceasing to exist, comply with the requirements that mean surrender of their vital business secrets."

Among the most important of the board's findings was that "the attempt to fix prices was an error, and should be abandoned as soon as possible."

Summarizing its work since March 7, when it was created by Executive order, the Darrow board advised the President it had investigated 34 codes, received and examined 3,375 complaints and held 57 public hearings. Its conclusions are summarized in nine paragraphs:

1. In industry after industry, the larger units, sometimes through the agency of an "Institute," have for their own advantage written their codes and assumed administration thereof. The interests of the Nation and the consuming public have been ignored.

Small Enterprise Ruined.

2. A majority of the codes not only permit but foster monopolistic practices, and the small enterprise is not only oppressed but in many

2 Wealthy Children Die as Home Burns

Erhart Relatives Victims in California Blaze.

San Mateo, Calif., July 1 (AP).—John, 6, and Henrietta Ruggles, 8, grandchildren of William H. Erhart, New York and Cedarhurst, Long Island, multimillionaire, were burned to death today in a fire which destroyed the home of their mother, Mrs. Erhart Ruggles.

The children were trapped in their rooms as the flames, which firemen said apparently started from a short circuit, spread through the house.

Mrs. Ruggles was not at home at the time, while servants barely escaped with their lives without being able to aid the children.

France Vindicates 5 Soldiers Shot for Mutiny Under Fire

Paris, July 1 (AP).—Five war-weary soldiers, chosen by lot and shot for the mutiny of their company in 1915, were vindicated today and the widows of two of them awarded 7 cents apiece.

A special military tribunal acquitted them of the mutinous offense to clear their names. For more than ten years the case of the Fifth Company has gone from court to court while the widows of soldiers, Prevost and Morange, aided by interested attorneys, sought vindication.

On April 19, 1915, the Sixty-third Infantry returned to the trenches after a bloody expedition into the German lines in the St. Mihiel sector.

The Fifth Company, of which Sergt. Morange and Private Prevost were members, was almost cut to pieces.

But the Fifth had the best fighting record in the regiment, and the superior commander needed them. So it was returned immediately to the front lines while other companies rested.

"At the moment when the Fifth returned to the front line," says the official record, "the German machine gunners set up a terrific, endless fire. The trenches were a living hell. The dead from the preceding attack were piled one upon the other."

The officers of the Fifth gave the orders to go over the top, but the men did not move.

The commanding officers met shortly afterward and decided the whole company should be taken before the council of war, which undoubtedly would order them executed en masse. They were chosen by lot, one man from each squad. Five men appeared before the council and were ordered executed by a firing squad.

When the present review court opened, one of the justices remarked that the war council never would have sentenced the men if it had known how they were chosen. But the company's officers did not explain.

Hitler Executes Ten More Rebels; Toll Now 18; Storm Troop Leaders Are Seized

Goering Decree Places Ban on Discussion of Bloody Drive.

Ernest Roehm Shot Under Hitler Order

(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press.)

Berlin, July 1.—Chancellor Hitler was reported today to have carried on his purge-by-death of the Nazi party by having ten additional rebelling Storm Troop leaders executed, bringing the total killed in this manner to 18.

This figure did not take into account those high in the nation who committed suicide or were killed "resisting arrest" as Hitler struck furiously against rebelling subleaders.

The general situation, outwardly calm today, was complicated by revelation that President Paul von Hindenburg is ill enough to require a "major medical council" of leading physicians at his summer home at Neudeck.

The nearest thing to official confirmation that ten names were added to the list of those executed was a statement by Hermann Wilhelm Goering, Prussian premier and copurger with Hitler, that "a few more" executions would be announced soon.

Lawyer Executed.

Nazi quarters in Munich stated that Kerl Zehnter, an innkeeper, and Alexander G. Laser, a lawyer, were executed today at Stadelheim Prison "as traitors."

The determination of Hitler and his colleagues to carry on ruthlessly was voiced in a radio speech by Dr. Joseph Goebbels, propaganda minister, in which he warned that "those who conspire against the state" are "playing with their own heads."

Meanwhile, Vice Chancellor von Papen, closest friend of Von Hindenburg in the present government, was partially under arrest in his own private residence, which he had been forbidden to leave.

A thorough investigation of the Storm Troopers found under arrest, which included the Berlin special staff guard, was promised by Goering. He said the public will be

Fleeing Aids Of Dillinger Attack Doctor

North Webster, Ind., July 1 (AP). Dr. Leslie A. Laird was slugged unconscious early today by two gunmen, believed members of the Dillinger gang which robbed a South Bend bank yesterday, after he had treated one of the men for a gunshot wound.

The physician was awakened at his home, about a block from his office in this northern Indiana resort town, about 2 a. m. by a man who, authorities said, answered the description of Homer Van Meter, one of the chief lieutenants of John Dillinger.

The stranger asked Laird to go to his office and treat a friend whose arm had been cut in an automobile accident. The physician, however, recognized the wound in the left forearm as caused by a bullet. After he had cared for it, at the patient's request, Dr. Laird gave him an antitetanus injection.

Search Is Started.

Then the man requested a "shot" of a narcotic. When Dr. Laird replied he had none, one hit him on the head with a gun butt.

The doctor recovered consciousness about 45 minutes later to find that his office had been ransacked, both men had disappeared and the

Hitler's Death Slogan Again Rings in Reich

Joseph Goebbels Says More Heads to Roll, if Necessary.

Berlin, July 1 (AP).—Adolf Hitler's famous "heads shall roll" slogan was again drummed into ears of "conspirators" tonight by Dr. Joseph Goebbels, propaganda minister, in a nation-wide radio broadcast.

Speaking to a people which had just been startled by summary executions of men who stood high in the Nazi government, he threatened that there will be more executions if any one attempts a revolt.

"Those who conspire against the state may rest assured that they are playing with their own heads," said Goebbels in a dramatic voice.

He assured the public that order and quiet prevail throughout the Reich and that the situation is firmly in Hitler's hands.

Recalling Hitler's dramatic personal appearance at Munich before dawn Saturday to seize his former friend, Ernst Roehm, Goebbels said that Roehm and the other executed Storm Troop leaders "have met their fate."

"They did not understand our warnings," he said. "They speculated upon Hitler's leniency, but the punishment will be greater, the higher the rank.

"The friendliness of the party and the Sturm Abteilung (Storm Troopers) has been restored by Hitler and the whole nation indorses the Fuehrer's determined action."

The surprise raid on the mutinying Storm Troop leaders was a 100 per cent success, Goebbels said.

"The Fuehrer will grasp any one's hand extended to him in friendship," said Goebbels, "but fists raised against him will be broken with unprecedented force—conspirators will be thrown to the floor of their homes, broken."

The address, which was relayed to United States, British and Argentine radio stations, concluded with an appeal to the nation to stand with Hitler like one man.

Two Dead, Pilot Hurt In Air Stunting Crash

Browerville, Minn., July 1 (AP).—Two passengers were killed and the pilot seriously injured in a plane crash today.

The dead were Peter Buhl, 38, and Louis Nalewaja, 20, both farmers near here. The pilot was Andrew Buhl, 33, brother of Peter. He suffered internal injuries. The pilot was stunting at about 1,000 feet when the plane nose-dived.

Bull Fighter Seized, Bull Doing Just Fine

Chicago, July 1 (AP).—The city's first bull fighter, Alred Velasco, 30, has a joust with the law scheduled tomorrow.

Police seized him as he concluded what was billed as a bull fight yesterday at an amusement park. The fight wasn't very successful for the matador but the bull didn't do so badly—he got off with his life. Police made the arrest in spite of an injunction the amusement corporation obtained.

Father Kills 4 When Party Disturbs Him

Warns Once of Noise, Then Opens Fire With an Automatic Rifle.

East Tawas, Mich., July 1 (AP).—Sheriff Charles C. Miller and three guests at a house party in the Arthur Janson home here were shot to death early this morning by Arthur A. Woods, 52, Janson's father-in-law, who complained that the noise of the party disturbed his sleep.

The dead, besides Sheriff Miller, were Dr. Stanley Somers, of East Tawas, and Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Hayes. Roy Hickey, also a guest at the party, was wounded.

Woods, authorities said, complained about the noise interfering with his sleep. Without warning, he walked into the room and opened fire with an automatic rifle.

Dr. Somers was killed instantly. Hayes and his wife died in a hospital a few hours after the shooting. Sheriff Miller was shot as he met Woods at the rear door of the Janson home.

Woods fired once, the bullet striking the sheriff in the stomach. The sheriff died en route to the hospital.

Calmly, Woods reentered the Janson home, where his victims were still sprawled on the floor, gathered up his two grandchildren and took them to the home of a neighbor. Then he walked to Tawas City and surrendered.

Astor Newyweds En Route West

Private Detectives Guard Honeymoon Train.

Philadelphia, July 1 (AP).—En route west on their honeymoon trip, Mr. and Mrs. John Jacob Astor 3d spent three hours in Philadelphia today to make train connections in their private car, the Superb.

They came from New York, arriving about 8 a. m. Private detectives guarded the car and none of the wedding party emerged. The car was attached to an express train and left for Chicago after 11 a. m.

The newlyweds are due in Chicago early tomorrow. From there they expect to go to Seattle and British Columbia.

"Daddy" Browning's Condition Is Worse

Cardenas Wins Mexican Ballot

Mexico City, July 1 (AP).—Gen. Lazaro Cardenas, 39-year-old revolutionary veteran, today was chosen forty-fifth constitutional President of Mexico, in an election which reports from the principal cities indicated was the quietest in history.

Aided by the powerful political machine of the National Revolutionary party, Cardenas tonight appeared assured of at least 80 per cent of the total vote.

Police and soldiers were quartered in the capital and elsewhere but were not needed, as no disorder occurred.

Tejeda charged numerous irregularities and said he would appeal to Congress to set aside the election.

The whereabouts of Villareal has not been known since he left Monterrey Friday, resulting in rumors he was planning an insurrection.

Soldier Drowned At Herald Harbor

Sinks in Friends' Sight After Heart Attack.

William Upright, 23, Army private stationed at Walter Reed Hospital, was drowned Saturday night while swimming in Chesapeake Bay at Herald Harbor, it was learned yesterday.

Officials at the hospital said Upright motored down with a group of friends. Physicians, after an autopsy, said he apparently suffered a heart attack while swimming.

Witnesses reported that Upright was swimming from a small boat near shore. He had dived several times and was paddling a few feet away when he suddenly called for help and disappeared. It was nearly an hour before his body was recovered.

Upright came here from New York State and had been attached to the medical base for several months.

Warsaw Fliers Winging Way To Good Again

Take-Off From Paris After Daring Flight From Farm Pasture.

Le Bourget, France, July 1 (AP). The Adamowicz brothers took off from here at 12:21 p. m. today (6:21 a. m., E. S. T.), resuming their New York-to-Warsaw airplane flight interrupted yesterday when fuel shortage and fog forced them down near Flers, France.

The brothers, Benjamin and Joseph, flew here from Flers this morning, remaining at Le Bourget only two hours while minor repairs were made.

They said they would avoid Berlin, flying directly to Warsaw, where they expect to remain for four days. The plane may be left in a museum there.

Joseph Adamowicz said he and his brother were "pretty much disappointed" and intend to try again next year to fly from New York to Warsaw.

Make Daredevil Takeoff.

The Adamowiczs madea daredevil takeoff from the tall grass of the cow pasture where they landed yesterday. The tiny monoplane cleared a clump of trees by a few inches as it headed for Le Bourget.

They had had nine hours sleep in a seventeenth century farmhouse and said the admiration of the peasants had softened their disappointment over failing to complete the trip.

"We had a bad time before we came down on this field," Benjamin Adamowicz said before he clambered into the cabin. "Bad weather with snow flurries and rain hit us shortly after we left Harbor Grace.

"Ice soon coated the wings and things looked bad until we finally climbed to 16,000 feet. That carried us out of the first storm and we had good weather the rest of the trip over the ocean until about 250 miles off land on this side, which we approached Saturday morning soon after midnight. Again we ran into snow and rain followed by fog.

"By 7 a. m. we had only five gallons of gasoline left in the tanks. There must have been a leak in the carburetor.

"We had to do something and the fog was so thick we could not tell whether we were over land or sea. We had been flying blindly in circles for three hours trying to find Ireland.

"According to our calculations now we seemed to have been circling over the coast line of Brittany most of that time. We were hopelessly lost and didn't even know what country we were over when finally through a rift in the fog we saw land just 50 feet below us.

Peasants Thunderstruck.

As the fliers came down peasants mowing hay in nearby fields saw them throw cans of oil out of the plane to lighten the shock of landing the cans tore strips of fuselage off as they hurtled out.

Peasants ran up and eagerly questioned the pair as they climbed out uninjured.

"We thought it might be Scotland until the farmers began talking, then figured it was France," Benjamin resumed.

"We wanted to try and start again immediately for Warsaw if we could obtain enough gasoline, and instantly commenced to repair the plane. We later saw that it would necessitate a far longer runway and that the field was too rough for a take-off with a heavy load of gas."

It was the middle of the afternoon before the excited peasants thought of notifying the authorities, four miles away.

The whole countryside was on hand, however, for the departure. The spectators gaped while the pair drank breakfast coffee in a yard with a farmer and his wife, who gave the aviators accommodations for the night.

The fliers received a bunch of flowers from a local dignitary and there was the customary cheek kissing all around on their departure.

Chester Long, One-Time U. S. Senator, Dead

Death came suddenly to the 74-year-old Republican hard-money wart, following a blood transfusion performed in treatment of a kidney ailment last week. It occurred within a week of the passing of another widely known legislator and his one-time law associate, former Senator Charles Thomas, of Colorado.

Senator Long, who had been practicing law in the Capital since 1929 as senior member of the firm of Long, Chamberlain & Nyte, now Long, St. Lewis & Nyte, had been suffering from kidney trouble for nearly five months.

Leads Bar Activities.

For years and almost to the moment of his death he was one of the leading spirits of the American Bar Association. He was its president in 1925 and 1926, had served on the executive committee, and at his death was a member of the board of editors.

Senator Long's political career began with his election to the Kansas Legislature in 1889. There he served until 1893. Two years later he was elected to the Fifty-fourth Congress to represent the Seventh Kansas District in the House on a sound money platform.

Then began a series of nip-and-tuck battles for the House seat with Kansas' famed "Sockless" Jerry Simpson, Bryan silverite. The tide of contest alternately favored one candidate and the other. Long lost to Simpson in the race for the Fifty-fifth Congress. He was returned to the Fifty-fifth and again to the Fifty-sixth.

Born in Pennsylvania.

A native of Perry County, Pa., his father, Abraham G. Long, moved the family into Kansas when the former Senator was 5 years old.

Mrs. Long, well known in Congressional social circles, died in 1919. Surviving him are three daughters, Mrs. Harry F. Gee, jr., of Atlanta, Ga., and Mrs. W. E. Stanley and Mrs. Roger S. Hurd, both of Wichita, Kans.

The body will be setn to Wichita probably today for services there.

Reports tonight from the country estate of President von Hindenburg, at Neudeck, stated that no immediate crisis is feared and indicated that the remarkable vitality of the veteran field marshal once more is baffling his physicians.

The state secretary in the president's office, Dr. Otto Meissner, returned to Berlin with a statement that at present Von Hindenburg's condition appears satisfactory.

"Political Will."

When reports of the calling together of physicians reached Berlin, the rumor was quickly revived that Von Hindenburg had written a "political will" naming the conservative Von Papen as his successor and enjoining the army, always faithful to the President, to help him, if necessary.

While Von Papen was at home under government orders, it was revealed that his chief of vice chancellory staff, Hubert von Bose, had killed himself yesterday.

It was revealed officially that Capt. Ernest Roehm, cabinet minister without portfolio and chief of the Storm Troopers, was summarily executed early yesterday when Hitler raided his home in Munich.

A communique stated that he had been given the opportunity to "take the consequences" of his traitorous acts, but when he did not do so was shot.

Asked Hitler to Shoot.

One foreign office spokesman said that Roehm "pleaded with Hitler that he himself shoot him, but the chancellor saw no reason why he should honor a traitor by killing him."

Two other names were tentatively added to the list of those in high places who lost their lives when it was reported that Herr von Tschirsky, personal adjutant of von Papen, had killed himself and that Gregor Strasser, once a leading Naxi organizer, had been shot.

Von Papen's exact position was not clear, but it was considered significant that while he—the theoretical second in command in the Reich—was ordered to remain in his house, Hitler held a long conference with Dr. Joseph Goebbels, propaganda minister, and Hermann Wilhelm Goering, premier of Prussia.

Goering's position appeared to be closer to Hitler than ever, since his personal assistance yesterday in cleaning up the mutineers among the Storm Troops.

In the name of his chief, he ordered that the Storm Troopers not assemble again except on orders from the chancellor himself, even in civilian clothes.

The Storm Troop organization already had been ordered on a vacation, starting today. The belief persisted that few, if any, would be called back to duty.

Peaceful Appearance.

Berlin and other parts of Germany were given a peaceful appearance today as the Reichswehr (regular army) was released from emergency orders issued yesterday and the number of policemen on duty was reduced.

Gen. Werner von Blomberg, minister of defense, said that the army would return to its normal duties. In a gesture of loyalty to the chancellor a detachment of the Reichswehr marched in review before him at the chancellory today.

A few citizens of Berlin went to see the review and cheered as the goose-stepping Reichswehr passed Hitler, standing a stiff salute.

Most people, however, spent the day wondering what it was all about and gathering in the coffee houses to whisper among themselves after making sure no government agents were present.

People Ask Questions.

The citizens asked themselves many questions in their efforts to interpret summary execution of men hitherto held up as outstanding exponents of the national socialistic principle that "the commonweal comes before private gain."

Such questions as these were asked:

How could these deposed storm troop leaders be executed without trial?

What is behind Hitler's sudden decision to clean up the party?

Did President von Hindenburg know what was going on?

Whom did Goering mean when he said he went even beyond Hitler's instructions and struck at reactionaries, as well as rebelling Storm Troopers?

Did he mean the monarchists? The Hohenzollern family?

The first question was answered by government spokesmen, who explained unhesitatingly that the Storm Troopers since last July have been under the same rules and regulations as the regular army.

In case of a mutiny, it was explained, any officer has a right to kill mutineers.

In view of the fact that Roehm, Ernst Heines and others had armed their followers, Hitler was said to regard the mutiny as a revolution to disrupt the government.

Troops Marching.

Hitler's justification for summarily acting was that in Munich and Brunswick the Storm Troopers already had begun to march, presumably to seize the government, and the situation was sufficient in both cases to summon the Reichswehr and the Special Schutz Staffel organization to oppose them.

As to the monarchists, while Gen. Kurt von Schleicher, former chancellor, was one of those killed "resisting arrest," no action was taken against any members of the Hohenzollern family.

The whole family appeared to have agreed, apparently on orders from the former Kaiser at Doorn, to say nothing whatever which could be interpreted as taking sides.

Some apprehension was felt over the fate of Prince August Wilhelm, himself a Nazi group leader and a close friend of the executed Karl Ernst, but he sent word tonight from his villa that he would be back in Berlin later. A reassuring message was said to have been sent to him by the chancellor.

Considering the condition of President von Hindenburg, it was assumed that he knew nothing in advance of the intention of Hitler to crush the mutineers.

Few Dead Unnamed.

While only eight names of men high in the Storm Troopers have been listed as having been executed, there were rumors that many others had been shot. These were denied by the propaganda ministry, which said, however, that "some few additional names are yet to be published."

Whatever may have been the significance of the Reichswehr's activities yesterday, army officers were emphatic today in saying that they have no intention to interfere, at least until after Hitler has had a chance to set the German house in order.

The significance of the order to Storm Troopers not to meet was variously interpreted. Some sources saw in the move an effort to sell the other European nations on the idea that Germany needs a bigger army and deserves one because the "quasi-military" groups are being abandoned.

Goering intimated that when the Storm Troopers are called back to duty the newcomers will be excluded, and only the faithful veterans of the pre-third Reich days will return to uniform.

With regard to the statement that Roehm and Gen. Von Schleicher had communications with a "foreign power," the general opinion was that the reference was to France.

These men, according to this interpretation, feared that unless some agreement could be made with France, Germany might find itself overrun by a "preventive war."

Position of Army.

In event of the death of President von Hindenburg, an eventuality dreaded by every decent-minded German, the army may find itself in an entirely new situation.

To put it mildly, the army would come to a grave conflict of conscience if it were simultaneously to reecive two orders, one from Von Papen as "heir" to Von Hindenburg, and the other from Hitler as chancellor.

Hitler's foreign political force during the next week probably will have much to do with the army's position in event of such an emergency. The army would frown upon anything that might precipitate a conflict with a foreign power.

One phrase which Goering and more lately Goebbels have harped upon—the fight against reactionaries — has never been defined clearly. Apparently both men consider anybody outside Nazi ranks who is against them a reactionary.

Lengthy debates within the cabinet are certain to take place within the next few days in an effort to bring the various groups into harmony.

Hitler Order Leaders Of Storm Troops Seized

Berlin, July 1 (U.P.).—Chancellor Adolf Hitler, bowing bold opposition ruthlessly to his will, followed Saturday's executions by an order tonight of arrest of all members of the general staff in Berlin and Brandenburg of the superior branch of the Nazi Storm Troops.

"All members of the general staff in Berlin and Brandenburg of the superior branch of the Storm Troops are under arrest, pending an investigation of their knowledge of the rebellious leaders. Officers of inferior rank are hereby ordered to remain in their homes and await orders."

"Those participating in meetings discussing the shooting of brown shirts will be severely punished," the decree added.

Reports circulated yesterday that Capt. Ernst Roehm had committed suicide were revealed as wholly false. Roehm was held overnight at Stadelheim prison, Munich, after being offered a pistol with which to shoot himself. He refused, and word was awaited from Hitler on whether he should be executed. He was shot.

His death brought the total shot to 12, including Gen. and Mrs. Kurt von Schleicher. The others were:

Edmond Heines, Storm Troop leader in Munich.

Wilhelm Schmid, group leader of Munich.

Heinrich Klausner, former Prussian minister of interior and a hign Catholic leader.

Ernest was shot by police at Bremen "while trying to escape," it was declared, and not executed, as first reported.

Already unconfirmed reports of uprisings were heard from Brunswick, where a group of the SA (superior branch of the Nazi Storm Troops) resisted official measures calling for their dismissal for one month.

Final Darrow Barrage Backs Small Trader

3. Although these evil conditions have been demonstrated and are known to exist, nothing has been done to remove or even restrain them. On the contrary, "there seems to be a sinister purpose to entrench them, still more securely in the processes of the act, to make still more unquestioned the monopolistic sway of the great interest."

4. Monopolistic business combinations have had the antitrust laws suspended, industry put into their unlimited mastery and the means provided to silence, suppress, eliminate or ignore their complaining small competitors.

5. The present method of setting up code authorities is sadly defective and the cost of administration heavily burdensome to the smaller interests of the industry, who should be guaranteed a voice in the selection of the code authority.

6. The basing point system of price making is a "potent instrument to protect and further monopolistic practices and to increase the oppression of small enterprises. It should be eliminated from all industry."

Price Fixing "An Error."

7. While "stop loss" provisions in the codes are desirable and in harmony with the purposes of NRA, the attempt to fix prices was an error and should be abandoned as soon as possible.

8. Too many codes were attempted; most were worse than superfluous, they were inexcusable interferences with business enterprises.

9. The codes were too drastic and attempted too much.

"To deliver industry into the hands of its greatest and most ruthless units when the protection of the antitrust laws has been withdrawn," the report concludes, "was a grave error. It may safely be said that not in many years have monopolistic tendencies in industry been so forwarded and strengthened as they have been through the perversion of an act excellently intended to restore prosperity and promote the general welfare.

"These are the facts, and we believe that the sooner they are recognized frankly and dealt with bravely the better for the Nation and its people."

U. S. Boycott Scored.

As an additional feature, the board dealt with "the Governmental boycott." It was this phase of the report which, in the course of preparation, led to rumors that the Darrow board would charge NRA with "betraying" small enterprises.

"There is one other form of oppression of small enterprises," the report's added chapter said, "which, while inadvertent but often grievous, the board feels it can not overlook.

"By an executive order of March 14, 1933, every bidder for a Government contract must present with his bids a certificate of compliance with each code to which he is subject. However justifiable this provision may have seemed as a means to enforce NRA, its application has had most unfortunate consequences.

"Many small establishments honestly purpose to observe the code so far as possible, but find some of its provisions incompatible with continued business existence. The codes were most often made by large business units, animated by no higher purpose than their own advantage and the suppression of small competitors.

Trade Secrets Imperiled.

"We have been confronted with the cases of small enterprises that adhere strictly to the code requirements concerning hours of labor, wages and conditions of employment, but can not without ceasing to exist comply with the requirements that mean the surrender of their vital business secrets or the end of every chance to meet the stronger position and better resources of more powerful rivals. Yet such establishments are by this form of Government boycott excluded from every opportunity to do Governmental work."

The board found instances where "this practice has resulted in heavy losses to the Government, as well as a shrinkage of production and of employment."

"Without criticizing the motives that prompted these provisions," the report continued, "we think they should be radically amended, to save men that strive to be law-observing from becoming business outcasts or perforce evaders of the National enactment."

This third report of the Darrow Board covered codes for the following industries. Shipbuilding and ship repair, feldspar, motion picture, graphic arts, floor and wall clay tile, hosiery, steel and iron, saw and steel products, structural clay products, retail lumber, wholesale confectioners and builders supplies.

Film Industry Cited.

"In virtually all the codes we have examined, one condition has been persistent, undeniable and apparent to any impartial observation," the board stated. "It is this, that the code has offered an opportunity for the more powerful and more profitable interests to seize control of an industry or to augment and extend a control already obtained."

Of the motion picture industry, the board said:

"In its first report, this board described the lawless and outrageous excesses of the monopoly in this industry and demanded that something be done to protect the small enterprises, exposed to the insatiable rapacity of the powerful.

"Despite the uncontrovertible nature of the evidence upon which this finding was based, nothing has been done to better such conditions as caused the Constitutional and traditional guarantees of liberty to seem a mere bitter jest."

At another time, the report said, the existing situation "would startle and appall the average American."

The board recommended the abrupt dismissal of the present code authority "and the choice of another that can conceive something of the rights of the public and has some other impulse than the extraction of fat profits."

Graphic Arts Head Flayed.

Of the graphic arts industry, the report says:

"Monopolistic practices are rank and intolerable in this industry, and the oppression of the small enterprise is carried out with a high hand. The code authority in this industry should be dismissed and a new authority created that will have a glimpse of a purpose above the balance sheet of its own establishment."

Turning to the steel industry, the report said:

"In its first report, discussing the oppressions of the unjust steel code, this board pointed out the iniquity that is called the 'basing point' system of price-fixing, by which millions of dollars are annually collected from the public under the pretense of freight rate that are purely fictitious.

"It also set forth the unrighteous arrangements by which the great steel companies controlled the Steel Institute and their Sieel Institute had become the code authority, thus delivering the entire steel industry into the power of a few overshadowing and grasping companies."

United States Findings Ignored.

The board expressed sympathy with the Executive order of May 31, proposing elimination of artificial transportation charges in price quotations, declaring "the basing point fraud is in violation of an order from a high Government body and likewise in violation of the express undertaking of the steel trust."

The Federal Trade Commission's order of 1924 that the steel interests desist from the "basing point" practice was "impudentiy" flouted by the industry, the report said, "and for 10 years the American public has been obliged to pay the huge tribute thus levied in defiance of the order of a branch of their Government."

"If the findings of the Federal Trade Commission can be thus set aside," the report continued, "and if monopoly can thus proceed at its own wild will and ride roughshod where it pleases, there seems to be no possible excuse for retaining the commission and it might as well be disbanded.

Changes Held Minor.

So far as complaints of small enterprises and the license of monopoly are concerned, the revised code shows no substantial improvement over the old document.

"The slight changes diminish in no way the practice of brigandage, against which so much resentment has been shown. And when we come to learn all that is invovled in these slight modifications, what we find is not a purpose to conform to public opinion, but such a deliberate gesture of contempt for it as may well startle and tutor the Nation.

"Of this gesture of cool insolence, the significance can hardly be overlooked. We have had before in the history of corporations in America instances of an overweening assumption of autocratic power, but not many marked by an equal appearance of purposed contempt.

"Nothing seems lacking except that the order of the steel trust, establishing unwarranted price increases, should end with the historic question:

"'What are you going to do about it?'"

Mexican Soldiers Capture Suspect

Eagle Pass, Tex., July 1 (AP).—Mexican army forces numbering more than 1,000 men, who conducted a search throughout northern Mexico last night, captured Rafael Dominguez, alleged slayer of L. C. Henry, American customs inspector at Del Rio, Tex.

Henry died June 20 of three bullet wounds in the abdomen, received in a shooting near his home June 19.

Dominguez was captured on a ranch near Piedras Negras, across the Rio Grande from Eagle Pass. Henry, before dying, named Dominguez as his assailant. He said Dominguez was employed by other parties as the result of an old feud.

Austro-German Troops Guard Border, Roads

European Editors Take Varied Views of Hitler Action.

It was understood that the Austro-German border is being closely watched from both sides.

The German government, it was asserted, wishes to prevent fugitives escaping into Austria and to prevent the entry of radical elements. Despite these measures, it was reported that a number of fugitives succeeded in entering Austria.

More Trouble Seen.

Vienna, July 1 (AP).—With few exceptions, Austrian newspapers today interpreted Germany's bloody week-end as a prelude to a new period of turmoil.

Only one—the official Weiner Zeitung—discussed the probable effect on Austria of the ruthless suppression of rebellious subordinates.

"After the deadly outcome of this radical revolt, Austria naturally looks for a decided relaxation of the situation here," said this newspaper. "Now more than ever before, national socialism will be preoccupied with its own troubles and will have to abandon its offensive in foreign lands out of the sheer motive of self-preservation."

The same newspaper interpreted Chancellor Hitler's present position as extremely precarious, and the Tageblatt similarly suggested that there is more turmoil ahead.

Under a headline, "End of National Socialism," the Wiener Journal said that "National Socialism, brown bolshevism and the third Reich are being liquidated and none other than Hitler himself is leading the mobilization."

The semiofficial Reichspost suggested that Hitler's cleanup must include the party program and methods, "otherwise this day's developments will remain only a symptom of degeneration."

Reichswehr Victory.

Paris, July 1 (AP).—A victory for the Reichswehr and the conservative junkers was seen as the chief outcome of Chancellor Adolf iHtler's drastic "housecleaning" by official circles here today.

These circles feel that the most vital element in the German crisis is the breakdown of the unity of the Hitler movement which now more than ever centers on his ability to keep violently differing parties from breaking out into civil war.

The press declared that the new eventsopen the way for a return of the Hohenzollerns.

"The crown prince must be rejoicing, as he always believed his hour would come, and perhaps he is right," the newspaper l'Intransigeant declared. It added that, with the Reichswehr in the saddle, France must more than ever be on guard, as the army represents a more efficient military machine than the Brown Shirts.

Russian View.

Moscow, July 1 (AP).—The Soviet press today interpreted the developments in Germany as an indication of the desperation of the ruling class, which, hard pressed by the masses, is exterminating its opponents as the only means to prevent a proletarian revolution.

The killing of the Storm Troopers, says an article in the Communist newspaper Pravda, indicates that Hitler, in his alarm, "probably forgot Von Papen's warning of danger from below."

"Heads have fallen, but the Fascist dictatorship enters into a new period, with incomparably worse prospects for the future," the article says. "The fate of the ruling class in Germany is in the balance."

Control Group Is Satisfactory To Wall Street

Commission Expected to Proceed Slowly in Making Changes.

New York, July 1 (U.P.).—"As good as could be expected."

That appeared tonight to be Wall street's opinion of the commission appointed last night by President Roosevelt to regulate the Stock Exchange.

After studying the records of the three Democrats and two Republicans on the commission, the street tonight appeared of this opinion:

John P. Kennedy, New York, Democrat, chairman:

Generally highly considered. He knows the market, has common sense, will not "rock the boat."

Pecora Is Respected.

James M. Landis, Massachusetts, Democrat:

Has had the reputation of being something of a radical with "brain-trust" leanings but is brilliant and stable and ought to prove a helpful counselor to traders who want the exchange placed in a position to demand public confidence.

Ferdinand Pecora, New York, Democrat:

The Street has grown to respect him because of the ability he showed in acting as Government counsel during the recent stock market investigation in Washington.

George C. Mathews, Wisconsin, Republican:

Formerly on the Federal Trade Commission; an expert on the securities act of 1933 covering flotation of new securities; will harmonize the provisions of this act with that of the new 1934 act.

Robert E. Healy, Vermont, Repuolican:

An expert on corporation practice; dependable.

It was emphasized that only a part of the new securities exchange act goes into effect immediately; that the commission can proceed slowing and give Wall street time to adjust itself to the New Deal.

Traders Encouraged.

With the control commission ready to go to work traders thought higher prices might be expected were it not for three things:

1. The railway pension act signed yesterday by President Roosevelt will hurt some of the carriers and weaken railway securities;

2. The Frazier-Lemke farm mortgage act also signed yesterday by Mr. Roosevelt will discourage general securities activity;

3. July-August usually is a period of little market activity.

Wednesday is the Fourth of July holiday. According to normal procedure—even with clear-cut favorable factors—this should mean dull markets on Monday and Tuesday. But as has been repeatedly observed in Wall street in the last year, normal procedure has been junked in the current stock market.

Business factors included:

Steel production dropped 13 points to 46 per cent of capacity, and further sharp reductions are expected. A number of workers were laid off in Buffalo through decreased operations. Lower prices were instituted by some companies in an effort to attract buying.

Retail trade is undergoing a limited summer slump.

The German situation and the Anglo-German trade difficulties present a problem which concerns the entire financial community.

Youngstown Steel operations Monday will be at 20 per cent of capacity—a drop of 33 points since last Monday—with many mills shut down entirely for the week.

"Street" Gossip Summarized.

The "Street" talked about:

Reports that Glen Alden Coal will declare a 50-cent dividend in July . . . buying of Virginia Carolina Chemical leading to reports that the company may buy up the 7 per cent stock outstanding.

In some speculative quarters of Poor & Co. . . . American Locomotive's announcement of 42 orders since first of year . . . some interest in Underwood-Elliott-Fisher . . . Royal Typewriter expected to show best sales for first six months of any six-month period in its history . . indications in some circles that the peak of tin prices has been reached . . . continued propaganda for establishment of a pepper futures market here with reports the London "syndicate" has a strangle hold on the present supply . . . increased interest in the corn market, with some public buying, as result of the high temperatures in the Middle West.

Doomed Mother Sees Lawyer in Life Fight

Ossining, N. Y., July 1 (AP).—Mrs. Anna Antonio, 28, the doomed mother of three children who twice has been reprieved from the electric chair, today assisted her attorney, Daniel Prior, in his fight for her life, conferring at length with him in the Sing Sing death house.

Prior will seek a new trial for Mrs. Antonio tomorrow in Albany. She was convicted with two men for slaying her husband.

4 Billions Deficit Announced by U.S.

President Roosevelt in January, when he made allowance for all the possible contingencies of the recovery effort.

Then he predicted receipts of $3,259,938,756 (they proved to be $3,115,554,049.53); expenditures of $9,403,006,967 (actually $7,105,050,084.95); a deficit of $7,309,068,211 (actually $3,989,496,035.42), and a public debt at the end of the year of $29,847,000,000 (actually $27,053,141,414.48).

Officials found encouragement in an increase of $1,035,857,347.67 in receipts, made up largely of a jump in miscellaneous internal revenue collections from $858,217,511.61 in the fiscal year 1933 to $1,469,593,550.29 in the year just closed.

Income tax receipts also rose, increasing from $746,206,444.95 to $817,961,481.18, and customs collections jumped from $250,750,251.27 to $313,434,302.19. The total revenues also included $353,048,796.83 from the processing tax on farm products, by comparison with $72,143,916.19 paid out through the Agricultural Adjustment Administration.

D. C. Regiment Marches Off to Charlottesville

Anti-Aircraft Unit Will Hold Maneuvers in Shenandoah.

Three hundred strong, the 260th Coast Artillery, anti-aircraft regiment of the District National Guard, departed yesterday for two weeks of maneuvers in the Shenandoah Valley, and last night was in bivouac in a quarry near Centerville, Va., on the Lee highway. Under command of Maj. Walter W. Burns, the regiment will proceed today to Culpeper and thence to Charlottesville, where it will participate in the Fourth of July celebration.

Thursday morning the troops are scheduled to defend a mountain pass against the Twenty-ninth Division at Afton, later proceeding through Harrisonburg, Elizabeth Furnace, Winchester and Charles Town, W. Va. They will return to Washington through Frederick and Gaithersburg, Md.

Maj. Burns and Lieuts. A. B. Graves and Carl Santilli arranged the itinerary, and Lieut. Graves has arranged a series of officers' and noncommissioned officers' schools each day, with a regimental field inspection next Saturday.

The Headquarters detachment is commanded by William J. Heale; Battery A by Capt. Clifton Royston, Battery E by Lieut. Max G. D. Prentice, the Medical detachment by Maj. S. M. Grayson, Battery B by Capt. Rex P. Mulligan and Battery C by Capt. Perry O. Huff.

The regiment is traveling by truck and will return to Washington on July 15.

Rum Row Shooting Victim Is Near Death

Howard Parker, 33, colored, of Boyds, Md., was near death in the Montgomery County Hospital last night, his chest torn by the charge of a shotgun fired, police said, during a quarrel over liquor on the Germantown pike near Germantown yesterday afternoon.

Police released Harry Bailey, jr., also colored, who said he fired in self-defense.

Law Restores 4 Million Rail Pay Monthly

Workers are Jubilant Over Approval of Legislation.

Cleveland, Ohio, July 1 (AP).—More than a million railroaders were jubilant today over a $4,000,000 monthly increase in their pay envelopes and executive approval of legislation which will retire at least 100,000 on pensions this year.

The wage increase, affecting 1,030,000 men, constitutes a two and one-half per cent salary restoration provided in an agreement reached between labor and management April 26.

On January 1, the railroaders will receive another 2½ per cent, and on April 1, 1935 the remaining 5 per cent of the iriginal 10 per cent pay cut of two years ago wil be restored.

Pension System.

In addition, the last step in making a Nation-wide pension insurance system effective was taken yesterday when President Roosevelt signed legislation enacted by Congress at the recent session.

"The pension act is the finest piece of railroad legislation since the sight-hour day was achieved in 116," said Alexander F. Whitney, of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, who retired yesterday as chairman of the Railway Labor Executives Association.

"Railroad men feel that they have obtained two great concessions in the wage restoration and the pension legislation. The first increases our purchasing power by $4,000,000 a month. O nthe basis of May payrolls, the increases will mean an increase of $16,000,000 monthly by next April.

"The pension law, which becomes effective in 90 days, will permit retirement of 100,000 men this year alone. Not only will this take care of the men who have broken down in railroad service, but it will help the unemployment problem by elevating the young man who is looking for the opportunity to work.

"The brotherhoods have worked earnestly for four years to get this legislation. Congress and the President can not be commended too highly for coming to the front for the workers at this time."

Creation of Fund.

The pensions legislation provides for deduction of 2 per cent from workers' salaries and 4 per cent from carriers' pay rolls to set up a fund which is expected to consist of at least $90,000,000 a year.

This fund will be administered by a three-man commission appointed by the President. One commissioner will be selected from railroad labor, one from management and the third will represent the public.

Men will be eligible for retirement on reaching 65, completion of 30 years' service with a carrier, or for disability. The amount of their pension will depend upon their previous earnings, but is not to exceed $120 a month or more than two-thirds of their average salary.

New Liner Service To Britain Planned

New York, July 1 (AP).—A new fortnightly passenger and cargo service between New York and the British Isles will be inaugurated on July 21 by the United States Lines as part of its program of expansion under the American flag, it was announced today at the New York office of the line.

The service will be maintained by the steamers American Shipper and American Importer. Foreign ports of call for passengers will be Cobh and Liverpool.

Dillinger's Aids Attack Doctor

wires of his office telephone had been cut.

He notified Sheriff Harley Person at Warsaw, who, with South Bend detectives, immediately began a search for the pair.

Dr. Laird also had suffered a cut over his lift eye, but could not remember how that injury was received.

Laird said later he was quite certain that neither of his callers was Dillinger, but added that he would not recognize the likenesses of any other members of Dillinger's crew.

"Neither Was Dillinger."

"The larger fellow (possibly Van Meter) was about 5 feet 9 or 10, sandy-haired and of light complexion," said the doctor. "He weighed about 185. The other, whose wound I dressed, was nearly of the same height, but of slighter build and darker complexion. He weighed around 140. Both appeared to be 25 or 30 years old.

"I am sure that neither was Dillinger, for I believe I would recognize Dillinger from his pictures. Whether the other might have been George "Baby Face" Nelson, Charles "Pretty Boy" Floyd or others reported with Dillinger, I could not say, as I am not familiar enough with their appearance."

No one could be found who had seen the pair leave North Webster, but officers were investigating reports that two other men had waited for the pair in an automobile.

On Line of Flight.

Authorities pointed out that North Webster would have been on the gang's direct line of flight to hideouts in Ohio.

Five robbers, led by Dillinger, officers now are confident, took $28,439 from the Merchants National Bank of South Bend Saturday in the familiar Dillinger style. The technique—a sudden sortie just about closing time, the stationing of the lookouts, the reckless spray of bullets which took the life of Policeman Howard Wagner and the well-covered getaway were all typical of Dillinger's execution.

Witnesses identified the leader as Dillinger and asserted that Nelson and John Hamilton, notorious as Dillinger henchmen, were with him.

and $2 per 1,000 for all sawed since May 1, he said.

Dodd pointed out that relief money was unknown in Nellys Ford until Small's sawmill closed and since then, he added, "There has been plenty of demand for relief money."

"I never tried to make much money out of the mill," Small commented, "but on the other hand, tried to help my neighbors and here I am almost broke and with little chance of reopening the mill."

Small explained, however, that he would not mind increasing the wages and paying the tax to the Government if he could sell the lumber after it was sawed.

When the sawmill was operated on a normal basis, the pay roll to all employes ran as high as $200 a week.

Small said he was keeping wolf away from the family door by cutting chestnut and oak bark for tanning purposes. The market for this bark will, however, be closed October 1 until next spring.

Hitler Clean-up Fails to Check Beer Drinking

Uneasy Thousands Take to Resorts; Refuse to Talk Events.

Berlin, July 1.—Berlin drank its Sunday beer today in the tensest atmosphere since the Nazi government came into power in January, 1933.

Thousands of uneasy, coatless and hatless Germans, with only an inkling of the tragic events which took place behind the censorship screen, milled through historic Wilhelmstrasse under sharp eyes of police patrols.

The strollers paused ever and anon before Chancellor Hitler's residence, hoping to get a glimpse of the one man in the Reich who knows what is going on.

Just around the corner, Vice Chancellor Franz Von Papen watched the procession at Hitler's prisoner, under orders not to leave home without permission.

Parade Before Hitler.

Reichswehr detachments marched with fife and drum in an obvious effort to demonstrate to the people that they still have an army, and one detachment paraded before Hitler.

When he came out to salute the soldiers, the crowd had its only view of the leader.

The troop details which yesterday were on outskirts of the city ready to rush in and take any action necessary were nowhere in evidence.

The feeling of uncertainty over what tomorrow will bring failed to interfere, however, with the typical German Sunday. The surrounding lake country beckoned, and overmeated Berlin was deserted by thousands of holiday seekers who jammed railroad stations.

Events Unknown.

Many of these people apparently knew nothing of the tragic events involved in the Nazi "house-cleaning."

Those who had read the official communiques in the newspapers preferred not to discuss them until they had made sure that there were no government agents in the restaurant or railroad station where they happened to be.

Some remarked that they did not have to worry as long as they placed their faith in Hitler, "a man who knows what he wants."

"They wanted to set up a monarchy, so what else could he have done?" was the reply of one excursionist when asked his view of the important developments.

No one semed to give thought to the possibility that Saturday's eruption may mark the first of a series of startling events.

The President will be in constant communication with the White House throughout his trip by wireless and air mail but he intends to attend only to the most urgent official business. Primarily he wants a vacation.

The President will stop early today in Hampton Roads where last-minute papers will be put off the cruiser Houston and the latest papers from the Capital placed on board.

Names Aviation Group.

Then he will head out to the open sea with the first stop-off the Island of Haiti next Thursday. He will not leave the ship there but on the following day he will land in Puerto Rico and travel from the western end of the island to San Juan to spend the night.

Next Saturday and Sunday he will visit the Virgin Islands and then go to Carthagena, Colombia, for a day's visit.

From there the President will go through the Panama Canal to Hawaii, where he will stay for five days. Returning to the Pacific Coast he will land probably at Portland, Oreg.

2 Women and Man Feared Lost at Sea On Adventure Trip

Los Angeles, July 1 (AP).—Fear for the lives of three Californians who began a two-year adventure cruise from San Diego February 10, and have not been heard from since, was expressed today by Miss Bette Comstock, daughter of one of the adventurers.

Miss Comstock said her stepfather, William Titlow, and her mother sailed in a 35-foot schooner, in company with a woman she does not know.

"My mother's last words to me contained the promise she would cable me from Honolulu in about two months," said Miss Comstock. "I have written letters addressed to general delivery, Honolulu, and all have been returned."

Titlow, an experienced navigator, said he did not intend to follow regular steamer lanes.

Honolulu, July 1 (AP).—The 35-foot schooner La Camarita, which sailed for Honolulu from San Diego, has not been reported here.

Morrison to Deliver Harrisonburg Address

Harrisonburg, Va., July 1 (Spl.). Former Mayor John W. Morrison will make the Fourth of July address at a local theater Wednesday morning.

Children of the city and county will march in a parade, carrying American flags, and assemble at the theater. The chamber of commerce, American Legion and Veterans of Foreign Wars are participating in the local observance of Independence Day. The Harrisonburg Boys Band will lead the procession.

Funds Allocated For Relief Work

Waynesboro, Pa., July 1 (Spl.).—With allocation of $25,000 to Franklin County for relief work projects in July, work will be resumed tomorrow, county headquarters here announced today.

Floyd Chalfont, county administrator, received a telegram yesterday from Eric H. Biddle, State administrator, following a Federal grant of $11,000,000 for Pennsylvania, stating that projects can be continued.

During the past week, 470 men were employed on works division projects. A total of $6,009.19 in wages was paid.

Double Wedding's Last Half Comes Off on Schedule

Richmond, July 1 (AP).—The other half of a double wedding that didn't come off was held in St. Peter's Church here yesterday when Irma Lee Reid became Mrs. John Herbert Rose. Her sister, Charlott, 18, who was to have married a Richmond man at the same time, did not attend. She is in Atlantic City, N. J., the bride of Don Carlos, orchestra leader.

Charlotte and her romantically named spouse were married Friday after the girl suddenly left Richmond. For several days she was missing. Police in Washington and nearby cities were asked to watch for her. Then her mother, Mrs. William L. Blassenahm, located Charlotte, who said she was working at the resort and didn't intend to return to Richmond. Later came word she and the orchestra leader were married.

Two Are Killed, Many Injured By Automobiles

Woman Pedestrian Dies After Being Hit; Crash Fatal to Man.

Two dead and several persons injured represented yesterday's traffic toll.

Mrs. Mary Brennah, 59, of 1224 B street southeast, died in Casualty Hospital several hours after she was knocked down by an automobile at Eleventh and B streets southeast.

Robert L. Swann, 24, of Issue, Md., injured Saturday when his auto hit a fallen telephone pole near Tompkinsville, Md., died in Providence Hospital.

Police said that Mrs. Brennah was crossing Eleventh street at the crosswalk when struck by the auto of Irving C. Eshleman, 34, of the 600 block of E street northeast. She was dragged several feet before Eshleman could stop, witnesses reported. The woman suffered a fractured leg, mangled arm, fractured skull and internal injuries. Eshleman was charged with reckless driving.

Swann was brought to Washington by a motorist and treated for a fractured skull. Police said his auto hit a telephone pole, felled by Saturday's heavy windstorm.

Miss Frances Fernald, 40, of 1514 Columbia road northwest, was reported in a critical condition at Emergency Hospital. She was struck by a Capital Transit street car yesterday near Sixteenth and H streets northwest. Physicians said she received a possible fractured skull, body bruises and internal injuries.

William E. Matthews, of the 200 block of Twelfth street northeast, motorman, was not held.

Two young women were slightly injured in a crash near Marlboro, Md. Miss Janey Sessons, 21, of the Park Lane Apartments, and Miss Jeanette Scanlon, 23, of 236 Thirteenth street northeast, were brought to Gallinger Hospital by a motorist.

Miss Sessons received lacerations to the head and a bruised right shoulder. Miss Scanlon suffered a fractured right arm and lacerations. Samuel Levine, of the 2800 block of Thirty-third street southeast, driver of the machine, escaped hurts. The car ran from the highway and struck a fence, police reported.

New Norfolk Heat Mark Set in June

Police Seek Relatives of Sun's Latest Victim.

Norfolk, Va., July 1 (Spl.).—June was the hottest month the Weather Bureau has ever recorded for Norfolk.

A middle-aged white man, identified through letters in his pocket as Christopher Curtis, collapsed from sunstroke on the street yesterday and died as he was being taken to St. Vincent's Hospital.

Identification had not been made last night. The man was 6 feet tall, with gray hair, and was wearing a white shirt, blue trousers, tan shoes and a leather belt with a single initial "C" on the silver buckle. The man had two burn scars, one under the right side of his jaw, the other running from elbow to shoulder on his right arm.

Sergeant Injured As He Trips, Falls

Injured when he tripped and fell while walking on Georgia avenue near Butternut street northwest, Staff Sergt. John Dorman, United States Army, attached to Walter Reed Hospital, was under treatment last night for severe lacerations to the head and face.

Sergt. Dorman struck his head on a curbstone. He was taken to the hospital emergency room by a police car.

Black Bass Season Opened In Maryland; Conditions Ideal

Baltimore, July 1 (Spl.).—With ideal fishing conditions promised throughout the State, the Maryland black bass fishing season opened today, which also marked the closing of the trout season.

Fishermen are not greatly concerned about the latter circumstance, however. Whenever fly-casters get together, it is generally agreed that the black bass is a far gamer fish than the trout. The perch and crappie season also starts today.

State Conservation Commissioner Swepson Earle has announced that streams throughout Maryland have been stocked with bass, perch and crappie, in anticipation of the rush. He anticipates an active season.

Waters Now Clear.

He has received reports from A. M. Powell, superintendent of the State fish hatchery at Lewistown, that the waters of western Maryland are now clear, after running muddy for several weeks. Conowingo Lake is reported to be full of bass, and the Potomac near Williamsport is said to provide excellent fishing. On the Eastern Shore, lakes and ponds in several counties are reported to be well stocked.

Mr. Earle announced the following distribution of fish by the State hatcheries in the counties:

Allegany, 1,178 small-mouth and 150 large-mouth bass in the Potomac.

Baltimore, 1,000 small-mouth in the Patapsco and 200 in Red Run; 2,200 large-mouth in Lake Roland, 50 in the Patapsco, 200 in the Seneca and 100 in Druid Ridge Cemetery Lake.

Carroll, 700 small-mouth in Big Pipe Creek, 260 in Dougle Pipe Creek, 250 in the Patapsco River.

Caroline, 8,000 crappie in Beulah Pond, 10,000 in Langrell's Pond, 6,000 in Deans Pond.

Frederick, 800 small-mouth in Monocacy River, 800 in Toms Creek, 800 in Owens Creek.

Garrett, 1,120 yellow perch in Deep Creek Lake.

Lakes Are Stocked.

Harford, 2,000 small-mouth in Deer creek, 140,000 crappie in Conowingo Lake; 55,970 large-mouth in Conowingo Lake (55,000 being 1 to 1½ inches), 1,960 yellow perch in Conowingo Lake.

Howard, 20,000 crappie in East Branch of the Patuxent River, 500 in Buckeys Pond; 200 large-mouth in East Branch of the Patuxent, 100 in Buckeys Pond, 1,200 in the Patapsco River.

Kent, 500 large-mouth in Higman Pond, 500 in Clothiers Pond; 10,000 crappie in Higman Pond, 8,000 in Clothers Pond.

Montgomery, 570 large-mouth in Little Patuxent River; 15,000 crappie in Little Patuxent River, 9,500 in Seneca Creek.

Talbot, 30,000 crappie in Lakeland Lakes; 1,200 large-mouth in Lakeland Lakes.

Virginia Hunting Licenses Muddled

Danville, Va., July 1 (Spl.).—Virginia hunters are perplexed over the variety of licenses that are available. There are no fewer than 11 types of licenses, the fees ranging from $1 to $50.

Hitherto it has cost the hunter $3 to fish, hunt and trap in the State and $1 in a county.

This year the State separated trapping from hunting and fishing and has created new classifications.

The most expensive license is that of the nonresident trapper, who must pay $50.

Storm Lays Waste Loudoun County

Leesburg, Va., July 1 (Spl.).—Late reports coming in from different sections of Loudoun County, which was cut off from all telephone and telegraph communication last night as the result of yesterday's severe wind, rain and electrical storm show great devastation resulting from high winds and electricity.

Two hundred and thirty telephones were out of commission and a large number of the company's poles, as well as those of the electric service company, were down. Large tree limbs were blown down and smaller branches strewn over the ground. Corn fields were laid flat, and large hailstones damaged gardens.

Lightning struck the courthouse in Leesburg, blowing out fuses and tearing down wires. Eleven out of 14 cattle on the Harrison farm near Aldie were killed by lightning. Maurice Carnes, living near Lucketts, was treated by a physician for lightning shock, received when a bolt hit a tree in his yard. Leesburg and adjacent towns were in darkness throughout the night, and a large force of men was at work during the night and today repairing damage.

Nine-Foot Plunge Injures D. C. Youth

A 9-foot plunge from a tree near his home yesterday sent Robert Dunlop, 18, of 2846 Twenty-seventh street northwest, to Georgetown Hospital.

Robert fell while in pursuit of a hawk, he told physicians. Dunlop lost his footing and fell. He was treated for minor bruises and lacerations.

Man Hits Head on Car; Dies Later in Hospital

Winchester, Va., July 1 (Spl.).—W. Henry Snyder, 21, of Wardensville, Va., died in Memorial Hospital here today from a fractured skull and internal injuries received in an auto accident last night.

Snyder was said to have been riding on the rear seat of an auto and his head was struck with great force against a door handle. Snyder was a son of Mr. and Mrs. Bronson Snyder, of Wardensville.

Pennsylvania Wins Police Pistol Meet

Camp Ritchie, Cascade, Md., July 1 (AP).—The Pennsylvania State police "blue" team, of Hershey, Pa., today bettered the world's record for pistols or revolvers of .32 caliber and up at 25 yards at the thirteenth annual meet of the Eastern Small Bore Association.

The Pennsylvania team fired an aggregate score of 1,407. The previous record was 1,388, according to association officials. Ten police teams were entered in the event.

The order in which the other teams placed was Delaware & Hudson Railroad police, West Virginia State police, Baltimore City police, Pennsylvania State police "white," Buffalo, N. Y., City police, Metropolitan police of Washington, Lower Merion police, of Ardmore, Pa.; Cumberland, Md., police, and District of Columbia Penal Institute police.

Ritchie's Foes Still Far at Sea On Who's Who

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Efforts to concentrate behind one man the opposition to the fifth term aspirations of Gov. Albert C. Ritchie were the high lights on the Maryland political scene during the last week. The difficulty was that each opposition candidate wanted to be the "one man."

The first move in this direction came to light when it became known that the managers of the gubernatorial campaign of George L. Radcliffe made a definite offer to Mayor Howard W. Jackson of Baltimore to support him for the Democratic senatorial nomination if he abandoned his desire to live in the governor's mansion at Annapolis.

Following this up, Radcliffe suggested a conference of leaders in the Ritchie opposition to decide on the best way of unseating the Governor. Jackson and Dr. Charles H. Conley, of Frederick, who also is an avowed candidate for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, were not adverse to the suggestion, but reiterated their intention of staying in the race.

Radcliffe Strength Doubted.

Moreover, Jackson let it be known that he was not interested in the Senatorial nomination, explaining he had chiefly devoted his talents to the administrative end of government. But the real reason is that Jackson is convinced the Radcliffe boom for Governor has slight prospects of success, and as a comparatively young man he is not enthusiastic about tying up with a movement apparently doomed to defeat.

It is perfectly obvious to those who have some understanding of the inner workings of the Democratic party in Maryland that Jackson's hope has been that sufficient opposition to a fifth term for Ritchie would be mobilized to scare the Governor out of the race. In that event, Jackson's prospects of getting the nomination would be as good or better than any other candidate.

But Ritchie has indicated most emphatically that he is not scared and, in order to show his confidence, he filed his certificate of candidacy during the week, reiterating that he preferred to be Governor of Maryland rather than Senator. When Ritchie makes such declarations, with his hand on his heart, in effect, they can not be treated lightly.

Ritchie in Race to Stay.

Thus with Ritchie in the race to stay—and that appears to be as certain as anything can be in politics—Jackson's best bet seems to be to make a bid for another term as mayor. He is careful to speak well of Ritchie and this writer believes that if the Ritchie people in Baltimore, with the Governor approving, promised to support him for another term as mayor, he would step out of the gubernatorial race and throw his support to Ritchie.

But the Ritchie district and ward leaders in Baltimore do not like Jackson—a fact which was quite evident some months ago when the Governor was reconciled to running for the Senate, but changed his mind when his Baltimore lieutenants said they would not stand for Jackson for Governor. These Ritchie leaders make no secret of their intention to oust Jackson next year.

Nevertheless, as long as Jackson stays in the gubernatorial race he has a real nuisance value and may cause the Ritchie camp much trouble. The Ritchie leaders in Baltimore in 1932 cared no more for Jackson than they do now, but the latter received the Democratic mayoralty nomination because of the support he had given Ritchie the year previously. That may happen again as Jackson has been an especially good Mayor of Baltimore, Ritchie asserting he is the best mayor the city ever had.

So much for the Jackson angle of the four-cornered situation. As usual Dr. Conely was on the sidelines, saying little. Senator Millard E. Tydings, the chief supporter of Radcliffe, however, was busy, seeking to bring about a consolidation of the Ritchie opposition behind his candidate.

Amateurish Tactics Seen.

The Radcliffe-Tydings tactics became somewhat amateurish during the week. For instance, Tydings announced that if Ritchie would run for the Senate, he would be glad to resign from the Senate—provided the new Governor promised to reappoint him later—in order that Ritchie might be the senior Senator from Maryland. Tydings gave the impression he thought this was a great concession.

Anyone who knows Ritchie, also knows that he could not be attracted to run for the Senate by being promised such flimsy prestige as being the senior Senator from Maryland. The senior Senator, except that he has earned a committee chairmanship by his long service—which Ritchie anyway would not have—has no more prerogatives than the junior Senator.

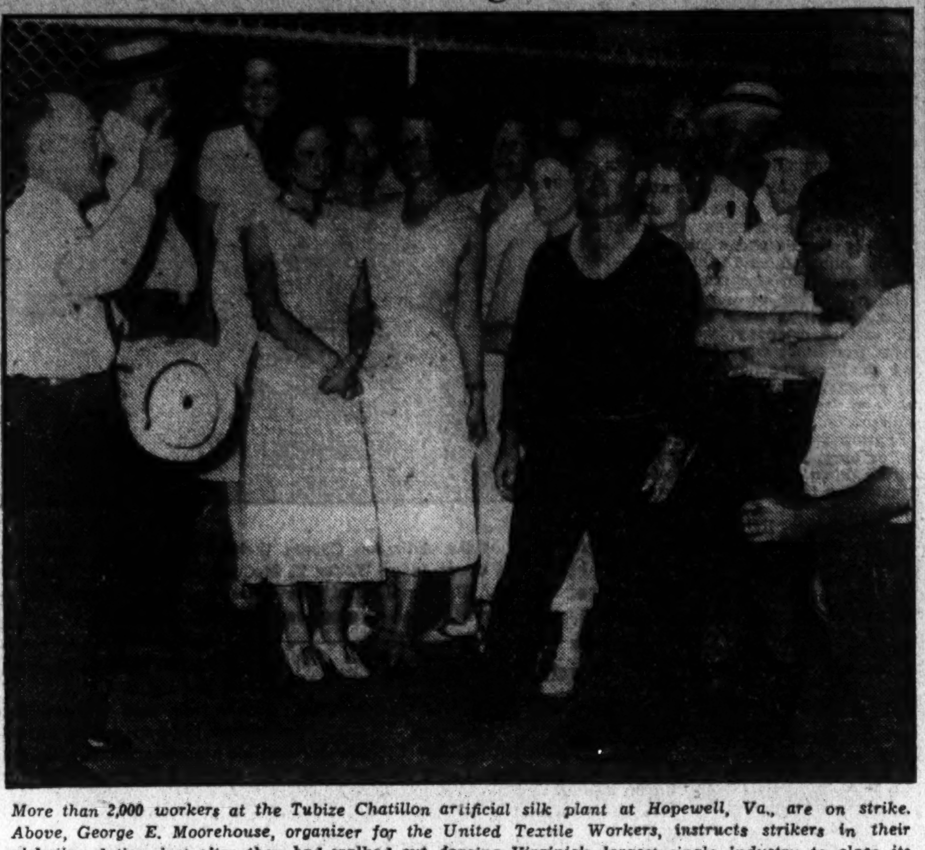
The whole Maryland Democratic political scene shifted during the week to Atlantic City, where the Maryland Bar Association held its convention. From that cool spot, Tydings was reported to have issued an ultimatum to Ritchie to announce his decision to run for the Senate by last night or prepare to fight. Ritchie, who started to fight several months ago, was unmoved by this "ultimatum" which was played up with great solemnity in the Baltimore newspapers.

The truth of the whole situation is that Jackson and Radcliffe have been unable to make any great headway against Ritchie in eliciting the support of party leaders and Democratic organizations, either in the city or the counties. Their only hope, if the contest goes to a showdown, is that Democratic voters who are not attached to political machines or local bosses have become so dissatisfied with Ritchie that they will turn to one of his opponents.

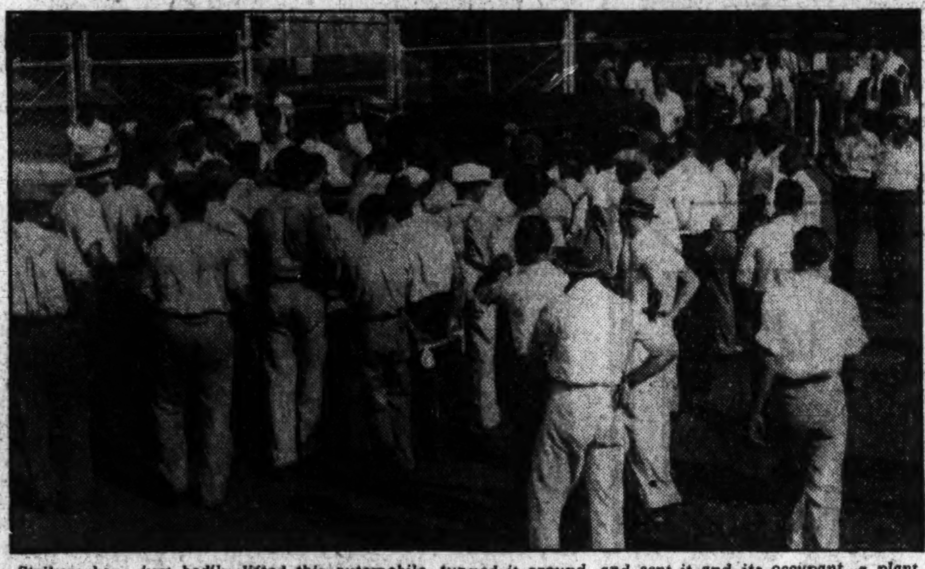
During the coming week the anti-Ritchie forces may hold a conference, but it is doubtful whether anything conclusive will develop from it. Jackson will not step out of the race for Radcliffe; Radcliffe will not step out for Jackson; neither feels he can step out with good grace for Ritchie. The Ritchie forces have suggested that Jackson or Radcliffe run for the Senate. Radcliffe is said to be thinking that over, but if he aligned himself with the Ritchie camp, he would leave his friend, Tydings, out on a limb, because the latter has reiterated his conviction that Ritchie's gubernatorial candidacy would ruin the Democratic party.

It is strange that with a plethora of candidates in both Republican and Democratic parties for Governor, none has yet announced for the Senate. Each says the other should run for the Senate, as though the latter were some inferior place unworthy of the aspirations of worthwhile statesmen. It is a situation not only unique in Maryland but in the country.

Excitement Rules Virginia Strike Area



More than 2,000 workers at the Tubize Chatillon artificial silk plant at Hopewell, Va., are on strike. Above, George E. Moorehouse, organizer for the United Textile Workers, instructs strikers in their picketing duties, just after they had walked out, forcing Virginia's largest single industry to close its doors. Fifty picked men were allowed to enter the plant Saturday, with the understanding they would leave today, to remove highly explosive nitrocotton from pipes and avert the likelihood of a serious explosion.



Strikers have just bodily lifted this automobile, turned it around, and sent it and its occupant, a plant foreman, away from the plant.

Secret Tydings Parley Fails to Solve Riddle

Baltimore, Md., July 1 (Spl.).—Amid a great show of secrecy, leaders of the anti-Ritchie clique of the Democratic party met here today in a "peace parley," at which candidates for the gubernatorial nomination were scheduled to pool their resources and unite behind one strong candidate to oppose the Governor's election.

The meeting was held at the offices of United States Senator Millard E. Tydings in the Baltimore Trust Building. So secret was the proceedings, however, that not even the names of those who attended could be learned.

Reports were, however, that Mayor Howard W. Jackson of Baltimore and several of his lieutenants were there, and consulted at length with George L. Radcliffe and his principal sponsor, Senator Tydings.

Jackson and Radcliffe are two of the three anti-Ritchie gubernatorial candidates.

Dr. Charles H. Conley, of Frederick, the third anti-Ritchie candidate, was not present, according to reports.

Whether any definite agreement was reached at the meeting of Jackson and Radcliffe could not be learned. It had been previously reported that Jackson would seek to persuade Radcliffe to join his ticket as senatorial candidate, and it was also reported that Radcliffe would try to persuade Jackson to become senatorial candidate on the Radcliffe ticket.

Neither would agree to the other's proposal, however, according to reports, and the meeting was said to have ended in an impasse.

Farm Credit Unit Made Permanent

Winchester, Va., July 1 (AP).—The Strasburg Production Credit Association, set up on a temporary basis early last spring, is being merged into a permanent organization, J. A. Everly, secretary-treasurer, announced today, in order that farmers of the lower Shenandoah Valley may continue to obtain loans from a regular source for production requirements.

Farmers of Frederick, Clarke, Warren, Page and Shenandoah Counties are members of the organization, and are eligible to apply for loans.

County agents have been cooperating with the association.

Deadly Cotton Being Cleaned Out of Looms

Drying Nitro Textile Taken From Machinery at Strike Plant.

The workmen, who were rushed to the plant yesterday by State police, armed to protect the workers from strike pickets, remained in the plant day and night, having food and clothing with them to last until their job is finished. The task is expected to require two days, permitting the men to leave the plant some time tomorrow.

Calm settled over the town and there was no outward sign of last week's friction between strikers and plant management.

The workmen were allowed to enter the building by the textile union local executive committee, after Gov. Peery interceded in an effort to remove what the plant management warned was a serious danger of explosion from the unfinished and drying nitro-cotton in the plant's equipment.

Labor leaders agreed to permit the workmen to enter on condition that two of their men be allowed to watch their work, to be sure there was no production of rayon.

A conciliator of the Federal Department of Labor is expected here tomorrow to begin negotiations looking toward a settlement of the strike.

The strike was called Friday after the plant management had challenged the jurisdiction of the Federal Labor Board and had ignored the board's mandate that ten workmen, said by union leaders to have been discharged because of their union activities, be reinstated.

Mrs. Nannie R. Levi To Be Buried Toda

Boyce, Va., July 1 (Spl.).—Funeral rites will be conducted here tomorrow for Mrs. Nannie Rogers Levi, 64, widow of Robert C. Levi, of Clarke County, who died in Harrisonburg yesterday.

The services will be conducted from the home of her brother, Clay Carr, with the Rev. Dr. L. A. Parker, the Rev. J. McL. Carr and the Rev. C. V. Van der Linden officiating. Burial will be in Berryville.

Surviving Mrs. Levi are two sisters, Mrs. T. B. Levi and Mrs. J. W. Eddy, both of Boyce, and two brothers, Clay Carr, of Boyce, and J. S. Carr, of Leetown, W. Va.

Maryland Club Asks Roosevelt To Yacht Fete

Silver Jubilee and 300th Birthday of State to Be Observed.

Baltimore, July 1 (Spl.).—If expectations of the Maryland Yacht Club are realized President Roosevelt will attend the joint abservance of the yacht club's silver jubilee and the Maryland Tercentenary on August 11.

The President has indicated he will attend, if his business affairs can be so arranged, and yacht club officials are confidently expecting he will be on hand, basing their hopes on his well-known liking for boats and also on the fact he was unable to attend the Maryland Tercentenary celebration at St. Mary's City on June 16 and 17.

Mayor Howard W. Jackson has announced detailed plans for the celebration here.

"The observance will open on August 10, with a marine parade off the Maryland Yacht Club quarters in Broening Park," the mayor said. "After the parade, hundreds of visiting yachts, battleships, and Coast Guard boats will be assigned positions around the 2½-mile race course off Fort McHenry, and powerboat and sail races will begin.

"Band concerts are scheduled at Broening Park and Fort McHenry by Army bands from various posts during the evening, while a formal reception will be held at the club.

"The races will be continued Saturday and Sunday, with band concerts and other features interspersing. President Roosevelt is expected Saturday afternoon, and will be in the parade Saturday night. More than 10,000 service men also will march.

"At sundown Sunday a spectacular water pageant is planned. It will be followed by a 'bombardment' of Fort McHenry by the battleships."

The celebration is expected to bring to Baltimore the largest number of boats and watercraft of all varieties that have ever assembled in the East. A committee is hard at work arranging for the various events, and it is expected Mayor Jackson will declare August 11 a legal holiday in the city.

Four Maryland Companies Authorized to Issue Stock

Frederick, Md., July 1 (Spl.).—Incorporation for four concerns and amendments to the fifth were filed in the Circuit Court yesterday. Three firms are authorized to issue $65,000 worth of capital stock, while another reduces its stock by $20,000.

The reduction was asked by the Frederick Iron & Steel Co. and approved by the State tax commission. Instead of 1,500 shares of capital stock at $100 a share, as heretofore, the company will issue 1,000 shares of preferred stock at $100 each, and 6,000 shares of common stock at $5 each, for a total of $130,000. The amendment names William A. Riddell, George M. Gittinger and Claude S. Hahn as directors. Benjamin B. Rosenstock is attorney.

The Depositors Holding Corporation was formed to receive and possess the property which may be transferred by the Middletown Savings Bank, as provided in the plan of reorganization of the bank approved by the State bank commissioner. The directors are M. Foster Ahalt, Peter E. Bussard, G. Harland Dinterman, Charles W. Grossnickle, John F. Harshman, George C. House, George W. Kefauver, Herman L. Routzahn, John L. Routzahn, William S. Routzahn and John B. Schildknecht. John L. Routzahn, Middletown, is named resident agent. No issue of capital stock is authorized.

New Schroeders, Inc., this city, is authorized to issue 2,000 shares of common stock at $10 a share. The directors are Herbert C. Meurling, Everett P. Gue and Mary Waghelstein, all of Baltimore. Mr. Gue is named resident agent.

The Frederick Theater, Inc., is authorized to issue 200 shares of capital stock at $100 a share. The directors are J. F. Falls and Marie P. Falls, both of Danville, Va., and Ashley M. Abendschein, this city. Mr. Abendschein is named resident agent. Harry Wooding, jr., Danville, Va., is attorney.

The Hillside Coal Co., this city, is authorized to issue 2,500 shares of stock at $10 each. Directors are Paul L. Romsberg, who is resident agent; Carrie E. Romsberg and Mary A. Davis.

500 Expected At Retreat for Young People

Southern Methodists Will Supervise Vacation in Virginia.

Harrisonburg, Va., July 1 (Spl.). Five hundred young people are expected at Massanetta Springs, religious retreat, tomorrow when the twelfth annual Young People's Assembly of the Baltimore Conference, Southern Methodist Church, opens a conference which will last through July 9.

The theme this year will be "Dare We Be Christian?" and the members have secured outstanding ministers and laymen to carry out the idea in lecture and study course. This year's assembly has a four-fold purpose: To deepen spiritual lives; encourage brotherhood and cooperation; instruct those who attend to be better leaders, and to furnish a well-rounded Christian vacation.

Organize Big Staff.

An extensive staff has been organized, including Charles S. Jarvis, president; Herman S. Moorman, dean; Miss Hazeltine Settle, registrar; Miss Northie Foster, room registrar; Miss Beryl Echols, class registrar; Mrs. Watson E. Holly, dean of women and assembly hostess; the Rev. Watson E. Holly, dean of men; the Rev. J. H. Hobbs, song leader; Mrs. J. H. Hobbs, pianist; Dr. Esther F. Kuhm, assembly doctor; Ivan Washburn, bugler, and Mr. Jarvis, Miss Elsie Oberlin, Miss Mable Collins, John J. Hawse and Bernard W. Woodahl, executive committee.

Courses offered at the assembly will be divided into two fields—enrichment courses and program and organization courses.

Enrichment courses included "The Story of Job," the Rev. Dr. E. L. Woolf; "How to Enjoy the Bible," the Rev. Dr. Hubert Sydenstricker; "Christian Patriotism," the Rev. Watson E. Holley; "Personality Development," the Rev. Dr. J. J. Rives; "Christian Use of Leisure," the Rev. W. G. Winton; "Our Methodist Church," the Rev. Dr. H. H. Sherman; "What It Means to Be a Christian," the Rev. H. E. Cromer, and "Leaders' Round Table," the Rev. B. L. Schuble.

Other Courses Named.

Courses on program and organization will include "Planning the Department Program," the Rev. B. L. Schuble; "Using Dramatics," Mrs. Pearl B. Long; "Committee on Worship," the Rev. Frank A. Settle; "Evangelism and Church Relationship," the Rev. W. G. Winton; "Missions and World Friendship," the Rev. W. E. Holley; "Citizenship and Community Service," the Rev. C. C. Burruss; "Recreation and Personal Development," K. M. Cowen, and "Committee and Leadership Training," Mrs. E. L. Woolf.

The daily program for the week of the assembly follows: Monday, keynote address, the Rev. Dr. N. B. Harmon, jr., editor of the Baltimore Southern Methodist, and lawn social; Tuesday, theme address, the Rev. Dr. J. J. Rives, and lantern hike; Wednesday, annual banquet; Thursday, vesper service and play; Friday, missions program, "Daring Together," and campfire program; Saturday, coronation of king and queen, and Legion of Service program; Sunday, communion service, consecration service; 3 o'clock musicale and evening worship.

Hastings Wallops New Deal at Rally

Lewes, Del., July 1 (Spl.).—Shouting vehemently, "The devil with the Blue Eagle," to the accompaniment of lusty cheers from his audience, United States Senator Daniel O. Hastings, of Delaware, fired the opening gun of a State G. O. P. rally in Sussex County here last night, where approximately 600 sweltering Republicans packed the fire hall with the thermometer registering 90. Senator John G. Townsend, jr., of Delaware, presided.

Senator Hastings told the audience in no uncertain terms that "unless the Republicans come to the rescue of the country at the November elections and demand a square deal instead of the New Deal requiring the accumulation of a public debt of 10,000,000 a day, the consequences will be disastrous."

Senator Frederick C. Walcott, of Connecticut, a member of the Finance Committee, was a guest speaker, preceding Senator Hastings talk with an outline of the financial situation at Washington. He stated that although President Roosevelt had instilled new confidence in the people for the first eight months of his administration, the Nation's hope for good from the NRA and the AAA had proved in vain.

$5,214,000 Is Earned By Bank of America

San Francisco, July 1 (AP).—Earnings of the Bank of America National Trust and Savings Association and of Bank of the America (California), totaled $5,214,000 for the first six months of 1934, Bank of America announced today.

Earnings covered dividend requirements for the entire year by a margin of more than $1,000,000, and were 17 per cent above those for the first six months of 1933.

Dr. McDowell Opens Public Affairs Forum

Charlottesville, Va., July 1 (AP).—Dr. John McDowell, of the Board of National Missions of the Presbyterian Church in the United States, opened the eighth Institute of Public Affairs of the University of Virginia, as he spoke at vesper services. Dr. McDowell voiced his belief that the church ought to understand the social, political and industrial trends of the times, as well as the moral and spiritual life that surrounds it.

The Rev. Cameron Parker Hall, pastor of Christ Presbyterian Church, New York, also spoke Each afternoon this week he will participate in a round table discussion group which Dr. McDowell will lead on "The Function of the Church in Modern Life."

Five other round table conferences are on the first week's program. The subects they will consider are the "God Neighbor" policy in Latin America; dictatorship versus democracy; money—a challenge to world statesmanship; county government and State planning and home ownership and the country church.

Gov. George C. Peery will assist in exercises in McIntire Amphitheater tomorrow night, which mark the beginning of the round table talks.

In his opening sentences Dr. McDowell said that, "to know the times in the social, political and industrial as well as the moral and spiritual sense, the church must know just where the center of interest lies at any given time. This center of interest is undoubtedly a changeable matter. Sixty years ago it lay in the relation of relligion to science, 40 years ago it lay in the relation of religion to scripture; today it lies in the relation of religion to society.

"The real questions of our day are not speculative. They are terribly practical."

Maryland Tobacco Men To Hold Annual Outing

Annapolis, Md., July 1 (Spl.).—The annual picnic of the Maryland Tobacco Growers Association, always a big affair among southern Maryland farmers, will be held at Seaside Park, Calvert County, July 19.

Prominent speakers will address the gathering in the afternoon. The picnic also will be a mecca for State and local political candidates and leaders in the fall campaign.

Martinsburg Nursery School Opens Today

Martinsburg, W. Va., July 1 (Spl.). A nursery school for children between 3 and 6 years of age will open tomorrow at Stone Home. Misses Evelyn Wever and Anna McKee will teach.

Youth Will Be Served

29-Year-Old Senate Aspirant Calls on Shade of Henry Clay to Prove He Can Be Seated in August Body.

By W. L. Geppert.

Charleston, W. Va., July 1.—The age of Rush D. Holt, of Weston, youthful member of the House of Delegates for Lewis County, has become an issue in the West Virginia primary campaign.

Holt, a Democrat, is a candidate for his party nomination for United States Senator. Shortly after he made his formal announcement, question was raised as to his eligibility under the Constitution. The State Blue Book sets forth that he was born on June 19, 1905. The Federal Constitution provides that a United States Senator shall have reached the age of 30 years. Wherefore, it was held that Holt could not qualify if elected and therefore is ineligible as a candidate.

Holt thereupon issued a statement that this would not affect his primary race but would be up to the United States Senate, the sole judge of the qualifications of its members, and recalled that Henry Clay was seated when only 29.

"It is quite probable," Holt stated, "that many earnest and sincere citizens may be somewhat disturbed about this possibility, but I suspect that the question was raised by die-hard reactionaries who are determined to arrest the progress of the New Deal of our beloved and humanitarian President, Franklin D. Roosevelt, and who have seized upon this flimsy pretext to disguise their real purpose.

"Even admitting that the Senate would disregard precedent and refuse to seat me, I would be able to take my seat on June 19, which is six months earlier than any other West Virginia Senator ever assumed his duties. Heretofore, Congress has not ever assembled until December of the year following the election."

Coolidge Memorial Urged.

Northampton, Mass. (U.P.)—Councilman Edmund L. Lampron has introduced a resolution urging this city, home of the late Calvin Coolidge, to erect a suitable memorial to the former President. Lampron is a Democrat.

Wicomico Fair Is Abandoned At Salisbury

Annual Festival Is Ended After 25 Years; to Sell Grounds.

Salisbury, Md., July 1 (Spl.). For the first time in 25 years Salisbury will have to do without its annual Wimomico County Fair, State Senator D. J. Ward, president and manager of the Wicomico Fair Association, Inc., announced today.

Senator Ward said the fair not only would not be held but the property would be offered for sale this summer.

Consent of the stockholders to this program is being secured by Clarence W. Whealton, secretary of the association.

The fair has been unable to operate at a profit for several years and the buildings are rapidly depreciating said Senator Ward.

Attendance dropped off so sharply last year that the management decided to do away with the admission charge and depend on concessions for revenue. This plan also failed.

Organized in 1909 the fair was highly successful for many years. The property lies just outside the city limits of Salisbury and consists of 28 acres with scores of large exhibition buildings, stables and grandstand.

Upon the half-mile track many of the fastest races in the country have taken place with some of the best known horses in the East participating.

Hog-Raising Law Violation Charged

Winchester Former Mayor Ordered to Court.

Winchester, Va., July 1 (Spl.).—F. Amos Shryock, former mayor, will appear before Magistrate Donald L. Weems tomorrow to answer a charge of keeping hogs in violation of the city ordinance prohibiting raising swine for commercial purposes here.

Shryock was summoned shortly after he had obtained an injunction in Corporation Court restraining the city from erecting a fence on his lot to keep his hogs from near a spring from which the city obtains part of its water supply.

Relief Head Faces Nonsupport Trial

Martinsburg, W. Va., July 1 (Spl.).—Raymond J. Horner, formerly of Martinsburg, recently living in Chambersburg, Pa., where he has been employed as supervisor of the Federal Reemployment Service Bureau, was arrested here yesterday on a warrant from Chambersburg, charging desertion and nonsupport of his wife, now living in Chambersburg.

Horner demanded extradition papers and posted a bond for his appearance later before Justice Smith. Pennsylvania authorities are understood to have taken steps to have extradition papers issued for his return.

Berkeley 4-H Girls To Leave for Camp

Martinsburg, W. Va., July 1 (Spl.). Twelve 4-H girls from Berkeley County 4-H Clubs leave tomorrow under care of Home Club Agent Esther Brucklacher, and County Agents McClung and Bolton, for Jacksons Mill, to attend the younger girls camp.

Mrs. Brucklacher will remain there through the week teaching leathercraft and astronomy.

Virginia Airship Firm Seeks $912,000 Loan

Richmond, July 1 (AP).—Garrette W. Peck, president of the Virginia Airship Co., Inc., announced tonight that his firm will apply to the Publics Works Administration Monday for a loan of $912,000.

The company's plan is to borrow the money with the understanding that it will transfer to the State title to all property acquired with the fund, on condition that the State lease to the company a State airport near Sandston, Va., for 30 years.

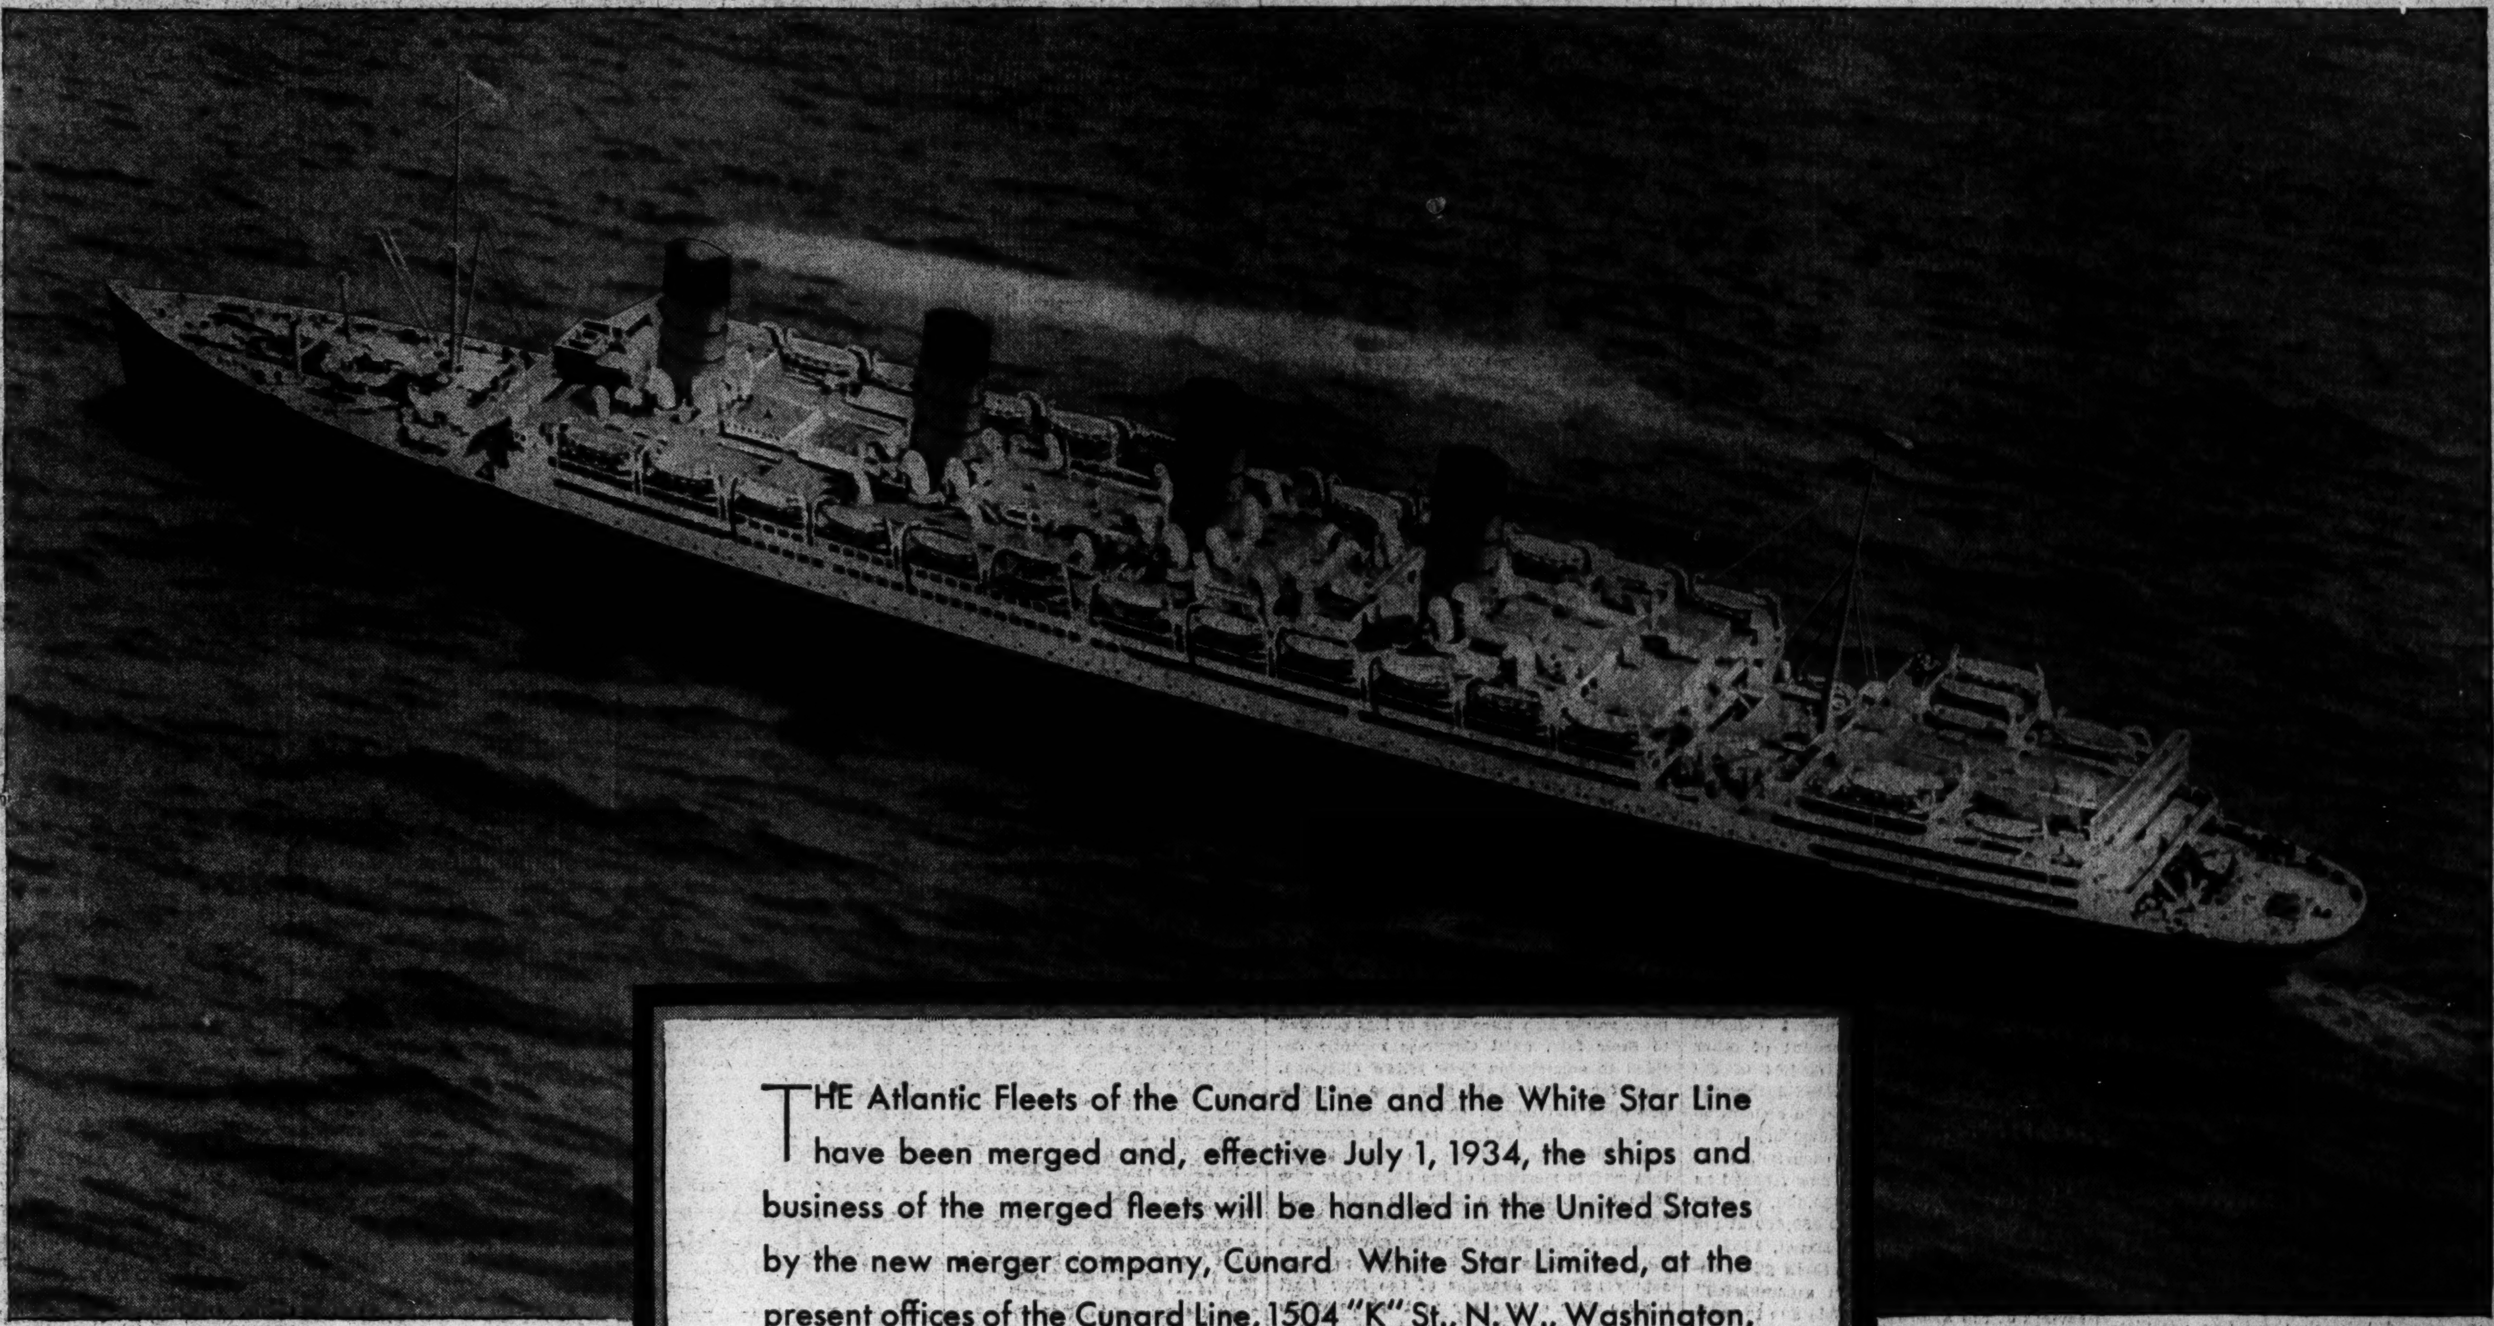
CUNARD WHITE STAR LIMITED



THE Atlantic Fleets of the Cunard Line and the White Star Line have been merged and, effective July 1, 1934, the ships and business of the merged fleets will be handled in the United States by the new merger company, Cunard White Star Limited, at the present offices of the Cunard Line, 1504 "K" St., N.W., Washington, D. C., and branch offices in the principal cities of the United States: New York, Atlanta, Chicago, Los Angeles, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Cleveland, Minneapolis, Pittsburgh, St. Louis, Boston, Detroit, New Orleans, San Francisco, Portland, Me., Seattle.

Your Local Travel Agent is ready to serve you.

CUNARD and WHITE STAR are now one, a saga of the sea which is the history of Britain. For seamen founded this island kingdom. Ships were "The wooden walls of England" . . . far-flung boundaries which fostered industry and commerce to keep step with empire. Life was inextricably bound in with the needs of England's growth over the seven seas . . . the best of the land went into her ships, the best of her men to man them.

And throughout the last century almost the whole story of Britain on the seas is the history of the parallel development of Cunard and White Star. Together they have gone forward, participating alike in a tradition of ships and seamen which has become almost synonymous with the record of achievement in ocean transportation as we know it today. And now Cunard and White Star are one in fact. Their union brings into being what is by far the greatest fleet on the Atlantic—616,000 tons—with the world's two largest vessels as flagships. These vast resources under one management are immediately significant to the traveller and shipper. But there is another significance that lies behind the veil of statistics. The British tradition of seamanship lives in the hearts and minds of men and there we believe lies the supreme good in the Cunard White Star union. It brings together a great body of officers and men . . . irreplaceable men without whom ships would be so much steel. It joins and vitalizes the traditions of seamen who made ocean transportation what it is today; who today are making it what it will be tomorrow.

The Cuban Embargo.

President Roosevelt's proclamation, laying an embargo against the shipment of arms, explosives and munitions to Cuba, offers further evidence of this country's good will toward the insular republic. In our relations with Cuba's revolutionary governments the President's policy of being a "good neighbor" has been well exemplified.

Cubans were delighted when the United States agreed to abrogation of the Platt Amendment, thus ending this country's right to intervene in the island to preserve order. But officials at Havana still recognize the importance of aid from Washington. They found that munitions and explosives were being smuggled into Cuba to carry on a terroristi campaign against the Medieta government. The State Department was asked to cooperate in preventing these shipments. Consequently, arms may be shipped to Cuba only through requests from the Havana government.

If this action had been taken two years ago, it probably would have been denounced as imperialistic by some of the officials who are now in power at Havana. Nevertheless, it indicates a genuine desire on the part of the American Government to be helpful in the restoration of orderly government within the island. With or without the Platt Amendment this country has a deep interest in Cuba's welfare. Cooperation of this kind in the maintenance of peace is entirely proper.

The American people are waiting anxiously to learn Cuba's reaction to this friendly policy. Some recent events in Havana give the impression certain elements there are thinking more of the rights and privileges of full sovereignty than of Cuba's obligations. Good will and the cooperative spirit can be preserved, of course, only when they are mutual.

A Logical Merger.

Merger of the Washington Chamber of Commerce with the Board of Trade should have been effected years ago. The purposes, functions and objectives of the two organizations are identical. In fact, they have worked in harmony in recent years. Their consolidation appears to be agreeable to the membership of both organizations. Certainly they will be in a position to render more effective community service as a single unit.

At the time the Chamber of Commerce was organized there was a rather distinct cleavage of opinion between the two groups regarding the development of Washington. But these differences have been gradually removed with the steady growth of the Capital City. Problems with which the business men of Washington are now concerned tend to bring groups of this kind together instead of driving them apart. It is gratifying to note that any rivalry which might have existed between these two organizations has been submerged for the welfare of the community.

The Board of Trade and the Chamber of Commerce have taken an active interest in the orderly development of Washington. Projects in which their influence has been felt include Union Station. codification of District laws, extension of library facilities, &c., as well as business and commercial undertakings. They have worked assiduously to secure a square deal for District taxpayers and to bring about equitable fiscal relations between the District and the Federal Government. It is reasonable to assume that the consolidated organization will continue this community service with increased influence and prestige.

Steers Vs. Foxes.

Yankees have a way of answering one question by asking another, and sometimes this is a most effective way of winning an argument. In a London police court the other day Tex Austen, described as an American rodeo impresario, found it his best defense. He had been charged by the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals with "terrifying an animal, to wit, a steer." This summer there has been an invasion of Britain's calm by several groups of American Westerners, with their 10-gallon hats and their lariats, who have been staging rodeos. The society with the long name has been quite put out about their "cruelty."

For its misunderstanding of American ways the society will have to pay all the costs of the trial of Mr. Austen. He, it seems, with another person, was "doing a breakaway roping" when the steer in question ran into a fence and was slightly injured. Haled into police court, Mr. Austen was asked in effect if he had frightened that steer. Although it appears from his first name that he hails from the region of the Rio Grande, he countered with an answer that would have done credit in the court at Newfane, Vt. His answer was, in effect, are not Englishmen cruel when they chase foxes, and which is worse, to rope a steer or turn the countryside loose on a defenseless rodent?

Chasing and roping steers is not so ancient a "sport" as fox hunting, but it takes more skill and more risks. Fox hunters and steer ropers both indulge in the human enjoyment of hunting animals, and while either may be decried as cruel, we rather think the American had the better of the argument.

At any rate, Mr. Tex Austen is to be congratulated for his Yankee tact.

Stripping The Mask.

Additional gloom is added to the somber German scene by reports of rapidly failing health for aged President von Hindenburg—the one national figure around whom all German factions might be able to rally if the Nazi regime collapses. And that this possibility has now become almost a probability becomes more clear as analysis is given to the events of the Reich's tragic week-end.

The vigor and ruthlessness with which Hitler and Goering have acted were doubtless calculated to demonstrate their ability to hold together the tottering Nazi fabric. But what these political assassinations have demonstrated far more clearly is the rotten character of the government which "Der Fuehrer" heads. The executed Storm Troop leaders are men who heretofore have been held up as paragons of patriotic virtue. The revelation of their real character as sexual perverts, grafters, plotters and conscienceless self-seekers will be the more hideous for the idolatory which Hitler has heretofore demanded for all who wear the swastika.

If this unmasking were all that confronted the Nazi regime today, its effects would be serious enough. But the proof of individual corruption among many of its leaders coincides with demonstrations of bankruptcy in every field of National Socialist government. In 17 months of personal dictatorship Hitler has piled up a list of failures which makes the rule of Nero seem enlightened and successful by comparison. The man whose mission it was to lead Germany out of enslavement has dragged his country into a servitude far more degrading than any an alien conqueror could impose.

History shows that the German people are easy to fool. And history shows that this strong and rather brutal race can be very terrible when it awakes to realization of self-deception. Thousands of families in Germany today have suffered from the tyranny and persecutions of those whom Hitler first honored, and now disowns. To suppose that he will not be held responsible for acts of subordinates whom he has denounced too late, is to suppose that the Germans are a race lacking in both intelligence and pride.

For the outside world, at this critical juncture of German affairs, the reasonable attitude is clear. The sorely tried German people, who have suffered even beyond all others the past two decades, obviously deserve sympathy in the rude awakening they face. But something more than mere sympathy may be necessary in the days ahead.

After all, Germany holds a keystone position in Europe's economic fabric. What happens in that country is of far more than merely academic interest to the rest of the world. Once the Germans decide to be done with a government which has so slandered German traditions it will be the course of good sense as well as good feeling to make the rehabilitation of this great nation as easy and as rapid as possible.

Rise In Bank Deposits.

Since the end of February Government officials estimate that there has been an increase of $1,000,000,000 in all bank deposits, exclusive of Government deposits and those held for the account of other banks. If the last-named classes of deposits are included, the increase during the period in question is believed to amount to $3,000,000,000. As further evidence of the rapid expansion that has occurred, it is stated that all deposits have now reached an estimated total of $46,000,000,000, as compared with less than $39,000,000,000 at the end of the bank holiday in March, 1933.

Are we to conclude that these gains reflect increases in the "real accumulated" savings of the American people due to business recovery? Or is the Government's program of deficit financing primarily responsible for this growth? Certainly gains in Government deposits resulting from the heavy borrowing operations of the Treasury and reflected in rising public deposits are not a product of savings. They are, on the contrary, a result of inadequate resources which have necessitated increasing governmental dependence upon the banks to finance uncovered outlays. Some idea of the extent of that reliance is gained by an examination of the statements of reporting member banks, which on June 20 held $6,582,000,000 in Government securities, an increase of over $1,200,000,000 during the year. Meantime Government deposits had risen approximately $720,000,000, and all other (demand) deposits had increased about $1,500,000,000.

Since the Government took over the reserve system's gold stocks, the Treasury has been depositing gold certificates with the Federal Reserve Banks and establishing credits against which it can draw. Thus by Treasury sales of securities to the banks and by deposits of cash, the amount of purchasing power represented by bank deposits has been rapidly swollen. As disbursements are made for account of the Government, funds are redeposited by the recipients. The result has been an extraordinarily rapid addition to all classes of deposits, reflecting for the most part the borrowing and spending operations of the Government. There is no warrant, therefore, for assuming that the additions to individual and corporate deposits have been produced by a sudden expansion of business activity and an increase in material well-being. That may be true to a limited extent, but it is not the major reason for the expansion.

The result of the steady outpouring of borrowed funds by the Government has been an excessive ease of credit which has been reflected in an unusually large volume of excess bank reserves. These reserves would permit an expansion of credit on a colossal scale. With no end to the Government's spending program in sight, it is impossible to see how an effective check could be offered to a runaway type of inflationary credit activity, should such a movement develop. Instead, therefore, of pointing with pride and satisfaction to the accelerated increase in bank deposits, Government officials ought to be regarding them as signals of possible trouble ahead.

The Stock Control Board.

The new Stock Exchange and Securities Commission is potentially one of the most important independent regulatory agencies ever established under Federal law. The extensive discretionary powers conferred upon it give those called upon to administer the securities act and the stock exchange law great influence in determining the pace and character of future industrial expansion. Through its authority to check unlation. These misgivings will be considersound developments and suppress illegitimate speculative trading the commission may not only protect investors, but also lay the foundation for a more stable business structure. For these reasons selection of its personnel has been awaited with great eagerness, not unmixed with anxiety.

Fears have been expressed that the commission might approach its task in a hostile spirit, with emphasis upon the suppressive instead of the constructive aspects of regu-ably lessened by the selection, as a member and probable chairman, of a man whose past activities and affiliations have given him an inside knowledge of the problems of the financial community. Since Mr. Kennedy is a personal friend of President Roosevelt, his appointment strengthens the belief that the commission will work in cooperation with the regulated interests, not against them.

Fortunately the commission is not handicapped by appointees selected solely on personal or political grounds, without regard to their special qualifications for the task assigned them. All of the members are entitled to rank as experts, with an intimate knowledge, gained through study or official contacts, of the complex problems they will be called upon to solve. That seems to be the best possible guarantee of reasonable regulation and administrative efficiency. Lack of preparation and ignorance of what ought to be done or can be done are largely responsible for the mistakes of policy that so often bring government regulation into disrepute.

It has sometimes been feared that Messrs. Landis and Pecora were bent upon destructive regulation of stock and securities markets. However, any investigator seeking evidence upon which to base a case for regulation, and any reformer trying to secure support for his regulatory ideals, is inclined to show a crusading spirit that may not be displayed when he is placed in a position of high administrative responsibility.

If the bureaucratic and doctrinaire elements are prepared to give due weight to the views of those who have practical experience with market operations, the commission ought to render a great service by encouraging a healthy growth of investment activity.

All For Love.

Amid the vicissitudes of National recovery, the turmoil in Germany and the excitement of President Roosevelt's departure for a long vacation, a serious problem has arisen in the naval service. One-half of the Naval Academy's graduating class of 1933, it seems, has been subjected to irksome regimentation. That is to say, these young ensigns have been denied the privilege of getting married until June, 1935.

As will be noted from a letter to the editor of The Post elsewhere on this page, these young men were more or less resigned to their fate, until Congress recently decided to commission their fellow classmen, who, for a year, have been free from the ban upon matrimony. Can Navy men brook such discrimination? It is quite apparent from this young ensign's communication that certain members of the 1933 class who were commissioned a year ago feel deeply aggrieved.

What does it matter whether governments fall, war goes on, drought withers the food supply and the agencies of the New Deal tumble over each other in their scramble for recovery, if the yearnings of love are denied? How is it possible that the Brains Trust could overlook such a problem? Where is that coordinating agency which is supposed to iron out irregularities from the New Deal? Surely there must be some redress for servants of the Republic who are thus caught in the net of tantalizing bureaucracy. The situation seems to call for an investigation by the Navy, and it might well be brought to the attention of Marc Connelly.

IN A FORMAL "conference" the majority in the Senate adopted a resolution that Congress should not adjourn until the trust program had been carried out.

THE FAILURE OF Congress to enact the District appropriation bill before the beginning of the fiscal year, and the necessity of the various municipal departments operating under a continuance of the old appropriation practically halted all work of improving government buildings in the District.

The Marriage Ruling.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: When we entered the Naval Academy we began a new existence. There were no longer any distinctions and each man rated exactly the same as another. To a degree this is true througout the naval service. Each officer is allowed 30 days leave each year. The base pay is the same in each grade. The duration of shore duty, sea duty and foreign duty is prescribed by Navy regulations and policies. Every officer has promotion examinations to pass. Now, however, a discrepancy in this fair and square dealing seems to have crept in.

On June 1, 1933, only half our class was commissioned. Academically we were the best fitted half to receive commissions. On us were brought to bear certain new regulations. First we were to serve under probationary commissions for two years. Secondly, for these two years we were not to be married. All well and good, although the second regulation seemed rather harsh.

Now Congress has decided to commission the remaining half of our class who so desire. Not only will they come back in as if they had never been out, but they are allowed to be married. They, who have so much to make up and who have not even put in a year's time as bachelor officers, are given this privilege which we are denied.

Some are married and have children Others hurriedly get married when they realize they must get married before returning to the fold or suffer our plight.

On the other hand, we stand by and watch them come in—married! Can they laugh at us—yes! They have lost nothing in their year's absence and come back privileged people.

We are the best fitted to get married since we are a year ahead of them in service and ahead in academic standing. Still nothing is done to give us equal rights, which surely we are entitled to. Most of us are here on the East Coast now grabbing the opportunity of seeing our fiancees for the first time in one whole year. Would not the square deal be to let the first half of the class of '33 get married? After all, this has been a long year.

Next spring we face the prospect of maneuvers around Alaska and Honolulu. How can we be married then in June, when it will be allowed, if we are off on this cruise? How much time would we have with our wives?

I do not think this is purposely meant to be unfair, but is merely the result of an oversight. This article is written to bring to the attention of the proper authorities, with all due respect, the necessity for rectifying the situation.

A '33 ENSIGN.

"Still" Democracy.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In a recent Post are three news items of great importance I have not found in any other newspaper. They show a Federal dictatorship denied by the President himself at New Haven when he became an "alumnus" of Yale and declared: "We are still a democracy." If "we" are, then the other two items disclose what is left of "our" democracy to be very "still," indeed.

The second item is headed: "AAA Autocracy Fight Renewed by Senator Byrd," and the third is a statement by the Department of Labor officials that, regardless of Congress' refusal to give them the autocratic discretion to deport or not deport alien lawbreakers as they think it "in the public interest," they will continue to do so as to 465 aliens until the next Congress.

Their excuse is their opinion that an alien who enters illegally or who after legal entry has broken our laws should be sent back to his own country, if the alien has married, has had children or has other "near relatives" here! In the Department of Labor therefore and in other departments is to be found the very same substitution of personal ukase for law and for the deliberately expressed will of the legislative branch.

P. H. JAMES.
Washington.

Dictatorship.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In a recent issue of The Post is the amazing news release by the Department of Labor that 465 alien deportations will be suspended another six months. The law expressly provides that aliens breaking our laws "shall be taken into custody" by the Secretary of Labor "and deported." There is absolutely no discretion "not to deport."

The stated excuse in the release is a resolution adopted "unanimously" by the House Committee on Immigration and Naturalization, at which I am reliably informed there were only six members present. But even if every one of the 22 members of that committee had been present such action could not repeal existing law.

On June 15 the House refused to confer on the Secretary of Labor and associates the very discretion just used. The Secretary of Labor, according to the debates on the bill, had repeatedly asked for such a discretion.

Repeatedly, we have been assured by those high in authority that we still have a democracy and a representative form of government divided three ways, as per our written Constitution, into legislative, executive and judicial departments, and yet here is an autocratic usurpation of the legislative function by appointed executive officials.

If this is not a clear instance of dictatorship and the substitution of personal edict for regularly enacted constitutional law, I have never seen or read of such.

J. D. MASON.

A Non-Sectarian Movement.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Please accept my congratulations and thanks for your editorial on "A Popular Campaign." In view of advertising that was very brave of you, and we of the decent element appreciate it. Sectarian lines have been broken down in this campaign. The Protestant clergy and press are urging our people to give the movement whole-hearted support. Again from my heart I thank you.

A. H. THOMPSON.

In Opposition to District Vote

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Several days ago, Mr. Roberts, counsel for the utilities commission and who, with Mr. Donovan, the District auditor, is assisting the Senate District Committee in a study of the District government, suggested over the radio that District citizens present their views on what, if any, changes should be made.

As Mr. Roberts has always been in favor of all kinds of suffrage for the District, and I against any kind so far suggested within my knowledge, I am glad to avail myself of his request. I mention this question of District suffrage because Mr. Roberts has asked: Should the District Commissioners be elected?

I can make my comment shorter by elimination. Thus I am unalterably opposed to so-called National suffrage for the District which would in fact if not in name make the District a "city-State." City-States have never been very successful as political units, and certainly they would not be under our Federal Constitution.

No Congress and no President since the formation of this Nation has favored creating a city-State in the Union; in fact each opposed it. But a few individuals, most of whom were from the District of Columbia, have demanded that Washington be made a city-State.

If one may judge from results—and efficient city government is the one great objective and ideal—the present form with three Commissioners appointed by the President is a vast improvement over the elective form of common council and mayor we had prior to 1871. The Territorial form of government for the District, instituted in 1871, but abolished three years later, was an utter failure.

The present form of District government was the outgrowth of 75 years of municipal suffrage for the District and three years as a Territory. After nearly 70 years the present form's severest critics dwell mostly on denial of suffrage and not on inefficient and dishonest District government.

The peculiar and unique relation existing in the Federal Capital District between the District residents on the one side and the Federal Administration and Congress on the other, suggests the almost utter impossibility of devising a scheme of local government which would still leave original and exclusive power in the Federal Government and yet give the District resident control over the local affairs.

The President must retain the power to appoint District officials and Congress the power of levying taxes and making appropriations to give the best results. To do otherwise would throw us back into the days prior to 1874.

A city-manager form would be a dismal failure unless the set-up gave the city-manager and his local "small council" supreme control over taxation and appropriations.

Senator King's bill proposing to appoint the Engineer Commissioner from civil life instead of from the Army as at present would weaken the present commission form rather than strengthening it in any way. Certainly we could hardly hope to get a more efficient engineer or one less beholden to politicians if appointed from civil life. Election of the Board of Education offers no advantages over the present method of appointment by the Supreme Court of the District; and the appointment of the board by the District Commissioners suggests no improvement. It is my belief that elective boards of education are no more efficient than those appoited.

Therefore I unhesitatingly favor retention of the present set-up of the District government, but suggest two things: 1—that the Board of Commissioners be given greater administrative powers; just what these "greater powers" should be, can be worked out by the Senate Committee at the hearing next fall; 2—that it should not be within the power of the National budget officer to make the local budget conform to the exigencies of the National Government's economic policy. I can see no reason why the National budget officer should not put his okey on or disprove this or that item; but that his judgment should be the controlling factor is neither good business nor fair to the District residents.

The Post Impressionist

Another Prophet?

Postoffice, Thursday.

YOU know how studiously this column avoids everything of a political character. But when politics impinge upon prophecy, we, too, are tempted to trespass.

Here is our country in a period of portentous change—and here is somebody saying that England's historian Macaulay predicted it, over 77 years ago: if not just what we're getting, at least what some sincere folk fear we may get. The column succumbs!

* * *

Mr. James A. Noon, of Portland, Me., is a representative of Ernst & Ernst, accountants and auditors with offices pretty much everywhere. Mr. Noon writes to a friend of ours:

"The enclosed copy of a letter reputed to have been written by Lord Macaulay * * * came to my attention through our New Orleans offices, and I thought you would be interested in reading it."

The "copy" bears date of London, May 23, 1857. It is addressed to the "Hon. H. E. Randall, of New York." And, after a brief introduction, it says:

"I have long been convinced that institutions purely democratic must, sooner or later, destroy liberty or civilization, or both. In Europe, where the population is dense, the effect of such institutions would be almost instantaneous. What happened lately in France is an example. In 1848, a pure democracy was established there. During a short time there was a strong reason to expect a general spoliation, a national bankruptcy, a new partition of the soil, a maximum of prices, a ruinous load of taxation laid on the rich for the purpose of supporting the poor in idleness.

"Such a system would, in 20 years, have made France as poor and as barbarous as the France of Carlovingians. Happily, the danger was averted and now there is a despotism, a silent tribune, an enslaved press; liberty is gone, but civilization has been saved. I have not the smallest doubt that if we had a purely democratic government here, the effect would be the same. Either the poor would plunder the rich, and civilization would perish, or order and prosperity would be saved by a strong military government, and liberty would perish.

"You may think that your country enjoys an exemption from these evils. I will frankly own that I am of a very different opinion. Your fate I believe to be certain, though it is deferred by a physical cause. As long as you have a boundless extent of fertile and unoccupied land, your laboring population will be far more at ease than the laboring population of the Old World, and while this is the case the Jeffersonian policy may continue to exist without causing any fatal calamity. But the time will come when New England will be as thickly populated as Old England. Wages will be as low and will fluctuate as much with you as with us * * * Hundreds of thousands of artisans will assuredly be sometimes out of work * * * Distress everywhere makes the laborer mutinous and discontented and inclines him to listen with eagerness to agitators * * *

"In bad years there is plenty of grumbling here and sometimes a little rioting. But it matters little, for here the sufferers are not the rulers. The supreme power is in the hands of a class * * * deeply interested in the security of property and the maintenance of order. Accordingly, the malcontents are firmly, yet gently, restrained. The bad time is got over without robbing the wealthy to relieve the indigent * * *

"Through such times the United States will have to pass, in the course of the next century, if not of this. How will you pass through them? I heartily wish you a good deliverance, but my reason and my wishes are at war, and I can not help foreboding the worst. It is quite plain that your Government will never be able to restrain a distressed and discontented majority. For with you the majority is the Government and has the rich, who are always a minority, absolutely at its mercy. The day will come when * * * a multitude of people, none of whom has had more than half a breakfast, or expects to have more than half a dinner, will choose the legislature. Is it possible to doubt what sort of legislature will be chosen? On one side is a statesman preaching patience, respect for vested interests, a strict observance of public faith. On the other is a demagogue ranting about tyranny of capitalists * * *

"I seriously apprehend that you will, in some such season of adversity as I have described, do things which will prevent prosperity from returning; that you will act like people in a year of scarcity, devour all the seedcorn and thus make the next year not of scarcity, but of absolute distress. The distress will produce fresh spoliation. There is nothing to stay you. Your constitution is all sail and no anchor. As I said before, when society has entered on this downward progress, either civilization or liberty must perish. Either some Caesar or Napoleon will seize the reins of a government with a strong hand, or your Republic will be as fearfully plundered and laid waste by barbarians in the twentieth century as the Roman Empire was in the fifth, with this difference, that the Huns and Vandals who ravaged the Roman Empire came from without, and that your Huns and Vandals will have been engendered within your own country by your own institutions."

* * *

"Well, well," as Reggie Fortune would say, "it may be." Interesting it certainly is. Certainly, also, Mr. Noon and his informants are sincere believers in the authenticity of the letter. But, for our part, we should like to see the original before pointing to it. And we still have some hopes for America's future.

The Great Dilemma.

THE Democrats have done so much for all of us that I think the least we can do in return is to sympathize with them in their great dilemma about supporting progressives who are up this year and who have gone along with the New Deal. It is a dilemma of rare magnitude. Frequently we read about it in the papers.

BARGERON.

Let's see now, how does it go? There is Senator Hiram Johnson's case which is so easily disposed of because the Democrats in California have decided not to put up a candidate of their own. Ah, but it is quite different in the cases of Senator La Follette and Senator Cutting. Both are New Dealers, more enthusiastically so than many Democrats. They supported Mr. Roosevelt in the campaign and his Administration has been theirs. They are friends.

* * * *

But what to do about supporting them in their campaigns this year? In both Wisconsin and New Mexico Democrats are insisting upon running, all the efforts of the Administration to get them to keep quiet being unavailing. What a problem it presents to the Administration! Shall it go to the support of men being opposed by candidates of the Democratic party? That would be a little unusual, of course. Yet the Administration would certainly like to see Senators La Follette and Cutting retain their places.

Our hearts should go out to the Administration on this; we should be unstinted in our commiserating grief. It just seems like there isn't any compensation for the good. For an Administration that has been so frank and earnest to run into a problem like this makes one wonder about the justice of things. It doesn't seem fair.

The fact of the matter is, of course, that it is not much of a problem for the Administration. It seems to be dealing with it most effectively.

What it is doing is crucifying the Democratic candidates before they start. Every now and then the President or some of his aids confide in the newspaper boys that they are certainly up against a problem in the matter of Messrs. Cutting and La Follette. Yes sir, a real problem and one you boys will easily understand.

The problem you boys see is this: There is no doubt that we want Messrs. Cutting and La Follette returned, but whether we will be able to support them against the Democratic candidate is another matter. You understand! It's embarrassing, it really is.

* * * *

And the newspaper boys go out and innocently write that the President unmistakably wants the reelection of Messrs. Cutting and La Follette, but because of the embarrassment of supporting them against Democrats he hasn't decided just what course he will pursue.

He is already pursuing the course.

If there is any newspaper reader in Wisconsin of New Mexico now who doesn't know that the President would prefer Cutting and La Follette to Democrats he must be very dumb, indeed. This being the case it would seem that the President has already done his job. There is nothing left for him to do.

I don't suppose he would be expected even in the case of direct support to go out to Wisconsin and New Mexico and campaign for the gentlemen. He would hardly under any circumstances go further than make his preference known.

This he has already done. And if after what he has done there are still men in Wisconsin and New Mexico who insist upon running as Democratic candidates they are very hardy men. What they perhaps haven't realized is that the President has counted them out, to the extent that his influence prevails, before they even get into the race.

Mrs. O. M. Riger Funeral Is Held

Westernport, Md., July 1 (Spl.).—Funeral services for Mrs. Theresa Wilhelmina Rizer, widow of Oliver Mortimer Rizer, who died at her home in Piedmont, W. Va., Friday, were held in St. James Episcopal Church this afternoon with the Rev. R. J. Harkins officiating. Interment was in Philos Cemetery.

Mrs. Rizer, who was 70, was born in Wheeling and was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Charles Huth, who resided in Piedmont for many years. She is survived by five children, Mrs. Albert Clark, of Potsdam, N. Y.; Mrs. Clyde Walton, of Washington; Frank Rizer, of Baltimore, and Harry and Charles Rizer, of Piedmont. She also leaves two sisters and two brothers, Mrs. Annie Schramm, of Piedmont; Mrs. Lena Smith, of Westernport; Charles Huth, of Piedmont, and Ernest Huth, of Cumberland.

Mrs. Rizer was a past supreme representative of the Pythian Sisters of West Virginia, having, with the aid of Mrs. Levina Haverfield, of Martinsburg, instituted 30 years ago Calanthe Temple, No. 8, of Piedmont, and Olive Temple, No. 59, of Keyser. She was the second grand chief of West Virginia.

In Judgeship Race.

Westminster, Md., July 1 (Spl.).—J. Albert Mitten, Westminster, has announced his candidacy for judge of the orphans' court of Carroll County in the Republican primaries.

Martinsburg Man Buried.

Chaco's War Drags On After 56 Years

President Hayes' Arbitration Failed to Please, So Bolivia and Paraguay Keep Spilling Blood; Commission Explains Fight.

By Lothrop Stoddard
(Special Correspondent of The Post)

WE usually assume that wars spring from profoundly vital causes. That may be true in most cases, but the present death-grapple between Bolivia and Paraguay in the Chaco seems to have been due mainly to chance and drift. A controversy at first largely academic was left unsettled. Gradually it became embittered, was complicated by new material stakes, aroused popular passions, and finally exploded into war. An excellent instance of the homely adage about "a stitch in time!"

The Chaco is (or, until recently, was) a vast wilderness lying in the heart of the South American continent. Much of it is barren waste. Other portions are grassland, swamp and jungle. Its original inhabitants were nomadic Indian tribes.

In Spanish days, the Chaco was neglected and almost unexplored. When Spain's colonial empire gave place to a series of independent republics, more than a century ago, the Chaco was claimed by Argentina, Bolivia and Paraguay. But these conflicting claims were not pressed vigorously at the start, because none of the claimants was particularly interested in an unknown region then considered almost worthless.

At length, Argentine and Paraguay submitted their rival claims to arbitration, the arbiter being none other than the then President of the United States, Rutherford B. Hayes. In 1878, President Hayes assigned to Paraguay the southeastern corner of the Chaco, where it comes down in a broad wedge to the confluence of the Paraguay and Pilcomayo Rivers. So far as Argentina and Paraguay were concerned, the trouble was over.

Then Paraguay and Bolivia Start Their Long Struggle.

AS BETWEEN Paraguay and Bolivia, however, trouble had only started. Bolivia claimed the whole Chaco, including the region assigned Paraguay by the Hayes award. But Bolivia had never occupied or controlled the Chaco, which ran right up to the Paraguay River just across from the Republic of Paraguay's chief cities, including the capital. Still, at this time Bolivia was not vitally concerned about the Chaco, because the settled part of Bolivia lies far to the westward in the Andean plateaus above the Pacific Ocean. So about all Bolivia did for the moment was to reassert her historic claims and insist that they were not affected by the Hayes arbitration between Paraguay and Argentina, to which Bolivia had not been a party.

Soon after this, however, Bolivia got mixed up in a war between Chile and Peru, on the latter's side. Chile beat both countries and Bolivia lost her frontage on the Pacific. Become thus a landlocked country, Bolivia looked eastward and revived her claims to a region which would give her access to the Atlantic Ocean, the Paraguay River being navigable for ships of considerable size. The Chaco had thus become a "live" issue.

It got steadily livelier as time went on. Paraguay had begun to develop the Chaco from her end; or, rather, foreign capital went into the Chaco to develop it under Paraguayan auspices. The Chaco jungles are filled with quebracho wood, a valuable source of tannin. This and other projects gave Paraguay a sizeable stake in a formerly worthless region.

While Paraguay was thus penetrating the Chaco from the east, Bolivia was entering it from the west, likewise mainly through the medium of foreign capital. Finally, traces of oil were discovered in the Chaco, thereby investing it with alluring possibilities.

Writers in Both Nations Add Fuel to the Flames.

BY now, public opinion in Bolivia and Paraguay was taking a keen interest in the interminable dispute. In both countries, controversial books were published, magazine articles were written, biting editorials were penned—and foreign interests did their propaganda bit. Under these incitements, popular passions rose, politicians talked about the national honor, and generals urged preparedness for grave eventualities. In short, war-clouds loomed on the Chaco horizon.

The sharpening crisis between Bolivia and Paraguay made their neighbors highly uneasy. So diplomacy took a hand. First, South American governments tried to frame a compromise; then Pan-American good offices were enlisted, with the United States taking a prominent part therein.

All in vain. Some bloody "incidents" between Bolivian and Paraguayan patrols in the Chaco were adjusted and an outbreak was postponed. But at length the inevitable happened. In June, 1932, heavy fighting broke out. Both Bolivia and Paraguay mobilized their armies, and for two long years war has raged with ever-increasing ferocity.

In the spring of 1933, the League of Nations came actively into the picture. Of course, the league had followed the struggle closely from the start, especially since both Bolivia and Paraguay were members. But neither nation had brought the controversy before the league under the covenant; in fact, for the first year of fighting there was no declaration of war. Also, the league council hesitated to take action while Pan-American diplomatic efforts were going on.

In May, 1933, Paraguay formally declared war on Bolivia and the latter promptly protested to the League Council under the terms of the Covenant. Also, it had become evident that Pan-American peace efforts were futile. The Council of the League, therefore, dispatchd a commission to the scene of hostilities, much as the Lytton Commission was sent to Manchuria. This commission spent several months investigating the situation and trying to get the combatants to stop fighting and have the dispute adjudicated. The commission's official report, copies of which have just reached Washington, gives a most illuminating survey both of the problem itself and of the methods employed by the league to stop a war in mid-course.

Commission Fails to Halt War, but It Has a Plan.

THE commission did not succeed in stopping the war, but it claims to have clarified the issues by consulting with both the combatants, and to have framed a draft treaty which, if signed by Bolivia and Paraguay, would not only avert the horrors of further warfare but also would lay the foundations for a mutually honorable and equitable settlement.

Briefly summarized, the treaty would ensure immediate cessation of hostilities and mutual demobilization. The Chaco would be provisionally divided into two zones roughly corresponding to the present military occupations. These zones would be policed by Bolivia and Paraguay respectively, with a narrow neutral strip between. The controversy itself would be referred to the World Court. While both litigants would retain the right to present their maximum claims, the draft treaty provides that, "in a spirit of conciliation," Bolivia would modify her uncompromising attitude regarding the portion of the Chaco awarded Paraguay by the Hayes arbitration, while Paraguay in turn would agree to be more accommodating in her claims on the extreme north of the Chaco; claims which, if successfully upheld, would shut Bolivia off from any outlet on the Paraguay River and hence would debar her from access to the sea.

In its summary the commission's report stresses the fact that, by reason of the clarification of issues, "the Chaco conflict, the persistence of which had gradually created a sense of discouragement, as if it had been an irremediable catastrophe, could be settled by conciliation and law. The replies from the two governments have shown that the draft treaty represents an equitable proposal, carefully devised in all its parts for the purpose of finding the exact point at which, with a little will to peace," diametrically opposite theses and aspirations could be made to meet, and that any additional concessions to the demands of either party could only have increased the divergence between them.

As we know, the "little will to peace" has not materialized. War passions are still rampant in both Bolivia and Paraguay, so the war itself continues—perhaps to mutual ruin and bankruptcy. Yet the commission's report has undoubtedly affected world opinion. It certainly influenced this country to impose its embargo upon further sales of war materials to the fighting nations. At least, everybody knows, or can know, clearly what the war is about.

Maryland Wheat Production Good

Reports Reveal Yield of 30 Bushels an Acre.

Hagerstown, Md., July 1 (Spl.).—Bearing out predictions that the wheat crop here would be larger than at first anticipated, farmers, who started harvesting last week, reported yields averaging 30 to 35 bushels an acre.

The corn crop in western Maryland also is promising, but rain will be needed within the next week, farmers report.

The present hot weather was declared by farmers to be ideal for harvesting of wheat, as it ripened quickly, and the dry weather likewise was a benefit.

3 Injured, Burned In Railroad Blast

Gasoline Motor Explodes on Norfolk & Western.

Charles Town, W. Va., July 1.—Three men were injured, two seriously and one probbaly fatally, when a railway gasoline motor car they were riding exploded on the Norfolk & Western tracks here today. They were rushed to the Charles Town General Hospital.

Charles Hite, of Antietam, Md., 45, the most seriously injured, suffered cuts, severe burns and possible internal injuries. S. G. Darr, 66, of Shenandoah Junction, was pinned beneath the car after the explosion with his clothes afire. He was released by George K. Norman, 45, of Hagerstown, Md., who extinguished the flames only after Darr had been seriously burned. Darr is in a critical condition. Norman was burned about the hands, in addition to suffering severe lacerations in aiding his coworkers.

The men were testing switches when the accident occurred.

Services for Mr. Caricofe Held at Bridgewater

Bridgewater, Va., July 1 (Spl.).—Funeral services for Andrew J. Caricofe, 55, well-known farmer of the Spring Creek community, who died Friday, were held here this afternoon, with the Rev. A. S. Thomas officiating.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Mollie Hisey Caricofe; six children, Mrs. Grace Hunter, of Marshall, Va.; Blanche, Christine, Wade and William, at home; one sister, Mrs. Arthur Wenger, of Spring Creek; two brothers, D. A. Caricofe, Washington, D. C., and W. L. Caricofe, of Hopewell.

Fraternity Head Named.

Hagerstown, Md., July 1 (Spl.).—Peregrin Wroth 3d, son of Dr. Peregrin Wroth, jr., of Hagerstown, a senior this fall at Brown University, has been elected president of the Phi Gamma Delta Fraternity at that university.

Hot Weather Fiction

HERE'S a tale to take your mind off the mercury bubbling quietly at the top of the thermometer. It's about a mild little English school teacher, shy as a trout and equal to three Einsteins in mathematical power, who hits on an invention to shake the world. By some gadget or other he can send out a beam which de-magnetizes every magnet.

THEO. HALL.

You think that's small potatoes? Well, magnets are at the heart of all street cars, buses, automobiles, electric trains, telephones, airplanes, generating stations, transformers, and railroad signals. In other words, our professor can just about say "yes" or "no" to the whole industrial system.

Luckily, he has ideals. The race for armaments sickens him. So he pens a little note to the London Times to the effect that England will jolly well quick decide to do something better with munitions money, or else—.

What the professor does, and the absolute hay his invention makes of London will keep your thumbs fumbling with C. S. Forester's "The Peacemaker" (Little Brown, $2) throughout an evening. A crackajack yarn!

* * * *

If you get the Forester taste, you might go back to his historical thriller about a 6,000-pound bronze cannon in the Spanish Peninsular wars against Napoleon. It's called "The Gun," same publisher and price.

But there's plenty of fiction this season for all tastes. Are you a Janeite—that is, a Jane Austen idolator? Not unlike her pastiches of provincial life is a new novel by Somerset Maugham's niece, Kate Mary Bruce. "Duck's Back" (John Day, $2.50) tells about a quite horridly spoilt American girl who messes up the lives of a sober British family. She herself gets along as pretty as you please. The tale is remarkably well written. A note printed behind the title page informs us, with no other point but snootiness, that Mrs. Bruce's London house (duly street-numbered) once belonged to a mistress of Charles II. While I'm speaking of such intrusions upon the text of a book, I'd like to go on record with thumbs down for a habit certain publishers (notably Doubleday Doran) have of printing blurb material on the leaf before the title page. It's as annoying, and out of place, as cracker crumbs in bed.

But to our muttons. Behind the provoking title—"Mice for Amusement" (Dutton, $2)—you will find a tale of English high society decked out in the most popular manner with lush and lively incidents. Baroness von Hutten, who once rang the bell with "Pam" to the tune of 570,000 copies, knows her audience.

For a right-about-face in setting and mood, try George Dixon Snell III's "The Great Adam" (Caxton Printers, $2.50). It's a powerfully naturalistic account of the rise to fortune of a small-town Western banker. From the same Idaho press comes Nancy Noon Kendall's "The New House" ($2.50), which tells of a boy on the Northwest Coast who grows up to revolt against his coddling and who founds a world of his own among an isolated colony of picturesque Finns. A good story, but told in a "literary" manner. The namesake of this press, by the way, must be turning over in his grave at the firm's typographical sense.

Seven heroines, the Hart sisters, give a running start to Inez Haynes (Mrs. Will) Irwin's "Strange Harvest" (Bobbs Merrill, $2.50). Mrs. Irwin's skill keeps up the momentum. Following these women through their long and diverse lives (set in Massachusetts in the Victorian era), we arrive to the conclusion which Julia Ward Howe once expressed in an age-muted but confident voice: "Life is like a cup of coffee—the sugar is all at the bottom!"

Highly romantic and pleasingly witty is G. M. Attenborough's "Honeymoon House" (Stokes, $2). It's England again, with ladies and duchesses, canons and Oxford undergraduates—all most innocuously pleasant. "Until I Close My Eyes" (Ballou, $2), by Allen R. Taft, dilates upon the problem of Jewish-Gentile marriage with great seriousness and a rather over-intense drama. It probably won't hold you until we have a cool spell. But at least it offers a foot-down on the terra firma of Brooklyn before we once again take off romantic England in the pages of Alice Grant Rosman's "Somebody Must" (Minton Balch, $2). Here's all sweetness and good works. "Somebody Must" may be interpreted as "somebody must lend a hand to the old folks." For Kay Flete, just out of an Oxford woman's college, finds her father and mother at sixes and sevens. She settles down to straighten things out, and, oh yes, she finds romance. Very dilute.

* * * *

After such a diet, blessed are the "Westerns." In "Smugglers' Ranch" (Macrae Smith, $2), Charles H. Snow tells about a sheriff who is going to lose the next election hands down unless he brings in, dead or alive, one Patricio O'Higgins. That marvelous sobriquet covers a distinctly bad hombre, and the resulting action proves quite satisfying. Turning to the great Northwest, we find that the odd topic of horse racing plays a part in Ridgwell Cullum's "The Flaming Wilderness" (Lippincott, $2). A half-breed orphan falls in love with his benefactor's daughter. She has other ideas.

Rather Mild as "Westerns" Go.

The real prize on today's list, for a reason soon to be obvious, is William Byron Mowery's "Challenge of the North" (Little Brown, $2). To be sure, it's a very grand yarn about an adventurous prospector and his bride who fly a plane over the north country in an effort to protect their gold mine against the big "interests." But I commend to you the exquisite pleasure, these days, of reading snowdrifts, blizzards and frozen tundra.

The Once Over

Probation for Lawyers.

At a meeting of the joint conference on legal education in New York recently it was proposed that the bar be purged of discreditable lawyers by requiring all young attorneys to serve two years "on probation."

* * * *

The difficulty about this plan is that a young lawyer gets so few cases during his first two years he would have to be judged entirely by his conduct in the face of hunger.

* * * *

But two years are hardly enough to judge a young barrister in these days when the profession is so overcrowded that the only way he can get into court is to pay somebody to sue him.

* * * *

Luther Blank: We favor giving this young man a full membership. In common with thousands of other young lawyers he had so little business during his first two years that your committee could judge him only by his general appearance asleep in a chair and his reaction to money. His hysteria when shown a dollar by a committeeman disguised as a client was so mild that we think he will be a credit to the bar.

* * * *

John Smith: We don't know what to say about this young man. His case is a most baffling one. After waiting 18 months for a case, he finally got a client who offered him $5,000 to represent him in a fraud case. Mr. Smith refused to take the case until he first ascertained whether the client was a crook or not. Ethically he rates 100 per cent but we are afraid he would embarrass the older and bigger attorneys.

* * * *

Charles Jones: We asked the young man three questions:

1. Would you deliberately misrepresent the facts to a court of law?
2. Would you sacrifice your moral principles for money?
3. If a client offered you a retainer of $50,000, would you be concerned about the merit of his case?

The young man skipped the first two questions and answered the third thusly: Yes, but for $60,000 I would overlook everything.

We favor another two years' probation at least.

* * * *

Edward Brown: This man opened an office exactly two years ago on probation. We visited him this week and found him so emaciated he weighed less than 100 pounds. We think this prima facie evidence of superior honesty as a practicing attorney, and favor full membership and a plate of hot soup.

Handicapped.

During the British open a caddy employed by Gene Sarazen quit in the midst of play, complaining that the bag of clubs was too heavy. If this idea spreads to America a lot of beginners at golf are going to have to learn the game with nothing in excess of 50 or 60 implements.

Mr. Pecora is to head the board to control the stock exchange under the new rules. How about abandoning the custom of opening the market with a gong and opening it with an "Answer yes or no!"

1934 Tax Rate Is Unchanged

$1 Charge Is Maintained in Carroll County as State Cuts.

Westminster, Md., July 1 (Spl.). A tax rate of $1 on the $100, the same as last year, was announced yesterday by the Carroll County commissioners. The commissioners said, however, that a reduction of 3 cents had been effected in the State tax rate, making the new tax 22 cents.

The $1 tax rate is expected to produce total receipts for the county of $392,933.15, which is slightly lower than last year owing to depreciation of stocks and bonds.

The largest slash made in this year's budget was in appropriations for the board of education which were reduced from $208,000 to $199,000. A budget calling for $200,000 was submitted to the commissioners by the school board.

Other appropriations which show a reduction in this year's budget include interest on outstanding obligations and commissioner's salaries. Only $15,000 was levied for interest on road bonds this year as compared with $27,000 in 1933, while commissioner's salaries have been reduced from $3,000 to $2,500.

The only increase contained in the budget was an additional amount of $1,000 appropriated to the Children's Aid Society.

Birds Learn Only When They Must Fly or Go Bump

By Robert Quillen

The young people who deserve pity are not those who begin life in poverty, but the victims of parental folly who are weakened by too much coddling.

One of these, typical of his kind, recently got into newspaper headlines by way of the divorce court. His wife quit him because his inordinate selfishness required more humoring and petting than anyself-respecting woman could supply.

He was not a weakling by nature. He began life with no handicap except the unwise love of his parents.

They would not permit him to grow up. Having no other children to share their affection, they gave their whole attention to the business of spoiling him.

They protected him from rough children and rough weather. They never permitted him to make a decision. They kept him as dependent as an unweaned calf.

Unfortunately, he developed a "voice" and sang often in church, where the too-generous praise of motherly women completed his undoing. He purred like a cat when they stroked him with a compliment.

When he married and escaped the parental roof at the age of 30, he was no more self-reliant than a normal boy of 12. Self-centered, sensitive, soft, conceited and easily alarmed, he was a typical "sissy."

In some ways, perhaps, he is an exception; but every youngster who is petted and shielded and coddled from adolescence to maturity retains in some measure the characteristics of a spoiled infant.

It is human nature to accept the softest cushion available and make no more effort than circumstance requires, and few ever learn to stand alone while they have opportunity to lean.

It isn't a kindness to make life easy for Junior. It is cruelty. At best it robs him of the world's respect; at the worst it dooms him to failure and shame.

Where the only rule is root hog or die, the kindest parents are those who teach Junior the art of rooting.

Daily Talk About Books and Authors

July.

This was originally the fifth month of the year and was named by the Roman Quintilis. But in later years they changed the name in honor of Julius Caeser, who was born in this month, and the new name became generally adopted about the time of his death, 44 B. C. The Anglo-Saxons called it the haymonth; but if the Middle West does not get more rain pretty soon, there will not be any hay in July, 1934.

John Adams thought the Second of July was going to be the National holiday in future years; on July 3, 1776, he wrote to his wife.

"Yesterday the greatest question was decided which ever was debated in America; and a greater perhaps never was, nor will be, decided among men. A resolution was passed without one dissenting colony, that those United Colonies are, and of right ought to be, free and independent States. . . .

"The second day of July, 1776, will be the most memorable epoch in the history of America. I am apt to believe that it will be celebrated by succeeding generations as the great anniversary festival. It ought to be commemorated as the day of deliverance, by solemn acts of devotion to God Almighty. It ought to be solemnized with pomp and parade, with shows, games, sports, guns, bells, bonfires, and illuminations, from one end of this continent to the other, from this time foward for evermore."

On July 2, 1881, President James A. Garfield, was shot at the railway station in Washington, by an unbalanced assassin named Charles J. Guiteau. The President was going to attend the commencement exercises of Williams College, where he was graduated. He was talking on the platform with the Secretary of State, James G. Blaine, when Guiteau fired two shots into his back. He died on September 19. His son retired this year from the Presidency of Williams.

The fact that most children love December more than July was well expressed by the poet, W. M. Praed.

"I remember, I remember,
How my childhood fleeted by—
The mirth of its December,
And the warmth of its July."

Stocks Turn Dull as Half Of 1934 Passes

Summer Lull and Federal Control Uncertainties Reduce Trading.

New York, July 1 (AP).—The stock market, caught between the uncertainties of summer business trends, and the inauguration of Federal control, ended the first-half of 1934 this week in a state of lethargy such as Wall street had not seen in more than 10 years.

Business news was mixed and confusing. Steel production was drastically curtailed after completion of second-quarter contracts, and prices of automotive steel were reduced, textiles and some other consumers goods lines were dull.

But automobile production was strikingly accelerated; the week's electric power production figures showed a contraseasonal gain boosting the total to the highest in three years, and the movement of freight expanded to close to the spring peak.

Control Board Awaited.

Wall street anxiously waited all the week for President Roosevelt to announce the appointments to the Securities Exchange Commission, which brought securities trading under control of the Government as of midnight last night, but the announcement was delayed until the end of the week.

Professional activity in the market had been almost at a standstill all the month, and it was expected that it would remain extremely meager until the Commission has been operating long enough to make it clear what it considers legitimate trading and what it regards as savoring of manipulation.

With a turnover for the week of a bare 3,000,000 shares—that would have been considered modest for a single session in June of 1933—trading in the stock exchange kept at the lowest levels since 1923 or 1924. The Standard Statistics Co. index of 90 shares held to the extreme range of 1.5 points, and finishing at 77.9, was off two-tenths of a point for the week.

Nash Motors Rally.

Nash Motors rallied more than a point on the restoration of a quarterly dividend of 25 cents on the stock. Steel shares were steady in face of forecasts of another sharp reduction in steel operations next week. Leading rails firmed, with Santa Fe, New York Central and Pennsylvania up fractionally to about a point. U. S. Tobacco touched a new 1934 peak at 111 on a spurt of 4 points in a single transfer of 100 shares.

Chrysler, General Motors and Auburn rallied fractionally. Cram estimated automobile production last week increased 10,606 units to 80,936. Retail automobile sales were reported to be holding better than had been expected recently.

Wheat, which closed ¼ to ½ cent a bushel lower, was an exception to firmness in grain prices. Corn made an extreme gain of a cent. Cotton edged 35 to 45 cents a bale higher. Silver and rubber markets were closed.

Packers Report Hog Price Rise

Institute Survey Finds 40 Per Cent June Increase.

Chicago, July 1 (AP).—An increase of more than 40 per cent in hog prices in June was recorded today by the Institute of American Meat Packers.

In the domestic market smoked hams showed an "unusually strong" demand, the institute noted, with cooked hams a close second and bacon also more popular.

Fresh pork was strong in the middle of the month, but the demand fell off toward the close, with the hot weather.

Export trade in all forms was "only fair," the report added.

Byrd Battles Levies On American Apple

Winchester, Va., July 1 (AP).—Proposed new restrictions on the importation of apples into England will be the subject of a conference this week between Senator Harry Flood Byrd and Secretary of State Cordell Hull, if the senator can arrange it.

He telegraphed Secretary Hull asking him to do what ever was possible through diplomatic channels to avoid a heavier English duty on apples.

Senator Byrd said the proposed 7 shilling duty would make apple exports from here prohibitive. Twenty per cent of the Virginia crop has been shipped to England for many years.

Memorial Honors Pioneer Virginian

Danville, Va., July 1 (Spl.).—A large assemblage today gathered at Virgilina, a hamlet on the North Carolina-Virginia State line, to unveil a memorial to the late R. S. Hite, progenitor of a large sectional family.

County church choirs were massed for a music program. The Rev. Jesse Hite, pastor of Keen Street Baptist Church, delivered the eulogy of his father.

R. S. Hite was a descendant of Yost Hite, believed to be the first white settler in the Shenandoah Valley and who was the first secretary of the Phi Beta Kappa Fraternity of William and Mary.

Robey's Review

Finance Economics Business

By Ralph West Robey.

From the point of view of long term effects it is questionable if any measure passed by the last session of Congress exceeds in importance the Frazier-Lemke bill just signed by the President. To an unusual degree it is a law the effects of which will not be limited to those portions of the economic system it directly concerns. This is because it makes a basic alteration in the relationships between debtors and creditors—an alteration that will tend to undermine the confidence that is essential to a modern credit economy.

The bill itself, it will be recalled, provides a means whereby a farmer with a mortgage on his property is enabled to declare in effect a moratorium for five years. He does this by having himself declared bankrupt by a Federal court. As a part of this process his farm is appraised and thereafter his relation with his creditors is based upon this appraised value.

In the first year he pays 1 per cent of such appraised value. In the second and third years he pays 2½ per cent, and in the fourth and fifth years, 5 per cent. During the sixth year he either has to pay the balance or permit his property to be taken over for the benefit of his creditors. For five years, however, he is permitted to remain in possession of his farm with virtually no payments.

Bill Reverses Usual Debtor-Creditor Relation.

Such an arrangement, it should be noted, goes directly contrary to established practice. Heretofore if a debtor was unable to meet his obligations it has been the legal right of the creditors to force a readjustment and settlement. If the debt was secured by a mortgage such readjustment would come through foreclosure and liquidation. If there were no such special collateral the debtor would be declared bankrupt, his assets liquidated and the proceeds distributed among the creditors on the basis of their priority.

The effect of such a legal procedure has been to assure creditors a right which made it possible for them to lend money. Of course it furnished no guarantee against loss, but at least it enabled them to measure the risk they were taking with greater or lesser accuracy. They could feel sure that as long as the debtor had sufficient assets to cover his debts, they could force payment of his obligations. They knew that the borrower was the first line of defense against losses. Only after he had used all his assets to meet his indebtedness would those from whom he had borrowed money be called upon to absorb losses.

Creditors Forced to Scale Debts and Interest.

Under the Frazier-Lemke bill this relationship is reversed and the creditors are made the first line of defense against losses. The mortgages they hold on farms no longer enable them to protect themselves through foreclosure. On the contrary, they make it possible for the farmer to force his creditors to write off as a loss a part of the debt and then to carry the rest at a rate of interest—1 per cent— that is less than one-half as high as the Government itself has to pay when it borrows money for a comparable period.

The defense the President makes for the bill is that he has "sufficient faith in the honesty of the overwhelming majority of farmers to believe that they will not evade the payment of just debts." Perhaps this faith is justified. It remains true, nevertheless, that if one is to lend money he needs something more than the assurance that the "overwhelming majority" of borrowers will try to pay their debts. He needs the assurance that in case he is unfortunate and lends to one that does not belong to this majority, he can protect himself. The Frazier-Lemke bill eliminates this possibility. As such it is a body blow at the foundation of a credit economy.

Lead Declines $5 Per Ton as Buying Wanes

Zinc Gains $2 as Demand Revives; Copper Quiet; Tin Fluctuates.

New York, July 1 (AP).—Lead declined $5 per ton in the past week owing to poor consuming demand influenced by an unfavorable view of the May statistics, which reported an increase in refined stocks to the largest figure on record.

Buying interest developed at the decline and late in the week demand was said to have absorbed daily smelter intake with the undertone about steady.

On the other hand zinc advanced $2 per ton on moderate demand, as well as firmer sellers' views owing to reports from the Joplin district that a program of mine curtailment would go into effect beginning July 2, following recent large output which had caused consumers to adopt a cautious policy. Prospects for declining steel operations also accounted for some of the earlier unsettlement.

Copper Is Quiet.

Copper was quiet and unchanged at the basis of 9 cents for Blue Eagle delivered in the Connecticut valley. Business continued to be confined largely to small lots to fabricating subsidiaries and the main interest was centered in copper code authority activities, including the securing of temporary buying contracts from United States consumers.

The total obtained thus far is said to represent more than 90 per cent of current copper consumption. Foreign demand was small. Reports by the American Bureau of Metal Statistics indicated that foreign consumption of copper is steadily expanding.

Tin fluctuated irregularly, but within narrow limits, in a quiet market. Consumers were said to be limiting purchases because of the less favorable outlook for third-quarter steel production, although tin plate operations were estimated in the trade as being maintained at 70 per cent of capacity during the current week.

Antimony Is Unchanged.

Antimony was unchanged. Early in the week a slightly easier undertone reflected pressure to sell spots, but firmer conditions were reported later owing to higher Chinese cables and the appearance of bids from Europe.

Sharp reductions of about 12 points in steel ingot production reflected the completion of second quarter specifications, which must be shipped by tonight.

The trade viewed third-quarter prospects with some uncertainty and activity was expected to be dependent upon the amount of stocking during the second quarter, consuming requirements and demand from railroads and the building trades. Price reductions on some grades of sheets have been announced, effective July 7.

Trade Levels Well Sustained, Reports Reveal

New York, July 1.—In its weekly summary of the general business situation, the Standard Statistics Co., of New York, currently comments as follows:

"Broad-scale indexes, such as freight car loadings, continue to give a good picture of sustained business activity, in spite of the seasonal downtrend which is now a normal condition. Operations at the steel mills, however, have had a severe dip of approximately 20 per cent, because of the completion of orders placed in anticipation of higher prices and possible labor troubles. Activity in this and related industries will depend in considerable measure on the success of the automobile trade in working off its accumulated stock of cars, a process which evidently is being hastened by recent price reductions.

"Output of electricity is being well maintained, although it is now little above the level for a year ago, when production was rising rapidly. Stocks of gasoline have declined for 13 weeks, reflecting largely the pick-up in consumption. The outlook for autumn retail trade also has been measurably improved by rains in the drought areas, as well as by higher farm prices and Government relief.

"Broadly considered, recent business trends have been more reassuring than otherwise, and nothing is foreseen in the nearby outlook to disturb confidence."

Cotton Prices Gain 25 Points During Week

Cotton prices advanced about 25 points during the week. The advance was largely attributed to continued drought and high temperatures in the West, reports of boll weevil infestation in other sections and to the anticipation of Government buying of cotton for relief purposes, along with advances in prices of other commodities and securities.

These factors making for higher prices were partly counterbalanced by reduced activity in the cotton cloth markets, by the prospects of decreased domestic consumption and continued low exports during the remainder of this season.

Cotton Prices Higher.

The average of prices for middling ⅞-inch cotton quoted in the ten designated markets on June 29 was 12.17 cents, compared with 11.94 cents on June 22, and 9.97 cents on the corresponding day last season. Grade premiums and discounts were the same as for the previous week with the ten market average for good middling and strict middling, 47 and 33 points more than middling, and for strict low middling and low middling, 38 and 79 points less than middling.

The premiums for middling 15-16 and 1-inch as quoted by the six markets remained the same as during the previous week at 21 and 59 points more than middling ⅞-inch. The quotation in the Memphis market during the week for middling 1 1-16 inches was reduced 15 points to 115 points on middling ⅞-inch, middling 1⅛ inches was unchanged at 155, and middling 1 3-16 inches was reduced 30 points to 275.

Important Southern spot cotton markets reported increased inquiries compared with the previous week for both foreign and domestic accounts but sales were restricted by the scarcity of offerings at acceptable prices. Reported sales of spot cotton by the ten markets for the week amounted to about 29,000 bales compared with about 25,000 bales the previous week, and although this week's sales were considerably smaller than in the corresponding week last season when they were unusually large, amounting to about 98,000 bales, they were well above the average for several preceding seasons.

Mill Inquiries Increase.

New England cotton markets, especially in the Fall River and Providence areas, reported increased inquiries compared with the previous week, with sales however, restricted. Transactions were largely confined to the lower range of grades in the lengths 1 inch up to and including 1 3-16 inches. Grades above Middling in all lengths were reported more or less neglected.

Southern mill centers reported slightly more inquiries than during the previous week for both prompt and deferred shipments. In some cases deferred shipments extended through May, 1935. Grades and staples mostly inquired for were Strict Low Middling, Middling and Strict Middling in the lengths ⅞-inch up to and including 1 1-32 inches.

World consumption of American cotton during May amounting to 1,135,000 bales, according to the New York Cotton Exchange, was practically unchanged from April, but about 205,000 bales less than during May, 1933. Consumption abroad of American cotton declined during May contrary to the usual seasonal tendency. Total world consumption of American cotton from August 1 to June 1, amounted to 11,621,000 bales.

Norfolk Woman Choked And Robbed of Purse

Police were furnished at once with a good description of the thief, given by Mrs. Moler to Detectives J. L. Stanley and H. L. Dickens. The purse contained $10 in cash, two rings, and personal articles, Mrs. Moler reported.

Four Are in Hospital After Virginia Crash

Danville, Va., July 1 (Spl.).—Four persons were in Memorial Hospital today following a collision of two automobiles last night near Shady Grove.

Miss Katherine Davis, William G. Daniel, of Pelham, N. C., and Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Evans were those injured.

Virginia Makes Good Progress In Rum Trade

Board Draws Attack for Delay in Opening Dispensaries.

By J. K. Irving, Jr.

Lynchburg, Va., July 1.—The Virginia Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, all considered, has not made a bad start in operating chain liquor dispensaries in the State. It is being heartily condemned for so-called unnecessary delay in opening stores and for favoring tidewater sections. That will be forgotten as stores quench thirsts.

Thus far Roanoke and Lynchburg are the only "back-country" cities enoying repeal. Charlottesville, apparently next in line, has its problem of location settled, but remains in a "lather" over deliberation of Board Member McCall Frazier, who promises action in due season. There still is talk of how much revenue the State is losing because of links yet to be welded. Former Gov. Pollard continues to be complimented for not having included in his tentative budget estimate the probable earnings of the stores for the fiscal year.

Bootlegger Jolted.

Nevertheless, it must be admitted that the bootlegger is getting a considerable jolt on the jaw. He admits it freely and proves it by making purchases from the stores to retail by the drink, thus reducing a well established business to the primitive methods of peddling. But that does not mean that the bootlegger is whipped, for the stores are young yet. The immediate popularity may not be permanent. The present trend toward "going legal" may be a passing fad. One thing is true, though; the situation possibly will be altered in time. Bootleg quality has not fallen, though the illegal price has.

Then there is the new, but ever increasing, cry of competition from venders of wine. Their objections seems to be well founded. They must make their purchases, of course, from the ABC Board. In their own retail field, they are confronted by State stores stocked with vintages. It is a condition, the wine licencees point out, wherein the board is a wholesaler at headquarters and a retailer wherever there is a dispensary. Except that the State makes its profit when it sells to the merchant and when it serves the public, price competition does not enter the equation as a major contention. The list is fairly standard wherever the State sticker is affixed.

Retailers View.

The principal argument of the retailers is that customers are naturally inclined to make their purchases where they buy hard liquor. It would be the same way with, "off premises" beer, they declare, if beer were stocked in dispensaries. The public has not yet been sufficiently educated to the idea of having its wine dropped in the basket along with the family groceries. On the other hand, attention is called to the fact that few merchants carry, or can afford to carry, the wide variety offered on the State list. Dealers make the retort that they will when their trade develops; that the State is placing an obstacle in the way of development. It now appears probable that the matter will eventually be thrashed out.

Altogether, it seems that the kinks will be straightened out, one after the other.

Meanwhile, Virginia's liquor establishments are doing a land-office business. Appointments of store personnel, while they are strictly political, have not turned out to be political sinecures. One sweating young worker in a Lynchburg store was heard to remark a few days ago:

"I always thought a political job was a cinch; it ain't."

It is much too early to brand the Virginia system as remotely approaching the ideal, but so far it is getting along "as well as might be expected." Better and cheaper liquors combined with something like normal service might keep the business on its feet.

Queen Anne Tax Rate Is Slashed to 78 Cents

Centreville, Md., July 1 (Spl.).—Queen Anne County's tax rate has dropped to the lowest point in this century as the board of commissioners announced a 10-cent cut, bringing the combined county and school tax rate to 78 cents on the $100, nearly half the rate of four years ago.

The school rate for 1934 will be 47 cents and the county rate reaches the all-time low of 31 cents. The combined State, county and school rate will be $1, the State rate being set at 22 cents.

Klemm to Seek Gambrill's Seat

Mt. Rainier Democrat Is in House Race 3d Time.

Dr. John William Klemm, Democrat, of Mount Rainier, a candidate for the House of Representatives from the Fifth Maryland District in the 1928 and 1932 elections, has filed his candidacy for a third time.

The Congressional seat now is filled by Representative Stephen W. Gambrill, of Laurel, who, it is expected, will seek reelection. Mr. Gambrill also is a Democrat.

During the last two elections the party ticket has consisted only of Dr. Klemm and Mr. Gambrill.

Radio Waves and Ripples

LETTER to the editor:

"If you've ever witnessed a Presidential fireside chat broadcast, you won't be interested in this, but if you haven't . . .

"White House oval room . . . the humidity is terrific . . . the scene almost that bad . . . floor carpeted with wires running in all directions . . . amplifiers and battery boxes everywhere . . . microphones in profusion . . . six of different shapes and sizes on the desk from which the President speaks . . . 15 newspaper cameras lined up in a semicircle . . . six sound cameras and numberless Kleig lights . . . 30 or 40 radio, moving picture and newspaper men running in and out, making preliminary arrangements . . . the radio station managers are there, the program directors, the broadcast system's public events representatives, the engineers and control men with duplicate equipment, to guard against mechanical failure, and, yes, three announcers . . . Trout (WJSV) gets his cue to start his introductory announcement at 9:30 p. m.; Smith (WRC-WMAL), 9:30.15, and yours truly (WOL) at 9:30.05. Each of us has continuities of different length, but each has to be timed so that at a given moment all will say, 'Ladies and gentlemen, the President of the United States . . . try this some time . . .

"Trout, Smith and Yours Truly go into an adjoining room, away from the turmoil, and try to make our announcements run out at the proper time. Smith snaps a stop watch and each reads his announcement aloud. But at the finish we don't click; somebody has too many words or the announcement was read too slowly or too fast, and so we try again and, Eureka, we all finish at the same time!

"Someone announces the approach of the President, who is being wheeled into the Oval Room by an attendant. Everybody stands at respectful attention as he comes into the room. A cheery "Hello" and everybody is at ease again. Mr. Roosevelt makes you feel that way. It is now 9:30 p. m. Bob Trout gets his cue . . . then my control man gives me the wink . . . presently Carlton Smith takes up and, believe me, now you are hearing something, but you can't understand a thing, because each of us is trying to talk loud enough to keep the other's voice from feeding into the other's microphone—without success . . . Smith moves quietly across the room to an outer office with a copy of the President's speech in his hand . . . Trout sits down behind the microphone and looks bored . . . I'm beginning to get a headache and not an aspirin in sight. . . . The President has concluded his speech and again we have the triple vocalizing of the announcers. . . . Thank goodness that is brief, but it is only the signal for more bedlam.

"The President reaches for a glass of water as engineers swarm around his desk disconnecting and removing microphones preparatory to the taking of pictures. The mikes have CBS, ABS and NBC printed on them, and these networks would like photos showing those letters, but the White House says no. So they are removed. And out of nowhere comes 15 photographers. . . . The President is a good subject, easy to take. . . . Then the sound cameras are shifted into position, the Kleig lights turned on and we realize about this time that this is no place for a harrassed announcer. . . . So we dash out in the general direction of Pennsylvania avenue and a cold glass of something that cheers. As I hungrily gulp this liquid, I begin to realize why the President doesn't give these Fireside Chats oftener. . . . The next time one of these affairs is scheduled, take a box of aspirin with you. . . ."

TED OSTENKAMP.

1. Lee Carol, a contralto, who sounds like a bass and sticks her nose into the microphone in doing it.
2. Irving Ginsberg and another violinist:
3. An accordianist.
4. Three Ramblers, darky harmony and piano.
5. Louis Benson, monologist.
6. Jack Tallon, whispering monologist, with piano.
7. Betty Beauchamp, who is a contralto at age 14; also three guitars.
8. Rock and Rye, comedians, and—
9. Peter Slaven, a tenor.

There was more, of course, but this is all Mr. Allen thought he could use for the opening of WMAL's Washington Airbreaks Saturday night.

PHIL DUEY,
who has had a steady job with Leo Reisman's orchestra and N. B. C. since last fall.

Mr. and Mrs. Bart Simmons, bound for the West and a delayed honeymoon, will stop off in Washington long enough to sing a couple of songs, romantic ones, you may be sure, with the Pacemakers, another auto-sponsored show, opening on WRC at 8 o'clock tonight.

Mrs. Simmons is the former Desiree Tabor. She met her husband while they were playing a Schubert show together in 1926. They were married a year ago. In "Music in the Air," "The Laugh Parade" and one of the "Ziegfeld Follies" they were given star roles.

Local talent, including the trumpet soloing of Dana Garett, of the Fox Theater orchestra, will complete the cast.

WJSV has removed Arthur (the Great) Godfrey from its Moon Dial and has replaced him, effective tonight, with Warren Sweeney, an announcer who'd rather play Chopin.

Arthur, say the WJSV minds, has been overworked, Sun Dialing in the morning and Moon Dialing at night, &c.

The program, which for some time has been a catch-all for WJSV evening commercial announcements, has been rescheduled—Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday, 10:30 p. m.

We applied for the job of interviewing Gertrude Niesen, Columbia's blues-singing lass, now playing the Fox. We needed a tonic, we said. But the nomination went to Bob Trout. One should, after all, have an announcer for radio interviews, we suppose. La Niesen and Le Trout . . . WJSV at 10 tonight.

Whitecaps.

WRC—Gladys Swarthout, excerpts from the grand and light operatic works of Mascagni, Friml, Romberg, Straus, 7:30 p. m.; the Pacemakers, Desiree Tabor and Bart Simmons, 8 p. m.; Powhatan Orchestra, 11:30 p. m.

WMAL—National Education Association Convention, Glenn Frank, President University of Chicago, 5 p. m.; Radio Joe celebrates the Fourth with Nelson Goveart and a harmonica, 8 p. m.; N. B. C. composers—Rudy Vallee and the Yankees, Joe Biviano, Gould and Shefter, Lilliam Bucknam, Lucille Manners, George Buehler, 9 p. m.

WJSV—Washington-Philadelphia baseball, 3:30 p. m.; Rosa Ponselle, "I'm Falling in Love with Someone," Herbert; "Marechiare," Tosti, and "Reverie au Clair de Lune," Beethoven-Jackowska, 8 p. m.; Lud Gluskin and Henrietta Schumann, 8:30 p. m.

Stevedore Dies Of Riot Wounds

Seattle, Wash., July 1 (AP).—Shelby S. Daffron, Seattle longshoreman, died today of bullet wounds suffered when 100 striking seamen and stevedores stormed the Point Wells docks of the Standard Oil Co. at Richmond Beach last night.

Several others, including dock guards, were injured in the disturbance.

Charles Denny, prosecuting attorney of Snohomish County, in which Richmond Beach is located, said he planned to go to the scene of the riot to investigate the disturbance, the cause of which was not exactly clear.

Meanwhile the strike, which began May 9, continued at all Pacific Coast ports. A board appointed by President Roosevelt is attempting to conciliate differences between the 25,000 strikers and their employers. Operation of "hiring halls," where longshoremen are employed and assigned, is one of the principal points at issue.

Streets of New York Cleared by the Heat

New York, July 1 (AP).—City streets were deserted today as the third day of excessive heat sent hundreds of thousands of New Yorkers to suburban beaches.

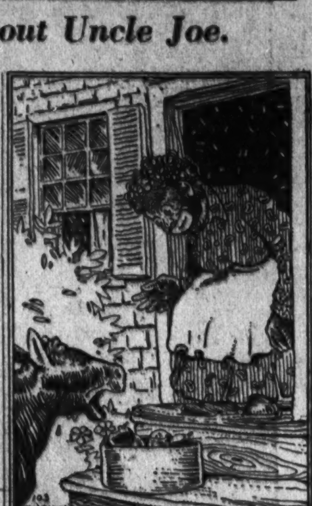
BLACKIE BEAR

By D. SAM COX

The Truth About Uncle Joe.



It seems a shame to tell all these things on Uncle Joe, but it just can't be helped. There is nothing wrong about telling the truth about anything and it is the truth that Uncle Joe had said, time and time again, what he was going to do to Blackie when he caught up with him, and now when they met he didn't do any of those things. Always, it was Blackie Bear that did the things.

But he was going to get Blackie "tomorrow," and so tomorrow he got up early and went out to see which way Blackie's tracks went.

Aunt Judy went out with him. And now you may laugh if you want to. That's just what Aunt Judy did, for when she opened the back door, there stood Bully Calf who had come back to finish that apple he was eating last night when Uncle Joe ran in on him. There he stood, eating his breakfast just as if nothing had ever happened, and, with his black, curly hair he did look a good deal like Blackie. When Aunt Judy opened the door and caught him eating the apples, Bully seemed to know that he was doing something for which he might get a whipping and so he made that same bear noise that he made at Uncle Joe last night and kicked up his heels and ran back to the lot.

"So there is your Blackie Bear," said Aunt Judy. "And there lies your gun on the ground. And there are no bear tracks for you and the dogs to follow and there is no dog here to follow anything. It's a pretty come-off when you and Mr. Man and all the other folks around this country hunt for days and days for a bear and then let a little calf come here and scare you half to death. I reckon it's about time for you to get back to work at putting what things you have to eat into the crib and potato banks. Go over to Mr. Man's and bring that dog back, and tell Mr. Man that you are not going to waste any more time hunting Blackie Bear. When a little black calf can do what Bully did to you when you had your gun, what do you suppose a big bear with as much sense as Blackie Bear has would do to you if you did find him?"

And to tell another truth about Uncle Joe, he was mightly glad to hear Aunt Judy say just that, for he really didn't want to find Blackie as badly as he made out and so he got his hat and started off for Mr. Man's house for his dog.

Threatened Textile Strike Is Postponed

Providence, R. I., July 1 (AP).—A threatened general strike in the woolen industry, scheduled for tomorrow, was postponed by action of union delegates from the six New England States and New Jersey and Pennsylvania, today.

Joseph A. Sylvia, organizer of the United Textile Workers of America, said isolated locals might strike tomorrow, but that the union would exert every effort to get them to return to work.

Good Company . . . good weather and something good to drink—there's a sure trio for making the hours gay and pleasant. And as the frosted glasses are sipped with approval, how often someone will add, "You must have used Canada Dry!"

For ever since it came from Canada, this fine old ginger ale has been considered in a class apart. The Champagne of Ginger Ales.

Of course, "it must be Canada Dry." And all the more so, since it's just as inexpensive as ordinary ginger ales.

Couple Wed Saturday, Sail On Leviathan

One of the most attractive weddings of the season took place Thursday at 10 a. m. at the Shrine of the Sacred Heart, when Miss Marguerite Therese McDonough, daughter of Mrs. Patrick Joseph McDonough, of Washington, became the bride of Mr. John Brendan Moore, son of Mrs. John J. Moore, of East Milton, Mass. The Rev. Michael W. Hyle officiated, assisted by the Rev. J. M. Moran, pastor of the Church of the Assumption, Congress Heights, Md.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Mr. John Joseph McDonough. Her wedding gown of white duchess satin was cut on princess lines, falling into a short, graceful train. Her veil of silk net was arranged on simple lines, cap style, and held in place with orange blossoms. She carried a white prayer book, with streamers of white satin ribbon ornamented with sprigs of lily of the valley.

Mrs. Clark Schilder, sister of the bride, was matron of honor. Her dress was of pale blue mousseline de soie with an off-the-face hat of the same material. She carried a shower bouquet of tea roses and blue delphinium. Mr. Thomas P. McDonough, brother of the bride, was best man. Mr. Clark Schilder and Mr. Keith Schwinley were ushers. Mrs. McDonough, mother of the bride, wore black chiffon with lace and a corsage of gardenias, and Mrs. Moore, mother of the bridegroom, was in black lace, wearing white gardenias.

During the ceermony Mrs. Rose Pellie Jarman sang Riley's "Perfect Prayer," Gounod's "Ave Maria" and "Oh Lord, I Am Not Worthy." Mr. Edward Donovan accompanied at the organ. The sanctuary of the church was beautifully decorated with palms and huge baskets of lilies and sprays of baby's breath. Bouquets of lilies and inumerable candles decorated the high altar.

A reception and breakfast followed at the home of the bride's mother. The home also was decorated with palms and ferns while baskets of gay spring flowers added to the festive appearance of the attractive home.

Mr. and Mrs. Moore left for New York, whence they sailed on the Leviathan Saturday for a honeymoon abroad. On their return in August they will make their home at East Milton. Mrs. Moore's going away costume was a beige suit with brown accessories. The bride, who has a host of friends in Washington, is a graduate of George Washington University. Many persons prominent in official and social circles attended the wedding and reception.

A Strength-Showing Bid.

"But I had passed three honor-tricks and I had to show you the strength of my hand," was the remark of a rather inexpert player to her partner after playing the hand below in the absurd contract of four notrumps. She thought she was using the four-notrump bid in its conventional meaning of showing two Aces and the King of a bid suit, but her partner construed it as simply making a possible game practically impossible. In further extenuation of her unusual bid, the lady continued: "I had support for both your suits and I never thought you would drop me."

Perhaps South, her partner on this unfortunate occasion, should have bid five clubs, which could have been made, but to him it was amazing that North could have passed the Opening bid and then, without either supporting a suit or showing one of her own, jump to four notrump. Slightly afraid of such unusual things, he decided to pass.

The hand was:
North, Dealer.
East and West vulnerable.

North	East	South	West
Pass(1)	Pass	1♣(2)	Pass
2NT(3)	Pass	3♠(4)	Pass
4NT(5)	Pass	Pass(6)	Pass

1—North should not have passed this hand. The correct opening bid is one club.
2—South's hand is barely more than a minimum, but fully comes up to the requirements for an Opening bid.
3—North, having passed an Opening bid, is in some difficulty in finding a good call at this point. She chooses the fairly strong bid of two notrump rather than showing immediate support for the clubs.
4—Of course, South is not interested in notrump with his distribution, and now bids the shaded spade suit, hoping to find an advantageous spot to play the hand.
5—Having support for both suits bid by her partner, North now makes another strong, but very bad, bid.
6—Completely at sea as to exactly what is happening, South decides to pass.

The result, when the battle was over, was that North and South had taken seven tricks and East and West six. In other words, the four-notrump contract was defeated three tricks.

The hand plays best at five clubs, which can not be defeated. A four-spade contract would be set if a club were opened by West, allowing East to trump it; but even a four-spade contract, though unsuccessful, could not be criticized. But a notrump contract had no chance to succeed.

Had North's subsequent bidding been correct, she would not have suffered at all from her unsound original pass of a strong hand. She was fortunate in that her partner opened the bidding and gave her a chance to show her real values; but she should not have attempted to correct her error by such a contradictory bid as four notrump.

The best bids by all concerned would have been: (Figure after bid refers to numbered explanatory paragraph.)

North	East	South	West
1♣	Pass	1♠(1)	Pass
2♠	Pass	4♣	Pass
5♣	Pass	Pass	Pass

1—South does not wish to give the full number of Raises in clubs, because a three-notrump contract may seem desirable; so he makes a One-over-One response on a shaded suit. This response is practically Forcing, and thus there is hardly any danger of failing to bid game.

Miss Schafer Wed At Silver Spring

Maryland Girl Is Bride of Grayson E. Lehman.

Miss Ruth L. Schafer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Millard Schafer and Grayson E. Lehman, of Silver Spring, were married last Saturday afternoon at the Methodist Church, Bowie. The ceremony was performed by Rev. H. H. Howland, of Langdon, D. C., a former pastor of Bowie, assisted by Rev. Tabler. The church was filled with relatives and friends of the couple.

The bride was escorted by her father who gave her in marriage. Her gown of white mousseline de soie, made on simple and becoming lines, was worn with a small close-fitting white hat, and she carried bride roses. Miss Elizabeth Kuhl was maid of honor. She wore a green figured organdie with a navy blue moire sash and accessories to match. Her large hat was trimmed with green, and she carried an armful of delphiniums. The groom was attended by his brother as best man.

A reception was held at the home of the bride, with about 150 guests present. Numerous gifts of linen, silver, glassware and many other articles were received. The young couple left by motor on a honeymoon trip to Atlantic City. On their return they will reside at the Schafer home. Out-of-town guests included relatives and friends from Baltimore, New York and Washington.

Sunburn Goes With Generous Use of Lotion

It's Sunproof, Too; Can Be Used as an Effective Preventative.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

WHEN a young woman undertook nursing the victims of liquid fire burns she had no idea she was on the verge of a wonderful discovery. But her anxiety to relieve the pain of those suffering led her to experiment with a variety of preparations. Her knowledge of medicine and pharmaceutics combined with her eagerness resulted in the discovery of a lotion soothing to burnt skins.

Continuing her experiments along this line she concocted a sunproof liquid which prevents sunburn as effectively as it cures it. Only one store in Washington carries this preparation, and only a few people so far are familiar with its wonderful properties.

Those unfortunate sun worshippers who have knelt too long at the shrine and suffered for days with all the ills attendant on a really bad burn should greet this new remedy enthusiastically. Next time they go to the beach they can insure themselves against a similar ordeal by covering the exposed portions of their bodies with this new preparation. Or if they're caught unawares where the sun beams down devastatingly they can ward off ill effects by the same lotion.

For Washington Water.

Another new product comes to these shores from France. There an ingenious person catering to the luxury of the bath combined a water softener and a fragrant oil. The result is most successful.

Washington's hard water will soften up with a sprinkling of this new concoction.

Just watch the shop counters. The first large round box you see looking as though it were made of thin brown shingles is apt to contain these highly satisfactory ingredients.

• • • •

Travel Kits.

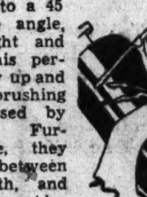
Summer vacationists who load their suit cases with half of the jars and bottles on their dressing room tables seldom escape without a spill or two. Next trip they should take added precautions with a travel kit.

There are two types of these, those already stocked and those containing empty bottles and jars to be filled with whatever one pleases.

A downtown store has some of bright plaid silk, rubber-lined, containing two jars and three bottles.

There's space for other odds and ends of makeup, and even a toothbrush and wash rag. They're available in black, blue, or red.

Modernistic Toothbrush.



Even tooth brushes are going modern. Those featured in a downtown store have a number of unusual attributes. First they are adjustable to a 45 degree angle, both right and left. This permits easy up and down brushing as stressed by dentists. Furthermore, they clean in between the teeth, and massage the gums as no other toothbrush can.

The small amount of metal on the brush is proof against rust, corrosion, or tarnish. The other portions are delightfully easy to clean, as the brush may be taken apart in the same manner as a safety razor and each part cleaned separately. When the actual brush part wears out it's a simple and inexpensive matter to buy refills.

• • • •

Linen Handbags.

While a person can talk at length about the inconveniences of linen dresses which wrinkle after a few minutes of wearing, they can also talk at length about the attractive features of linen bags. Whereas these come in white and pastel colors, they're easily cleaned and never the worse for wear afterward.

A Connecticut avenue store has some in pouch styles with large bracelet-like composition handles. Although they're roomy, they're lightweight, as summer bags should be.

• • • •

No Sham Hero.

A new shampoo is advertised as "taking the sham out of shampoo!"

It really does a beautiful job. It's the soapless kind that requires a lot of rubbing in, around and about—all of which is the best thing in the world for the scalp. And then when the head has been cleansed sufficiently a few rinses will take all traces of shampoo away. No vinegar or lemon rinse is required. After the hair has dried, it is soft, fluffy, thoroughly cleansed, and the scalp revigorated.

• • • •

Mouse Food.

Old homes which harbor these pesky nuisances may be rid of them quickly if the right measures are taken. And much less cruel and certainly more satisfactory than most means is this food. It's left out for the mouse to taste. Just a nibble sends him running out doors for air. And he never comes back again. It's 10 cents a platter.

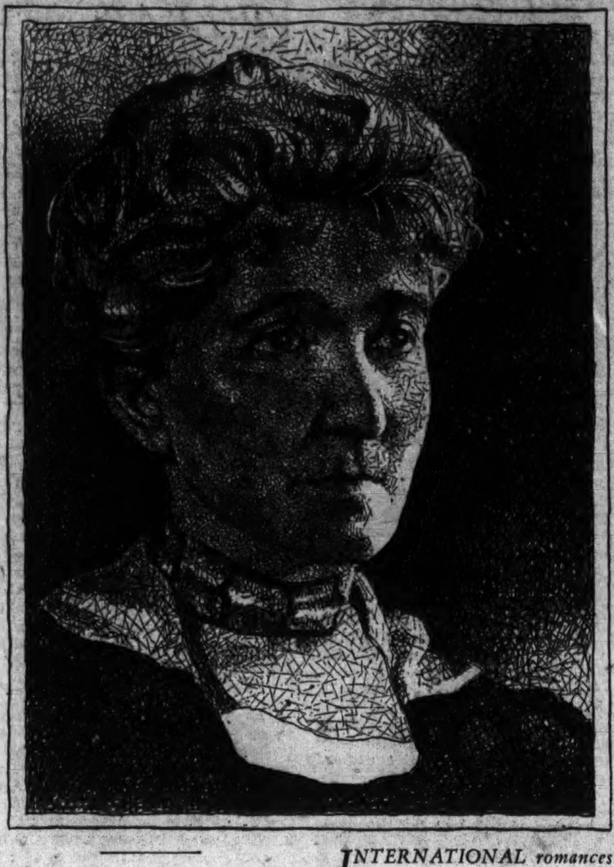
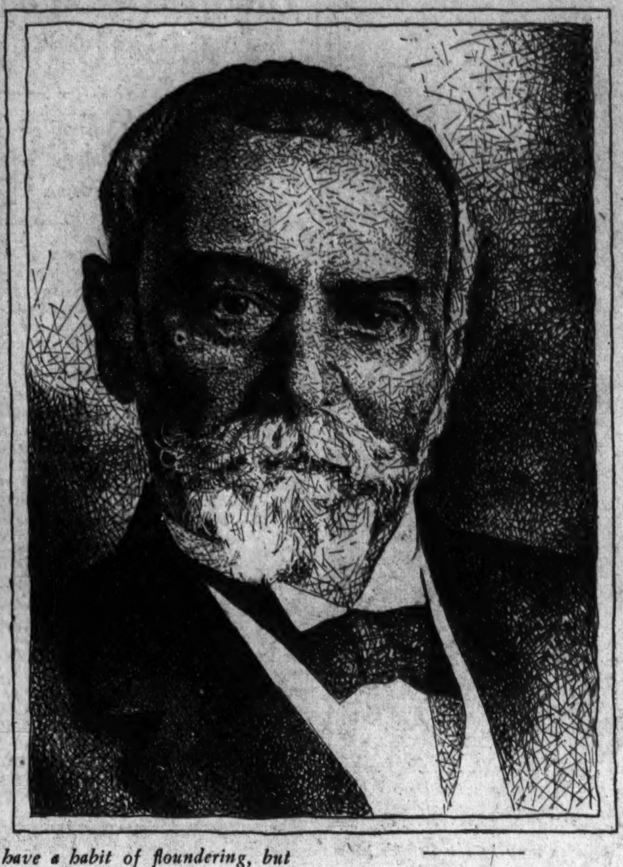
Half-Forgotten Romances of American History

Jules Jusserand—Elise Richards





INTERNATIONAL romances have a habit of floundering, but the long, happy marriage of Jules Jusserand and Elise Richards is proof this not always need be so. Perhaps their success was due to their deep respect and love for the other's country. Jusserand, who was Ambassador of France to America for over 20 years, had a fine knowledge of our people. His wife was brought up in France and regarded it as her own country. The beloved statesman and his charming wife are still remembered here.

This Romance One of Few International Ones That Was Happy.

By Elisabeth E. Poe.

IN MERIDIAN PARK the feathered songsters never lack for water on these torrid days. They find it in a graceful bird fountain erected there by two Washingtonians—a man and a woman who, despite the fact the man represented for more than a score of years a great sister nation and his American-born wife, naturally reflected his citizenship—were truly citizens of this Nation—in the best sense of the word.

The fountain was placed there as a token to their bird friends by the late Jules Jusserand, Ambassador of France to the United States from 1902 to 1925, and his wife, just as they were leaving America. The gift was typical of them. They wished to leave behind some visible evidence of their joy in living here. They thought of their bird friends as well as their human ones and placed the fountain to care for the wants of the birds and to remind the humans of their enduring friendship for us and regret at leaving this post.

The traditional friendship between France and the United States begun by LaFayette and his gallant comrades was cemented and deepened by Jules Jusserand. He had a fine knowledge of the spirit of the American people, and Washington will long cherish its memories of the gay little man with his quaintly spoken but meticulous English, who followed every movement in this country with such unflagging interest. Nothing that was American was foreign to him, to paraphase a saying of one of his countrymen, and his kindly scrutiny was upon all our acts, political and social, during his stay and after he left.

Roosevelt's Friend.

Ambassador Jusserand had the unique distinction of being a member of President Theodore Roosevelt's Tennis Cabinet and he was a close personal friend of Roosevelt. He fulfilled in his person that remark of Theodore Roosevelt's before the Sorbonne in 1910: "France has taught many lessons to other nations: surely one of the most important is * * * that a high artistic and literary development is compatible with notable leadership in arms and statecraft."

Jusserand's interest in America was rooted in romance. His was an international marriage; he wedded an American girl who had lived in France since girlhood and absorbed the spirit of his people as well as retained that of her own Nation. In their lives together this dual citizenship of hers was a source of real gratification and joy to him and it was one of the reasons he felt himself "in part, at least, an American." Even as Lafayette, he knew a kinship of soul with this country that made it next to his own native France "the dearest spot on earth to him."

So many international romances have floundered against the rocks of misunderstanding that the Jusserand-Richards romance remains as an outstanding example of how successful such an alliance may become. The devotion of this couple was an exemplar to all. In Washington their home was the center of truly exclusive gatherings of the best minds and leaders of every school of thought in the Capital. Renowned for its hospitality, an invitation to the French Embassy in the days of the Jusserands was indeed something to be prized—and attended—a sequence not always universal in the whirligig of social life in the height of the season.

A Career Begins.

Jules Jusserand—or, to give all his names acquired at baptism—Jean Adrien Antoine Jules Jusserand—was born in Lyons, France, February 18, 1855. From boyhood it was apparent that he was of the scholar type—avid for learning and information, and with a special interest in history. Naturally, his parents thought of statecraft as an outlet for such energy and genius. When only 21 he entered the diplomatic service of France, his first post being as consul to London.

There began that abiding interest in English history and literature which made him a savant in regard to these subjects. Especially was his imagination captured by the genius of Shakespeare, and he eagerly gathered all possible information about him. So thorough was his study of England's great poet that in after years his writings on Shakespeare were considered classics of their kind.

Jusserand was not content to live and move within the circle of diplomatic life. He walked over the country, becoming thoroughly acquainted with the life of the English people.

He rose steadily in the service of his country. Romance passed him by; his mind was engrossed in literature and diplomacy—and they are two very jealous mistresses. But Cupid had a master-dart in store for the vivacious little Frenchman with the spiritual face, penetrating glance and quizzical expression.

A certain New York business man by the name of Richards—friend and acquaintance of the great names of the makers of the little Old York of yesterday—had set up residence in Paris in order to care for the foreign customers of his firm.

Romance Enters.

With Mr. and Mrs. Richards was their daughter, Elise, whose education was completed in Paris and who became much interested in her adopted country. When, nearing womanhood, she met Jules Jusserand she felt her interest in things French becoming more individualized. Jules Jusserand was indeed a happy man when Elise Richards said, "yes," and they were married in Paris on October 15, 1895. Jusserand was 40 but youthful in appearance and heart.

Three years after their marriage came his first major diplomatic appointment, that of Minister of France to Denmark, where he served from 1898 to 1902.

Theodore Roosevelt was writing a new page in the history of American Presidents when Jusserand and Mme. Jusserand first came to Washington. The scholar in Theodore Roosevelt recognized a kindred spirit in the little Frenchman and they became friends at once. The White House doors always opened gladly when the French envoy appeared; it was a signal for much animated discussion of English and French literature, while turns on the tennis courts and the vigorous give and take of unsparing racquets made new bonds of amity and good will between the two men.

Feminine Confidences.

While the men played tennis and argued the Baconian theory Mrs. Roosevelt and Mme. Jusserand exchanged confidences and enjoyed their own friendship.

Jusserand was raised to the post of Ambassador and the Embassy became the center of Diplomatic Washington, especially as the years added to the length of his Washington service he became dean of the corps.

It was Jusserand whom the Tennis Cabinet selected as spokesman to present Theodore Roosevelt when retiring as President with a silver bowl as a token of their esteem. After a simple speech of much felicity of phrasing the Frenchman's emotion overcame him and his eyes and none of the company's were dry when he handed the gift to the recipient.

Jusserand was Ambassador of France during the World War. He demonstrated fully the restraint an Ambassador representing a belligerent nation should exhibit at the capital of a neutral country. Neither by word, act or suggestion did Jusserand endanger the delicate situation, but his joy was unrestrained when the United States after months of "watchful waiting" finally entered the conflict on the side of the Allies.

Then came victory and the mellow years of Jusserand's Washington service. Happy in Mme. Jusserand's companionship, he delved deeper into our habits and customs, content to serve his country in the country he loved so well.

Sad Parting.

In 1925, diplomatic policy caused his transfer. He hated to go and with many a backward glance he departed these shores.

To the end of his life Jusserand's interest in the United States never abated in the slightest degree. He kept up a steady flow of correspondence with his American friends and entertained many of them in his home in France.

There was sadness in Washington when the word came this kindly French friend of the American people had died. Tender thoughts were given to Mme. Jusserand in her bereavement when the beautiful romance was recalled by persons who had known them well in the world capital.

The Jusserands were part and parcel of the Washington of yesterday, the Washington of fine living, simple habits and village size.

And whenever the Washingtonians of today see that fountain in Meridian Park and the birds enjoying the largesse of cooling waters, they remember their friends from over the seas, Jules and Elise Jusserand, who did not forget them when they said "au revoir" to this city which had been "home sweet home" to them for so many years.

Gay Accessories "Make" Bathing Togs; They're Brimful of Style Tricks

By Amos Parish.

NEW YORK, July 2.—When you start checking up on those smart accessory trappings which follow the swim suit about the beach, it's not surprising if you come to the conclusion that the suit is really the accessory and the accessories are the main thing.

You top off your plain suit with a contrasting hat . . . yellow, brown, red, navy, white. A big sun-shading cartwheel of linen, pique, mesh, print or rough straw. And it's as flattering as it is protective.

There are many gay kinds of bags . . . in prints, Mexican stripes, rich-colored leathers . . . all capacious, usually with waterproof lining, slide fastener closing and convenient handles.

Swim caps, too, sometimes are part of an ensemble with shoes. And you can see how that goes if you'll look at the left-hand figure, who wears a gay printed rubber cap and matching shoes.

Many Sandal Types.

These shoes are one of the many sandal types which may or may not have toe exposure. Rubber, leather, pique, linen, canvas, mesh and novelty coarse weaves are all used on soles of rubber, rope, cork, leather and—of all things—wood. Actually thick wood soles . . . much like those of the French sabot.

Hats, Bags, Clogs, Robes Match or Don't, as Wearer Pleases.

Heels on these shoes, when they have any, are low, of built-up cork (as the ones in the lower left corner) or rope or leather or wood.

Your beach robe can make a great splash of color. They're making them of terry cloth, seersucker, gingham, linen, jersey . . . in bright stripes, plaids and plain colors.

An ingenious idea is found in the robe sketched. This has a hood which can be pulled over your head while you nap, if you like.

Swim togs of the types described may be found in Washington in all the better class shops and department stores.

SLANDER

By Arthur Somers Roche

As the story draws to a close, Dr. Peter Baxter and Herbert Cranston both are in love with Martha Blaisdell. Cranston is engaged to her, but she has run away because of the scandal attached to her name. Meanwhile, Millie Cragin is in love with Dr. Baxter. After a long struggle with her conscience, she visits him to unload what is on her mind.

PETER BAXTER looked up from his desk.

"You haven't rung me up," said Millie. She was conscious that she looked lovely as she walked down the long room.

"I've been frightfully busy," Baxter said.

He rose and took the hand which she extended. She sank, with conscious grace, into a chair, and looked up at him.

"It's no use, is it, Peter."

"What's no use?" he evaded.

"Bless the man's heart," smiled Millie. "Chivalrous always. You just will misunderstand, won't you, Peter?"

"I don't know what you're talking about," said Baxter.

"Then I'll have to put it in words of one syllale," said Millie. "Pete, I'm in love with you. Now where do we go from there?"

His embarrassment was agony.

"You don't mean that," he told her.

Wanted to Marry.

"Don't I. If you only knew," she said. She eyed him appraisingly. "Some day I'm going to give myself a great big laugh about this, Pete, but just now it isn't funny at all. You're the last man in the world I'd have guessed I'd care for. I don't like your profession, and I don't see myself in the picture at all. I'd be miserable as a doctor's wife. Yet that's what I want to be, Pete. I don't know why I want that, any more than I know why I've lost all my pride. You know, if you asked me to marry you now, I wouldn't do it. I would have pride enough to be unwilling to accept pity, even though I seem to have none left."

She raised a hand to stop the speech imminent on his lips.

"Don't say anything—not for a while, Pete. Let me talk." She lighted a cigarette and puffed it for a moment.

"I learned today where Martha Blaisdell is. I told Cranston. I know perfectly well that if he goes out to see her it won't take him long to persuade her to marry him. I didn't intend to tell you. I know you're in love with Martha. But if she marries Cranston—and she'll do it, and she'll do it right away if I know anything at all about women—you're the kind of man who will recognize that your hope is ended. You're not very modern, Pete. Lots of men, when a girl gets married, keep on hoping. They know there's such a thing as divorce. But you wouldn't recoznize that. You'd die a thousand deaths and then a smart girl like myself might catch you. But I don't want to be smart. I don't want to be mean. So I've come down here to tell you. Martha Blaisdell doesn't know—she didn't know 10 days ago, anyway—whether she was in love with you or Herbie. Don't ask me to explain how I know this. I don't know it; I just feel it. But I'll back my feelings against any one else's certain knowledge. Pete. Herbie is on his way to Martha. If you want her, act quick."

"Aren't you being a trifle melodramatic?" Baxter asked.

In Mood to Be Won.

"Am I? Maybe I am. I think that all emotion is melodrama. I think that melodrama is life. I know that in the mood that Martha must be in it won't take much persuasion to make her give in. I know that you're in love with her. I know that Herbie is. I know that she feels she couldn't marry any one after all that has happened, but I also know that any woman in her mood is easily won by the right man. If you care enough—what are you going to do?"

Baxter looked at her gravely.

"I'm going to take you home and prescribe for you that you go to bed."

"And you're not going out to see Martha?"

"Of course not," he told her. He hesitated a moment, fumbled with a book upon his desk, avoided her eyes. Then he looked straight at her. "You're a grand person, Millie. I think you're about the gamest girl I ever knew. I think you're swell."

She rose and almost ran to the door.

"I've a taxi here," she called. "Don't take me home. And—and—I won't see you any more, so—good-by, Pete. I think I'll sail tomorrow night. On the Bremen. The shooting isn't over in Scotland and the Teasdales want me. Good-by and good luck, Pete."

The Scene Changes.

The chairman of the board of directors of the Missionary Medical Foundation looked around the table at his colleagues.

"Shall we ask Dr. Baxter to leave for a moment?" he asked.

"We have talked to Dr. Baxter and we have heard him talk. We have thoroughly investigated his record at St. John's Clinic. We know that he is not only an excellent physician and surgeon, but that he understands sanitation. We know that he is most emphatically the type of man that we need. But Dr. Baxter has figured, as we all know, in the newspapers as one of the participants in an affair that was unfortunate. My own view is that Dr. Baxter behaved indiscreetly. But if I had a son I would wish that he, under similar circumstances, would behave with the same gallant indiscretion. There is no flaw upon Dr. Baxter's morals. Shall we accept him, gentlemen?"

Approval Voiced.

This time there could be no possible misinterpretation of the murmur of approval that ran around the table. The chairman turned to Baxter. His thin, ascetic lips smiled faintly.

"I suppose that outsiders would think we were rather absurd in being so rigid about the qualifications and character of the physicians we send into the heart of China. Considering the small salary we pay, considering the life of sacrifice we offer, the world would be justified in thinking that we should be grateful to get any man no matter what his character or qualifications. That is because the world doesn't realize that the medical profession is crowded with men who think nothing of money and who laugh at sacrifice and privation. There were 50 candidates for the place which we have assigned to you, Dr. Baxter. Not one of those candidates was a failure. Every one of them is willing to abandon an honorable career with prospects of success in order that he may serve mankind according to his conscience. You are going into the interior of China. Your headquarters will be in the village of Tai Ping, and the nearest white man will be 300 miles from you. You will live almost as the natives live. You will be there three years before you will receive a holiday. You will live uncomfortably; there will be times even of privation.

Service Is Reward.

There will never be any monetary reward worth considering. The chances are that you will never gain fame. It may be that you will have a chance to invent some serum or other—I am not a physician and do not understand these things, but I doubt if you will ever have the opportunity to contribute anything important to science. But you will be able to serve ignorant and ailing people. That will be your only reward, and this knowledge will be your only solace in loneliness. You aren't even married; you will have no companion to share your trials. And yet, despite the hardships before you, I know that you feel elated and proud at the opportunity we are giving you. And we are happy that we are sending to Tai Ping a man as capable as yourself. We congratulate ourselves and we also congratulate you, doctor."

Baxter bowed.

"Thank you very much, sir," he said.

"And you're leaving today?" asked the chairman.

Baxter smiled.

"I've turned over the clinic to a young doctor who has occasionally assisted me. I go from here to the train."

"You were prompt," smiled the chairman. "We notified you on Saturday and you're leaving today. Two days is quick work. Good luck to you, doctor."

"Thank you again, sir, and thanks to all you gentlemen," said Peter.

He shook hands with the directors and went out into the sunlight.

CAPITAL KITCHEN

Here Are Some Tempting Menus for July 4th "Porch Picnics."

By Susan Mills.

YOU can't have too many ideas for the Fourth of July picnic.

Whether you go away or stay at home for the celebration, the food should be festive and tempting.

Today, however, let's concentrate on the stay-at-home picnic.

Set the scene under a big shade tree or on the screened porch, with a table for the food and a few comfortable porch chairs or cushions. Place at one end of the table, the paper napkins, plates and cups and just the necessary flat silver.

Visualize a big salad bowl with a crisp vegetable salad, a tray of cold spreads and sliced meats for sandwich fillings, a cutting board holding all the necessary sliced bread and crackers to satisfy the biggest appetite, one hot casserole dish, if the day is not too warm, and a big pot of hot coffee or pitcher of ice tea with a tray of paper cups close by.

Dessert may be a big cake—brought out at the close of the meal, a big bowl of fresh fruit, a short cake or frozen dessert.

Porch Picnic Menu.

Assorted breads, rye, white, graham and finger rolls; assorted meats and spreads including salami cut in thin slices, spiced cold tongue, ground ham with grated pineapple and chopped walnuts spread, cream cheese and green pepper spread.

Arrange on a chop or cold meat plate with the sliced meats around the edge and the spreads in the center.

Jelly and pickles

Bowls of creamed butter and mustard butter

Shoe string potatoes

Cocoanut cake with orange custard filling

Hot tea or coffee

Porch Picnic Menu.

Hot ham shortcake, pineapple and cucumber gelatin salad, ripe olives, cheese crackers, iced tea, raspberries and sliced bananas, ice box cookies.

Hot Ham Shortcake.

Bake rich baking powder biscuits of:

2 cups flour
1-3 cup lard
2-3 cup milk
¾ teaspoon salt
4 teaspoons baking powder

Cut the biscuits thin, place two biscuits together with butter between and bake for 15 minutes in quick oven. Separate the biscuits and pour a creamed ham and olive mixture over the bottom biscuit, replace the top and serve with a garnish of parsley.

Creamed Ham.

2 cups cold cut ham
1½ cups milk
3 tablespoons flour
2 tablespoons butter
1 dozen stuffed olives

Make a white sauce of the fat, flour and milk. When thickened add the ham and the sliced olives. Use in ham shortcakes.

How to Keep Well

Increasing Death Rate of Appendicitis.

Appendicitis is no respecter of persons, age, sex, or occupation. We may wonder at the increasing number of deaths from this disease when competent physicians and surgeons are rarely out of reach. Many small communities can boast a well trained surgeon. In spite of widespread education in the recognition of symptoms of appendicitis the annual death toll has risen steadily in the last 12 years from less than 12,000 to approximately 20,000.

The appendix is a part of the intestinal tract, but it is an offshoot. It is like a trouser pocket without a hole; there is no outlet at the bottom. This organ may accumulate substances that normally pass along the intestinal tract and be unable to expel them. Any irritation in the intestinal tract is likely to be communicated to the appendix. Inflammation and ulceration may result, an abscess may form, and if neglected, may rupture into the abdominal cavity. This latter event is attended with great danger as inflammation of the peritoneum (peritonitis) nearly always follows.

While the appendix is located low in the right side of the abdomen, pain due to inflammation there may be felt in the stomach area. Because of this "stomach ache" patients are inclined to revert to a household remedy, namely, a strong laxative. This is about as effective as using gasoline as a fire extinguisher. The action of the laxative is to spread the inflammation, oft-times driving it deeper into the appendix. Competent authorities have estimated that if the use of laxatives could be prevented, a much higher percentage of recoveries would occur.

For the safety in suspected appendicitis: Keep the patient quiet, do not give laxatives, give no fluid by mouth, give no enemas, call your physician. In case of doubt secure skilled surgical counsel.

When It Comes to That Mysterious Thing Called Personality, Voice Plays Big Part

Greatest Living Women? Savants Fail to Agree

Mrs. Roosevelt and Frances Perkins Cited in Four Out of Five Lists, But Otherwise the Field's Wide Open.

By Virginia Lee Warren.

THE three greatest living women in America—who are they? Six college professors and biographers have answered that question within the last week. Only three gave the same answer.

Dr. A. L. Sachar, biographer, historian and lecturer, began the whole affair by announcing that Jane Addams, of Hull House; Margaret Sanger, of birth control fame, and Helen Keller, of magnificent courage, are the three greatest women, alive in America.

After the Illinois educator had made his choice, five Washington college professors and biographers made theirs. Only two out of the five had Jane Addams on their list. Helen Keller was named by only one. And Margaret Sanger was not even mentioned.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt was given a place on four out of five lists. So was Frances Perkins. Mary Wooley, president of Mount Holyoke College, was named by two Washington professors as one of the three greatest living American women. Mrs. Nicholas Brady, a leader in social welfare work, received one vote.

True Individuality.

Those who gave Mrs. Roosevelt first place were Dr. A. Curtis Wilgus, professor of history at George Washington University and acting dean of Columbian College; Dr. Wesley Gewehr, head of American University's history department, and Dr. Dumas Malone, editor of the Dictionary of American Biography.

Said Dr. Wilgus, "Mrs. Roosevelt has not been content to be simply the wife of the President. She has developed true individuality."

Dr. Gewehr chose Mrs. Roosevelt because, "she is the First Lady in many ways, especially through her contributions to our economic and social civilization. She has even encouraged good taste in homes."

"Just as it is impossible to declare whether Theodore Roosevelt was greater than Edgar Allen Poe, so it is impossible to compare a woman in literature with a woman in public affairs," said the biographer.

Around the Dilemma.

Dr. Malone got around this difficulty by dividing his list into several sections. First he named Mrs. Roosevelt because, "she is a really fine woman and stands for fine things in American life. Although she undoubtedly gains some of her prominence from her husband's position, she has some quality within herself that makes her different from other First Ladies who have lived in the White House."

Frances Perkins, in Dr. Malone's opinion, is the greatest woman in public affairs. He believes she is the first Secretary of Labor who has approached labor problems from the viewpoint of a sociologist.

Dr. Malone selected Jane Addams as the greatest woman in the field of social service; Ada L. Comstock and Mary Wooley in the field of education; Willa Cather, Julia Peterkin, and Ellen Glasgow in literature. He concluded his list with Helen Keller, saying, "she is a great person."

Dr. Wilgus and Dr. Gewehr added Frances Perkins and Mary Wooley to their lists headed by Mrs. Roosevelt.

For Country's Youth.

Mrs. Roosevelt was given second place by the Rev. Dr. Joseph F. Thorning, S. J., professor of sociology and acting dean of the Graduate School of Georgetown University. He selected Mrs. Nicholas Brady as greatest of living American women because, "she has made the ideals of youth her prime concern, and because of what she has accomplished for religious education among boys and girls in this country."

Miss Perkins concluded the Rev. Mr. Thorning's list.

"She has won the confidence of the rank and file of workers by her fearless advocacy of social justice," he declared.

Prof. Elmer L. Kayser, dean of university students and professor of history at George Washington University, chose Jane Addams as the greatest woman. But when it came to selecting the second and third greatest, Prof. Kayser went outside America. Mme. Curie received his second vote. On the third one he gave up entirely.

Both the social service worker and scientist have magnificent intellectual ability, according to Prof. Kayser.

"Added to that ability is a personal nobility," he concluded.

Women's Deans To Open Meet This Afternoon

Women Voters Are Out to Sweep Patronage From Government.

THE opening session of the National Association of Deans of Women's conference will be held at 2 o'clock this afternoon at the Raleigh Hotel. The deans of women and the department of secondary school principals will meet jointly.

At this session, Miss Dorothy C. Stratton, dean of women, Purdue University, Lafayette, Ind., and Arthur C. Watkins, director of the National Student Forum of Washington, will speak. Miss Agnes Ellen Harris, president of the dean's department, and Charles F. Allen, president of the department of secondary school principals, will preside jointly.

* * * *

Miss Mary Stewart, assistant director of Indian Education, United States Bureau of Indian Affairs, will address a luncheon conference of the deans of women on "Educating Americans—Native and Other" at 12:30 o'clock tomorrow at Barker Hall, Seventeenth and K streets northwest.

After the luncheon a panel discussion on "Problems of the High School Dean" will be led by Mrs. Meta Steinhausen, Washington Junior High School, Rochester, New York, and participated in by local educators.

Miss Jessie Cooper, vice principal of McKinley High School and chairman in charge of the local arrangements, will preside at the luncheon.

War on Patronage.

War on the Federal patronage system has been declared by the Board of National League of Women Voters, which met here last week. Mrs. Walter S. Greenough, of Indianapolis, chairman of the department of government and its operation, is in charge of the league's campaign for trained and qualified persons in Government service. She said:

"There has been discussion by the Administration during the past year looking toward the elimination of patronage, but Administration leaders have only scratched the surface of a condition for which both the Republican and Democratic parties must be held accountable over a period of years. There are several regrettable situations already known to the observing citizen. Why should all postmasters, except those in rural communities, be chosen by the spoils system? Why are thousands of new positions created under emergency agencies in the last year, placed outside of the regular classified service? What about the amazing inequalities in salary between equally responsible positions?

"Not only have there been few improvements in public personnel management during the depression, but actually, previous gains have been undermined. For example, reports from our State and local leagues show that married women have been discriminated against all too frequently in law or administrative practice. The national league opposed the 'married persons' clause in the economy act of 1932 and considered it unfortunate the House committee failed to give the Congress which has just ended a chance to repeal section 213 of that act by not reporting out the bill."

Sentinels Campaign.

The National Sentinels, organized a year ago to work for the preservation of the Constitution, is conducting an active campaign to reach women voters in the country.

The group hopes for a membership of 1,000,000 by the time of its next convention April 13 of next year in Washington.

Mrs. Nicholson in her letter criticizes conditions of the result of the repeal of the eighteenth amendment and also the expanding power of the Federal Government.

The Washington branch of the American Association of University Women will entertain at a tea today for those members who are attending the convention of the National Education Association. Tea will be served from 4:30 to 5:30 o'clock at the club house, 1634 I street northwest.

Miss Mildred Green will act as hostess. Miss Sara R. Lerch will present a group of songs.

Didn't Have Easy Time, Says Woman Engineer

Doris Clinton, of Takoma Park, One of Three Girls in Country to Get Aeronautical Degree, Declares She Even Had Trouble Finding a School.

WHEN Doris Clinton decided to study aeronautical engineering her parents were skeptical, but tolerant.

"Just try it a year," they told her, "and then you will be glad to change to English literature or romance languages."

But the more Doris studied engineering the more she like it. This spring she was graduated in engineering at the University of Michigan, and she plans to return this fall to study for her master's degree.

"I didn't have an easy time of it," she said yesterday at her home in Takoma Park. "But ever since I first saw an aeroplane I wanted to study aeronautical engineering. I still think it the most interesting profession there is.

Refused Admittance.

"I even had a hard time finding a school to attend. Many schools refused admittance, giving no reason but that they did not accept girls.

"When I arrived at the University of Michigan and began work, I talked with the adviser, who told me the mortality rate among women engineering students was very high, and that few lasted beyond the second year. So far only 11 women have been graduated in engineering from the University of Michigan. Ten of these are married, and only one is a successful engineer. Doesn't sound so good, does it?"

Miss Clinton is one of three women in this country who have received degrees in aeronautical and mechanical engineering.

"At present there are few openings in our profession," she said, "but undoubtedly it is a profession with a future. Progress is slow, and work is still in the trial and error stage. The best one can do is to keep on studying and be ready for a position when things pick up."

Must Be Sincere.

Miss Clinton believes engineering is a good profession for women who are sincerely interested.

"If a girl is so fascinated by the insides of airplanes that she is willing to go out and work on them in a broiling summer day, then she would do well to make it her life work," she said.

The men in engineering are always cordial and helpful to the women in the profession, according to Miss Clinton.

"My professors were always very nice to me, too," she added, "although one of them did tell me I must have a great deal of money. That any woman would be silly to study engineering if she didn't have.

"They were so terribly polite to me," she added. "I used to be amused when they made a point of not swearing when I was present. It was so obvious they might as well have sworn."

COMPETITIVE SPORTS tend to develop a wrong sense of values in women participants, authorities hold. By overexertion, they permanently impair their physical and nervous morale, upset their emotional balance, and develop a "martyr complex" toward the game.

Sports Complex Gets Analysis By an Expert

Girls Sacrifice Too Much Energy; Result Bad, She Declares.

By Ware Torrey and Janet Owen.

DANGEROUS — they said it when women first played polo; when they started to fly.

People in general don't worry very much about the dangers of basketball and track and field events, yet these sports are injuring more girls than the so-called violent sports. The top-notchers in competition in these fields seem to believe that today we play, for tomorrow we die.

"The martyr complex," of sacrificing anything to help one's team win, is what Prof. Agnes R. Wayman calls it. Miss Wayman, vice president of the American Physical Education Association, and director of physical education at Barnard College, is a National figure in the present progressive movement for sound health and sports principles.

This martyr complex, and the accompanying glamor of spotlights and cheering crowds, lies at the root of many cases of overstrain, serious physical and nervous ills, among girls in heavy competition.

"Stressing competition among young girls is apt to bring about definite bad results," Prof. Wayman says. "The girls get a wrong sense of values. They are apt to overdo. Their physical and nervous morale is often lowered."

Strained hearts and other organic ailments, serious lesions, and jangled nervous systems result from intense competition, in cases that climb into high figures.

Exploitation of girls' teams, for publicity for industrial houses, schools, clubs and counties, is widely characteristic all over the country.

An important factor that coaches and promoters of these teams, in basketball and track and field especially, do not know because they lack educational leadership, Miss Wayman says, is one striking difference between girls and boys in athletics. Emotional stability of girls depends on a proper balance between a variety of glands. This balance may be seriously upset by the excitement and nervous strain of intense competition.

Cleopatra Charmed the Men, Chiefly by Melodious Tones

Egypt's Queen Controlled Her Vocal Cords Largely By Instinct; Modern Woman, Aided By Science, Has More Chance of Success.

Throughout the ages women have achieved, conquered, overridden sex prejudices and barriers, and written their names indelibly on the log book of life through the power of personality.

The following article is the first in a series on what modern science and art offer the women who develop the intangible magnetic graces that have characterized great women of the past.

By Frances Mangum.

IT IS surprising how many women still think that in order to emulate Cleopatra, immortal exponent of feminine magnetism, they must don slinky dresses and affect the facial make-up of tent show sirens. It is surprising that in 2,000 years they haven't learned better.

Would she depend on her face and figure to upset governments, or even to get herself a fat job, or a rich husband? Indeed she would not! Would she depend on her mysterious intangible allure to get herself elected to Congress or the presidency of the Daughters of Jezebel? Most certainly she would not!

It is a safe bet that Cleopatra would first of all practice a few good vocal exercises in her bedchamber and that when she appeared on the platform or before a microphone she wouldn't get breathy or nasal-toned. And that when she picked up a telephone receiver she would not shout a shrill, impatient, "Yes? Who is it?" into the mouthpiece.

ETHEL BARRYMORE, modern exponent of a voice "full, deep and resonant," has charmed multitudes by the magnetic quality of her voice. Audiences have laughed and cried as she played on their emotions by the skillful manipulation of her vocal chords.

Seductive, Says Plutarch.

History records that a large part of Cleopatra's magnetism lay in what women of today, particularly American women, neglect — the voice. The beauty of her voice is mentioned frequently by her biographers. Plutarch says it was wonderfully seductive, melodious, and persuasive. Philip W. Sergeant, British scholar, says of her: "Her voice was like a many-stringed instrument, capable of being tuned to any language."

Since Cleopatra, born in 68 B. C., was able to achieve so much with her voice, why should not women of today, with all the aids of modern art and science at their command, do even more with their vocal cords?

Both the talkies and the radio are making women voice-conscious. Many a nervous-voiced, shrill-toned woman today envies the rich, throaty tones of Greta Garbo, Ethel Barrymore, and Lynn Fontanne. Garbo, particularly, is one of the nearest approaches to Cleopatra—if voice be a means of comparison. Her deep, full tones emanating from the screen have made many a husband forget his dinner hour.

The Nordic Tones.

Is Garbo's voice such a masterpiece of nature that no woman may help to rival it? On the contrary, many of her northern European sisters likewise speak with deep, full resonance.

In fact, Carl H. Borgenstierna, Attache of the Swedish Legation, admitted in his best diplomatic manner that never in his country had he been swept off his feet by a young woman's beauty only to be let down with a bang by the incongruity of a shrill, piercing voice.

"It might be," he said "that the many vowel sounds in the Swedish tongue tend to give a resonant quality to the voice."

But it isn't necessary to learn Swedish to practice vowel sounds. It's only necessary to learn what the pure sounds are and how they should be formed, and to practice them until they become a habit.

That such practice will turn the trick was emphasized by Maurice Greet, director of the Clifford Brooke Academy of Stage Training.

"Many women come here for voice instruction, to learn how to 'play their voices'," he said. "By training and practice of vowel sounds they are able to lower strident voices and to give them fullness."

The marked tendency toward "throaty" voices is now frequently carried to an extreme. The so-called sweet young thing who sees some actress unfailingly lure with her siren sonority will make a studied effort to try the same. The results are painful. She acquires the unmelodious combination of a croak and a bass.

The "Throaty" Fad.

Speaking of this "throaty" fad, Mr. Greet said:

"Goodness knows how it ever got started! Maybe the deep voiced screen and stage stars, maybe the blues singers, who knows? But surely every woman must realize that her natural voice, cultivated and perfected, will be far more attractive than any mimicry basso!"

But what of the telephone voice? Let F. G. Macarow, manager of the traffic division of the Bell Telephone Co., answer. He sees hundreds of voices trained every day.

"Before we put a girl on the switchboard we give her a thorough course in voice technique," Mr. Macarow said. "It's amazing how quickly and easily unattractive voices are groomed to pleasantness!"

A Set of Rules.

1. Do not speak loudly or shrilly.
2. Enunciate clearly.
3. Do not be afraid to use your lips freely in making sounds.

But the modern woman no sooner masters a telephone technique than she's confronted with the radio problem. She can not campaign successfully, speak at her club banquet or raise a fund for orphan elephants without knowing at least the rudiments of radio speaking.

Harry Butcher, general manager of Columbia Broadcasting System in Washington, who has given audition to hundreds of women, admits those with natural radio voices are few. But he also says amateur speakers can score a success if they would remember just these simple rules:

1. Be interested in your subject.
2. Let your voice ring with enthusiasm.
3. Enunciate clearly and cautiously.
4. Speak slowly and distinctly.

"If a woman speaker will remember these things it doesn't matter how green she is on the air, she can really pack a wallop!" Mr. Butcher heartily declares.

Another Recipe.

The simplest recipe for a good voice was proposed by Miss Caroline McKinley, teacher of speech at the King-Smith Studio School for the past ten years.

"Learn to pronounce your words correctly," she says, "and you can not fail to have a pleasing voice!"

Enlarging on her theory, she declared, "it is impossible, for instance, to slur, to mouth, or to swallow the word 'moon' if it is given the resonance that rightfully belongs to its proper pronunciation. Words are all marked for pronunciation to bring out the fullness, depth, and musical quality that belongs to that sound.

PILLAR TO POST

Identical Twins.

THE 5-YEAR-OLD twins of Senator Bennett Clark are an interesting study in psychology to their mother, who was interested in this subject when in college. They are named Marsh and Kimball, the maiden names of their mother and grandmother, respectively. The 10-year-old son is named Champ Clark after his famous grandfather. Mrs. Clark says she took the opportunity to name the twins after her side of the family "while everybody was having a lot of sympathy for me."

* * * *

Like most identical twins, Marsh and Kimball do not compete with each other, are quite willing to divide in all things. However, they have developed a humorous trick of pretending to be each other when a scolding or spanking impends. At home they are a self-sufficient pair, and "wallow" by the hour, Mrs. Clark's way of expressing their habit of tumbling over and over each other on the floor.

* * * *

The self-sufficiency of identical twins prevents them from learning to talk as early as the single child who strives to make older playmates understand him. Marsh and Kimball had a jargon of their own, and they have not outgrown all of it. Even now they use a word they coined themselves in place of all personal pronouns. The word is pronounced "We-er." Recently they took part in an entertainment at school, dancing a minuet in costume. They described it as follows: "We-er put we-er hands on we-er heart and we-er made we-er bow."

A Mystic Bond.

ONCE when they were babies their mother put them in separate bathtubs out of sight of each other with no means of communication. She was startled to find them doing the same things, such as playing with the soap in a similar way, at the same time.

* * * *

Young Champ is also a sympathetic observer of his young brothers. He claims that when they are engaged in games of hide and seek the twins seem to be able to find each other as if by instinct, which might have something to do with the theory there is some mystic bond between identical twins. Mrs. Clark quoted Thornton Wilder as saying he always had a sense of incompleteness which he attributed to the fact his twin brother died at birth.

* * * *

There is a story connected with the Clark twins which has been published but bears repeating. When the twins came here about a year ago they were taken sightseeing. They were much interested in the heroic statue inside the Lincoln Memorial. When they returned home, some one asked them what they had seen. One of them replied, "We-er saw a big statue of Jesus."

"That wasn't Jesus," corrected the other. "That was J. Ham Lincoln."

Strictly Speaking

Of Governments and Governors.

1. What is the name for the form of government having a dictator? What are the people who support such a government called?
2. Is Mussolini pronounced MEW-so-LEE-nee or MOO-so-LEE-nee?
3. Is Russia's government SO-vi-et or SOV-i-et?
4. Who is now head of the U. S. S. R., and how is his name pronounced?
5. What is Germany's present form of government?

Here Are the Answers.

1. Government by dictatorship is Fascism (FASH-ism). People supporting it are the Fascisti (Fa-SHIS-ti).
2. Mussolini is neither MEW-so-LEE-nee nor MOO-so-LEE-nee. It is Muss-o-LEE-nee—approximately Muscle-LEE-nee.
3. It is a SO-vi-et form. (The first syllable rhymes with "go."
4. Stalin—called either STAY-lin or STAW-lin—is head of the U. S. S. R.
5. Germany's present form of government, Nazi, is pronounced either NAY-tsi or NAT-si.

Catchy Tune What Makes State Songs

Mrs. Kahn Acknowledges Only "California, Here I Come."

By Mary Greiner Kelly.

A CATCHY tune is often a greater factor than a moving lyric in popularizing a state song. The dominant spirit of a State's pioneers can be expressed in melody when flowery words fall flat. But when neither words nor music "click," even homesick Congressmen can not be depended upon to know, much less to sing, their own State songs.

"California Here I Come" is what Representative Florence P. Kahn, of San Francisco, has been unconsciously humming ever since adjournment. It may not be the official State song—at least it didn't receive the benediction of the Women's Federation Council at Hot Springs this month—but to Mrs. Kahn, it expresses California better than any other.

"The music is lilting, gay and typically Californian in spirit," she declared. "The words too, are significant of the things we love out home. The lines speak of bowers of flowers blooming in the sun. They also mention our beloved Golden Gate. There is nothing forced or stilted about the song. It is carefree and friendly like the Californians themselves, and that explains it's wide popularity."

Doesn't Know It.

A verse from the official song for California, which Mrs. Kahn insists she never heard before follows:

"California, thee we sing,
From our hearts thy praises spring.
Let the echoes wake and ring,
Glorious California.
Beauteous land of heart's desire.
Sun is thy baptismal fire,
Softly singing winds thy choir, glorious California."

Wisconsin people prefer to record their historic events in books rather than songs, declared two of her Representatives, M. K. Reilly and C. W. Henney. For this reason the Representatives are willing to give that college favorite "On Wisconsin" their official sanction.

"If we really wanted to boast about our State," declared Representative Reilly. "It would take more than one song to do it. In fact, our paeans of praise would fill an operatic libretto." And with a characteristic twinkle in his blue eyes, he left it to his friend, Representatives Henney, to recount the wonders of the State of Wisconsin.

After the latter had listed everything from Wisconsin's beautiful lakes to her cheese industry, he sang the following verse "On Wisconsin" to prove it was a pretty good song after all:

"On Wisconsin, on Wisconsin,
Grand old Badger State,
We thy loyal sons and daughters,
Hail thee good and great.
On Wisconsin, on Wisconsin,
Champions of the right,
Foreward, our motto,
We'll win the fight."

Representative Fred C. Gilchrist, of Laurens, Iowa, not only can sing his State song, but thinks its Nation-wide popularity is ample proof of its distinction.

Tall Corn State.

"Iowa is primarily an agricultural center," he said, "and reference to the 'tall corn' expresses it very well." Then as though some voice from the Laurens chamber of commerce had whispered in his ear he asked:

"Do you know that the soil of Iowa produces more wealth each year than all the gold mines in the world?" As he continued fragmentary packing preparatory to his homeward trip, he tried out a rich barytone voice on the chorus of the familiar song:

"I'm from Ioway, Ioway,
State of all the land,
Joy on every hand.
I'm from Ioway, Ioway,
That's where the tall corn grows."

If any song writer ever attempts to supplant "My Old Kentucky Home" as the official song of that Southern State, he will have not only the Congressional delegation but other indignant Kentuckians to answer to, according to Representative Fred M. Vinson, of Ashland.

"There is no other State song in existence, he declared, "that reaches the classic proportions of 'My Old Kentucky Home.' It is not only dear to all Kentuckians, but has tugged at the heart strings of the entire Nation, for generations. It will never be surpassed," he said.

So, those grown tearful over the shifting of old orders into new, might yet take heart with loyal Kentuckians in that chorus of a changeless song:

"Weep no more, my lady,
Oh weep no more today!
We will sing one song for the old Kentucky home,
For my old Kentucky home far away."

What Today Means

"Cancer."

If July 2 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9:30 to 11:30 a. m., from 2:30 to 4:30 p. m. and from 7:30 to 9:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 6:30 to 8:30 a. m., from 12:30 to 2:30 p. m. and from 4:30 to 6:30 p. m.

This July 2 may prove rather difficult in the way of making and keeping business engagements, due to interruptions. Business possibly will be "spotty," and deals you wish to close might be held in abeyance. Perseverance, however, will be rewarded, so do not allow discouragement in any way to mar your day. Social engagements, already made, should terminate successfully, but this is not an auspicious day to extend an invitation which requires an immediate acceptance.

The woman born on July 2 is usually, of a rather dominating type. If you were born on this date, you might find it a mighty good policy not to try to force people to do things just the way you want them done. Bear in mind that everyone is entitled to have an opinion of their own. You will be far more popular and happier if you make up your mind to curb the tendency to always "boss" the job. You should be very fortunate in money matters, and do not be surprised if you should receive a substantial sum of money, or something of value. Love is symbolical of happiness where you are concerned. Marriage should prove the remedy for all your troubles.

The child born on July 2, from early childhood, must be taught not to be self-opinionated.

If a man and July 2 is your natal day, you are blessed with an exceptionally keen mentality and an enterprising spirit. If mechanically inclined, the engineering profession in one of its numerous branches offers a great opportunity. The legal and literary fields might also prove profitable. Early marriages may be advisable for men born on this date.

Walsh and McElvenny Advance to Finals of District Tennis Play

Straight-Set Triumphs Feature

Welsh Tops Mangan, With Ground Strokes Deciding Factor.

McElvenny Is Decisive Victor Over Erratic Bud Markey.

A PAIR of hard-hitting veterans of intercollegiate tennis impressively stroked their way into the final round of the annual District championships yesterday afternoon at Columbia Country Club. Tall, angular Barney Welsh, No. 1 man on Duke University's net team, eliminated the ageing Tom Mangan, 6—1, 6—4, in short order, and Ralph McElvenny, former Stanford tennis star, nearly as decisively ousted Bud Markey, conqueror of the defending champion, Dooley Mitchell, 7—5, 6—2.

Strive as he might, Mangan, seeded No. 4, whose game the years appear not to affect, could do little to stem the Welsh onslaught. With his pounding service practically assuring him games on his own delivery, Welsh had only to match Mangan's ground-play in order to give nim his margin of victory.

Outseadies Opponent.

The No. 2 seeded Duke ace was equal to the task, actually outsteadying his experienced opponent with an assortment of groundstrokes in which he mixed an aggravating chop with a whistling drive which had Mangan exerting all his efforts merely to keep the ball in play.

From the moment play commenced, Welsh took the upper hand, his whip-lash service time after time giving him needed points at vital intervals either on aces or points which Mangan could barely reach with his racket. The Rockville boy reeled off the first five games before Mangan could come through to prevent a love set on his own service.

Stoefen, Lott, Shields Face Tough Foes

WIMBLEDON, Eng., July 1 (AP).—American still held a strong hand—six aces to be exact—as the all-England tennis championship field rested today preparatory to resuming play in the quarter finals tomorrow.

All four members of the American Davis Cup team, Sidney B. Wood, Frank Shields, Lester Stoefen and George Lott, as well as the two Wightman Cup stars, Helen Jacobs, United States champion, and Sarah Palfrey, of Brookline, Mass., still are in the running for the singles titles.

Trouble looms just ahead, however, for three of the four male survivors in the upper half of the draw, Stoefen is paried against the defending champion, Jack Crawford, of Australia, and the erratic Shields against H. W. (Bunny) Austin, England's stylish shotmaker, whose steadiness is proverbial.

In the lower half, Lott seems to be face to face with summary elimination at the hands of Fred Perry, first ranking English ace and second seeded player. Wood, however, is a distinct favorite over Vernon G. Kirby, of South Africa, despite the latter's upset victory over Gottfried von Cramm, German favorite, yesterday.

An all-American final still is a possibility in the women's division with Miss Jacobs in the lower half and Miss Palfrey in the upper. The United States champion's next opponent will be Cilli Aussem, of Germany, while Miss Palfrey will tackle Mme. Rene Mathieu, of France.

Hamman Wins Crown, Beats Goodman, 3 and 2

Dallas, Tex., July 1 (AP).—Leland Hamman, an unerring little 135-pound youngster, of Waco, Tex., captured the Transmississippi Golf Tournament here today with a 3 and 2 victory over Johnny Goodman, of Omaha, 1933 National champion.

One under Brook Hollows par 35, 35—70 for the morning round, Hamman finished the first 18 holes 4 up. He slipped only 2 over par on the second roun dthis afternoon, carding a 36 to Goodman's par 35 and then losing only one shot to par on the seven remaining holes. It is Hamman's first major title.

White Sox Split Pair With Tribe

Indians Win 2d in 11th, 4-3, After Bowing, 12-5, in First Game.

CHICAGO, July 1 (AP).—Cleveland and the White Sox divided a double-header before 14,000 fans today, the Indians taking the second game, 4 to 3, in 11 innings, after the Chicagoans won the opener, 12 to 5. They also split the series with two victories each.

Willie Kamm's single with the bases loaded in the eleventh scored Sam Rice with the winning run in the nightcap, after Hal Trosky's fifteenth home run of the season tied the score at 3-all in the eighth. Oral Hildebrand and Milt Gaston went the full overtime route.

The Sox scored eight runs on four hits in the second inning to clinch the opener. Al Simmons' thirteenth homer came in that inning, with one on base. Lyons went the route.

Braves Down Phillies In Double Bill, 6-3, 3-0

Boston, July 1 (AP).—The Boston Braves took both ends of a double-header from the Phillies today by scores of 6-3 and 3-0. In shutting out the Phillies in the nightcap Bobby Brown allowed them but five hits, three of them coming off the bat of George Davis. Boston left none on base in the first game to tie a major league record.

left field and eventually scored on Joe Cronin's single to give the Nats a 1-to-0 lead that lasted no longer than the Yankees' next turn at bat.

Whitehill issued a walk to Byrd with one out in the second inning that was translated into the tying run when Dickey singled and Hoag swung with all his might to dump a grounder in front of the box for a scratch hit that sent Byrd across the plate. But there was nothing fluky about the Yanks' two-run uprising in the third.

Chapman Starts Rally.

Two were gone, as the saying is, when the Yanks started erupting against Whitehill in the third. Ben Chapman banged a double up against the left field fence. Lou Gehrig smacked a ball through the box and beat it out for a double. The Yanks were specializing in doubles it appeared, when Sammy Byrd rammed a two-base hit to left. When the smoke of the doubles cleared, the Yanks had two more runs and a 3-1 lead.

The long-distance hitting of the Yanks broke out in another rash in the sixth, starting with a double to left by Byrd and ending in a loud cresendo when Bill Dickey smacked his home run over the right field fence that blasted Whitehill out of the box. Jack Russell finally put a stop to the fuss, but the Yanks had their 5-1 lead.

The Nats had been getting runners on base here and there against Broaca, but with no degree of success until the sixth when, with none out, Manush beat out a single to Gehrig, and Cronin singled to center. He was the last Nat to get on base. Manush finally scored on a pair of outs, but the Nats were as helpless in the last three innings as a Communist before a Hitler firing squad.

Harper Routs Burke; Wins Golf Title

Is Victor, 7 and 5, After Brilliant Subpar 69 in Morning.

Ties Record in Taking Third Amateur Crown; Nips Foe's Rally.

PRINCESS ANNE COUNTRY CLUB, Virginia Beach, Va., July 1 (AP).—Cracking one stroke from par through 31 holes of match play, Chandler Harper, 20-year-old Portsmouth shotmaker, defeated Aulice Burke, of ePtersburg, 7 and 5, to win his third State amateur golf championship here today.

Chandler clipped three strokes from par with a dazzling morning round of 69 and coasted to victory in the afternoon despite Burke's courageous comeback effort.

His victory gave the Portsmouth ace a bigger niche in Virginia's hall of golfing fame, tying the record of Billy Howell, of Richmond, who also has three championships to his credit.

Happy Day for Family.

It was a happy day for the Harper family, which yesterday watched little Lily, Chandler's 17-year-old sister, win the women's amateur over the nearby Cavalier course.

Starting the afternoon round with a discouraging six-hole deficit to overcome, Burke played gallantly, but Chandler's experience and steadiness under fire counted almost as much as his remarkable shots.

Burke reduced the champion's margin to 5 holes on the eleventh hole of the afternoon round, with a sensational 25-foot putt that fell for a birdie 3, but he smashed his drive into the woods from the twelfth tee and Chandler was 6 up again with a well-played par 4.

Settles Issue on 13th.

Chandler settled the issue on the thirteenth, sending his tee shot far down the fairway and pitching his second within 10 feet of the cup. Burke, in the woods again after a vicious slice, came out nicely and sent his third to the green. When Harper curled his putt to within a few inches of the cup, Aulick, needing a long putt for a half which would have done him no good, conceded.

Harper, two over par for the afternoon, played one of his most sensational rounds in the morning, when he finished with a 69 despite a dismal start. His morning card showed 6 birdies, three of them in a row on the par 5 fourteenth, the par 3 fifteenth and par 5 sixteenth. He had only one birdie in the afternoon, 4 on the long first hole.

In winning his third championship Chandler found the going rough at times after winning the medal in the qualifying round with a sensational 68. He took the measure of Clarke Lea, r., of Richmond, 6 and 4, in the preliminary round, but was hard pressed to whip his fellow townsman, Charley Cross, jr., 1 up, in his first round. Chandler whipped Sam Bates 4 and 3 in the quarter-finals, but the champion needed his best shots in eliminating the determined Norfolk opponent.

Pressed by Riegel.

There was even more drama, however, to Burke's unexpected march to the finals. He started his sensational and courageous bid in the preliminary round by eliminating Wilson Wellines, of Virginia Beach, runnerup to Harper for the medal, one up on the nineteenth green.

He disposed of Frank Sutton, 4 and 3, but had to go 19 holes and finish with three birdies on the last four to whip the veteran Charley ent, of Richmond, 1 up. He moved into the finals by defeating Bobby Riegel, Richmond, 1 up.

Nat Catcher Handicapped Again

Sewell Called Home as Wife Suffers Attack of Appendicitis.

Ruth Out With Ptomaine Poisoning; Nats in Philadelphia Today.

By Frank H. Young.

MISFORTUNES never come singly, 'tis said, and Luke Sewell, Washington catcher, now subscribes to this theory 100 per cent. He was scheduled to have returned to action behind the bat for yesterday's game; in fact, Manager Joe Cronin had announced him as a starter, when word was received from home that Mrs. Sewell suddenly had been stricken with an attack of acute appendicitis. So Luke, of course, immediately forgot all about baseball and hustled home. He returned before the game was over when advised that Mrs. Sewell's illness was not critical.

This is the third stroke of ill luck which the first-string catcher has suffered this season. In training, while playing the Clevelands well before the start of the season, a foul off Joe Vosmik's bat injured a finger so severely that he was unable to play in a regular game until June 13.

In his tenth game, not all complete ones, after getting back into harness—on June 26, to be exact—Sewell was hit in the head by a wild heave by Pitcher Irving Hadley, of the Browns, and brain concussion was feared. The injury proved not to be serious, however, and he was planned to try again yesterday when called away by Mrs. Sewell's illness.

Babe Ruth Reports Ill.

Babe Ruth came down with a mild attack of ptomaine poisoning yesterday morning and so was missing from the Yankee line-up. The Bambino is not expected to miss more than a couple of games. As a result of Ruth's absence, the Yanks started a right-handed hitting outfield yesterday for the first time in years. Sammy Byrd, the great golfer, filled in for the Babe in right.

The Nats leave for Philadelphia this morning, where they are booked for single games this afternoon and tomorrow. The two return to Washington tomorrow night for a July Fourth double-header. Al Thomas will hurl for the Nats today.

This holiday twin-bill will mark the Nats' last appearance here until Saturday, July 28, when they meet the Red Sox in a double-header. They leave for New York Wednesday night, play a four-game series there, and then hike West for their second invasion of the year.

Myer came in fast for Dickey's slow hopper to throw him out at first by a whisker for the third out in the third. It was a great play and came in particularly handy, for Byrd was crossing the plate with the third Yankee run of the inning at the time.

Gehrig made a great try for Manush's foul in the home third, reaching over into the field-boxes in short right for it. He caught the ball but dropped it while trying to prevent himself from falling into the seats.

Pitcher Bob Kline was all bedecked in a new Nat uniform yesterday. They could not think of any number big enough to cover Bob's back so left it blank. It is reliably reported the club plans to rent it out as advertising space.

McColl received a wicked clout on his right knee from Heffner's bat in the eighth, but insisted upon remaining in the game. The clout came after the batter apparently had struck out, but Umpire McGowan ruled that his swing had not quite reached the plate.

University A. C. Victor.

American University A. C. defeated the Treman-King nine, 3-2, in a close game yesterday. Connover granted only two hits for the victors.

Pirates' 2 Runs In Ninth Trim Cubs, 5-4

Thevenow Pounds Double With Bases Loaded to Provide Margin.

PITTSBURGH, July 1 (AP).—Lambasting a scorching double with the bases loaded and two gone in the ninth, Tommy Thevenow today robbed the Chicago Cubs of what seemed a sure victory by driving in the tying and winning runs for the Pittsburgh Pirates. The score was 5 to 4.

It looked like curtains for the Pirates as Bud Tinning retired two hitters in the ninth, and many of the 11,000 fans started for the gates. Lloyd Waner halted the march by gaining a walk, and Paul Waner got a sharp single to center which sent "Brother Lloyd" to third. Paul went to second on Cuyler's fumble.

Traynor Is Passed.

Manager Pie Traynor was up. The Cubs, their manager, Charlie Grimm, having been ejected in the fifth for disputing a decision, went into a huddle. Pie was passed, the Chicagoans figuring it would be better to pitch to Thevenow. The latter had gone in for Arky Vaughan after the shortstop was banished for protesting an umpire's decision.

Pat Malone had just relieved Bud Tinning on the Cubs' mound. Tommy smacked the second pitch into right center for two bases, sending the Waner brothers racing home.

Walker, of Tigers, Draws Suspension

St. Louis, July 1 (AP).—Outfielder Gerald Walker, of the Detroit Tigers, was indefinitely suspended without pay today by Manager Mickey Cochrane.

In a game with St. Louis yesterday Walker was caught between first and second bases, forcing Greenberg at third. Later in the same game he was caught off second and Cochrane said he had displayed poor base running in a recent series at Philadelphia. Walker left tonight for Detroit.

Giants Conquer Dodgers on Homers

Clouts by Jackson, O'Doul Provide All of Runs in 5-4 Victory.

NEW YORK, July 1 (AP).—Two home runs, hit by Travis Jackson and Lefty O'Doul, accounted for all the New York Giants runs today as the world champions defeated the Brooklyn Dodgers, 5 to 4, in the odd game of the series, played before 16,000.

Except for the home runs, the game was a hurling duel between Hal Schumacher and Leslie Munns, with the latter going the route for the first time and pitching well enough to win most games. He held the Giants to six hits, while the Dodgers nicked Schumacher for seven.

A critical error by Tony Cuccinello in the sixth started Munns' downfall. The mistake let O'Doul arrive safely at first, Bill Terry drew a pass and Jackson came through with his circuit blow. In the seventh Hughie Critz got a scratch hit and O'Doul followed with his homer.

Tigers Split Two With Browns

Score in Second, 12-3, After Being Defeated in Opener, 3-2.

Newsom, Coffman, Mills Fail to Check March in Nightcap.

ST. LOUIS, July 1 (AP).—After dropping the opener by the close score of 3 to 2, the Detroit Tigers came back in the second half of a double-header here today to rout the St. Louis Browns with a lop-sided 12-to-3 victory.

Newsom, Coffman and Mills each took a turn on the St. Louis mound in futile attempts to check the rampaging Tigers, who got 15 hits in the victory march. Rogell opened the attack with a first-inning triple that scored Fox and Gehringer. Owen got a homer in the fifth scoring two runners.

Petrolle 7-5 Favorite to Defeat Furr on Hunt Club's 32-Round Card Tonight

Both Boxers Are Tough Punchers

Have Good Records and Can Absorb Plenty of Punishment.

Joey Zoda Seeks Third Victory in Row Here, Facing Falegano.

MONS. GOLDILOCKS AHEARN, majo domo of the Riding and Hunt Club salon of sock, who dedicates his promotorial efforts to the paradoxical propositions of keeping his covered pavillion cool and his fights hot, promises to achieve both his aims in tonight's 32-round card, which is headed by a session of slub between welterweights Frankie Petrolle and Phil Furr.

Both of the contestants in the 10-round main event are punchers pure and simple, or at least the latter. If either of them knows anything at all about the business of blocking punches with portions of the anatomy other than the chin and ears, it is Petrolle and his scrabled features bear mute testimony to his ignorance of the subject. Furr is a kindergarten student in the ducking and blocking business, but both are post graduate students in the subject of sock and absorb.

The nockout Artist.

In his one and only previous appearance here, Petrolle had Ray Bowen on the floor three times before the courageous local welter started to work in real earnest and hammered out a close decision. His record, not including a few recent bouts, credits him with 12 knockouts in 59 fights, which is enough knockouts for any welterweight.

Furr's ability as a good right hand swatter can not be questioned. He has thumped his way to clear cut victories over Roy Manley, Hughey Gray, Don Whitlock, Glenn Morgan, Buster Brown, Pug Snyder and Lew Raymond. Lew Raymond decisively decisioned Tootsie Bashara in a recent Norfolk bout, which just gives you an idea of the real ability of the local lad.

The chief flaw in Furr's ring style is his inadequate defense, a flaw that has caused the gambling gentry to install Petrolle a very shaky 7-to-5 favorite to win on a decision.

Zoda Opposes Falegano.

In an interesting six-round semifinal, Joey Zoda, promising New York lightweight prospect, will attempt to stretch his local winning streak to three against Henry Falegano, crack Filipino swatsman, now fighting out of Norfolk. Falegano stopped Bucky Taylor, the Baltimore lightweight, in three rounds in Norfolk last week and is here looking for better, if not bigger, game.

In two other sixes, Mike Scipio, of Baltimore, will stack up against Pete Bevans, local welterweight, and Al Dintaman, Washington bantamweight, will sling his powerful right against Sammy Sweet. A four-rounder will bring together Wild Bill Howell and Dallas Palmer, a duo of lightweights.

Around the Ring Selections—Furr to beat Petrolle, Zoda to outbox Falegano, Scipio to outpunch Bevans, Dintaman to ditto Sweet, and Howell to ditto Palmer.

Front Royal Stars Nose Out Culpeper

RONT ROYAL, Va., July 1 (Spl.).—The Front Royal All-Stars lived up to their reputation as the leading ball club in northern Virginia by soundly trouncing the Culpeper nine members of the Shenandoah Valley League here this afternoon by the score of 4 to 1. Bobby Cassell, former Washington rookie, and Lefty Jewett, well-known sandlot ace, hooked up in a beautiful pitching duel. Cassell winning due to his ability to bear down in the pinches.

Lyle McFall was the defensive star, making several spectacular plays to quell Culpeper rallies. Goodwin and Huffman, with two hits each, and Casarotti, who drove in two runs, were offensive stars for the locals. Lowery, Culpeper left-fielder, robbed Cassell of a shut-out by hitting for the circuit in the sixth.

Veterans Get Call in Poll For Major All-Star Berths

Terry Draws Most Votes; Gehrig and Dickey Edge Out Foxx and Cochrane; Cronin, Whitehill and Manush Represent Nats.

NEW YORK, July 1 (AP).—The Nation's baseball fans, balloting to select the personnel of the all-star American and National League teams which clash in the Polo Grounds here July 10, have decided to string along with stars of established reputation.

The complete results of the poll, announced today, reveal a conspicuous lack of support for the freshman luminaries of the game who have flashed into the headlines for the first time this year. Experience, the public seems to have decided, will be a valuable asset for both teams, meeting for the second time in what is planned as an annual midseason classic. The American League won the first all-star game at Chicago last year, 4 to 2.

Although Joe Cronin, of the Senators, and Bill Terry, of the Giants, managers respectively of the American and National League outfits, will not be bound strictly by the results of the Nation-wide balloting, the poll nevertheless will furnish a valuable index when the two teams are selected.

Terry Leads in Poll.

Terry himself polled the largest number of votes of any player in either league. The world champion's manager and first baseman received 121,110 votes, against 120,781 for Charley Gehringer, crack second baseman of the Detroit Tigers, and 120,141 for Frankie Frisch, manager and second baseman of the St. Louis Cardinals.

Although he failed to threaten these figures, Babe Ruth, admittedly playing his last season for the Yankees, topped all American League outfielders wtih 114,999.

Left-handers dominated the balloting for the American League pitchers, Vernon Gomez, of the Yankees; Earl Whitehill, of the Nationals, and Bob Grove, of the Red Sox, finishing on top in that order. Gomez' 84,712 votes gave him a wide lead over all rivals in that contest.

Carl Hubbell, the Giants' southpaw world series hero, led the National League pitchers with 86,048 votes, but training him were two right-handers, Jerome (Dizzy) Dean, of the Cardinals, with 62,201, and Lon Warneke, of the Cubs, with 56,928.

Gehrig Tops Foxx.

Gehringer was so far out in front in the battle for second base in the Americna League there was no contest. Manager Jimmy Dykes, of the White Sox, enjoyed a wide lead over Pinky Higgins, of the Athletics, for third, and Cronin outdistanced all shortstop rivals. Bill Dickey beat Mickey Cochrane, Detroit manager, decisively for the first-string catching berth. Ruth, Earl Averill of the Indians, and Heinie Manush of the Senators, would form the first-string outfield on the basis of the balloting.

With Terry and Frisch dominating the first and second-base situations in the National League, Travis Jackson, of the Giants, was chosen shortstop with 82,430 votes, against 27,340 for Arky Vaughan, sensational Pirate youngster. Pie Traynor, Pirate manager, polled 115,018 votes, against 6,696 for Pepper Martin, of the Cardinals, for third base, and Al Lopez, of Brooklyn, defeated Gabby Hartnett, of the Cubs, 77,785 to 38,820, for the backstopping post. Klein, Joe Medwick of the Cardinals, and Walter Berger of the Braves, would furnish the first-string outfield trio.

Martinsburg Swamps Hagerstown, 13 to 4

Martinsburg, W. Va., July 1 (Spl.). Battering Bill Young all over the lot, the local Blue Sox continued in the running for the first half Blue Ridge League championship by defeating Hagerstown, 13 to 4, here today.

The Hubs proved no match for the Sox, who raw a pennant beckoning. They punched over five runs in the first inning, and the remainder of the game was a walkaway. The winners used three pitchers, Roberts, ace of the mound staff, pitching the first six frames; Butts two and Caskey one. Kilmer led the hitting with a triple, double and single.

Frederick Wins, 11-3, Over Chambersburg

Frederick, Md., July 1 (Spl.).—Frederick easily defeated Chambersburg in the Blue Ridge League at at McCurdy Field before a large crowd this afternoon 11 to 3. The Hustlers rapped Hamil and Harrison for 16 hits, including a double, two triples and two home runs. Frederick scored three in the secnd frame on singles by Angleberger, Huffman and McLainsie, a walk to Fraley and two errors and one in the next inning, and double by Garner. A triple by Angleberger and an outfield fly by Baer accounted for two more.

Fraley was touched for ten hits, he kept the blows scattered excpt in th sixthe inning when two runs were made, and was very effective with runners on bases. The Maroons were blanked for the first five innings and made but one run after two were shoved across in the sixth. McLainsie with three singles and a triple four times up, Huffman, with three singles in four trips to the plate, and Steele with two circuit blows led at the bat for the winners.

Prizes Offered Playground Athletes

Program at Takoma Park for Fourth to Start at 1:30 P. M.

IN addition to the finish of the A. A. U. District of Columbia ten-mile championship—sponsored by the Municipal Playground Department and Takoma Park citizens—the Takoma playground at Fourth and Whittier streets Wednesday will be the scene of a program of athletic events, beginning at 1:30 p. m., under auspices of the American Legion of Takoma Park, Md.

Features of the program will be an exhibition of gymnastics, boxing and wrestling by the Fifth Precinct Boys Club, a water battle between the firemen of Takoma Park and Silver Spring, and an invitation tug-of-war tournament between teams representing Takoma Park, Silver Spring, Bethesda and Kensington Fire Departments.

There also will be a number of races and other activities for boys and girls of Takoma Park (both the District and the Maryland sides), the prizes in the unlimited class being gold, silver and bronze medals given by the District Fourth of July celebration committee through Richard S. Tennyson, assistant supervisor of the D. C. Department of Playgrounds.

The progress of the marathon will be broadcast at the playground through a public address system, giving the location, times and placing of the leading runners every few minutes.

Takoma Trips All-Stars.

Sergt. Leroy Snyder, of the Montgomery County police, piloted the Takoma Park A. C. to a 10-3 victory yesterday over the hitherto undefeated All-State All-Stars on the Takoma diamond. Gordon Freas, Takoma first baseman, banged out a homer, triple, double, and received two walks in five trips to the plate.

EWA Nine Triumphs.

Behind the sterling pitching of Rayford, Emergency Works Administration won from Seabrook, 10-6, on the latter's diamond yesterday.

Doyle Reduces Odds on Nats; Now 4 to 1

Detroit Tigers Rise to 2-1; Yankees and Giants Are Favorites.

NEW SORK, July 1 (AP).—A sharp reduction in the odds against th Detroit Tigers' winning the American League pennant marks the midseason betting prices announced tonight by Jack Doyle, well-known Broadway commissioner.

Where Doyle quoted 15 to 1 against Mickey Cochrane's club in April, he will give no better than 2 to 1 against the Tigers now. The New York Yankees, jointly favored with Washington at 6 to 5 at the start of the campaign, still are favored at 7 to 5. The Nats have dropped to a third choice at 4 to 1 in Doyle's book. The Chicago White Sox have taken a terrific tumble, from 10 to 1 against in April to 1,000 to 1 against now.

Giants Are 7 to 5.

In the National League Doyle still quotes the New York Giants as favorites at 7 to 5.

Doyle's prices, giving the odds against each club finishing first, second and third, follow:

American League—New York, 7-5, 1-3, 1-6; Detroit, 2-1, 3-5, 1-4; Washington, 4-1, 6-5, 3-5; Boston, 6-1, 8-5, 7-10; Cleveland, 15-1, 3-1, 8-5; St. Louis, 60-1, 15-1, 6-1; Philadelphia, 100-1, 40-1, 20-1; Chicago, 1,000-1, 250-1, 100-1.

National League—New York, 7-5, 1-4, 1-10; St. Louis, 9-5, 1-3, 1-8; Chicago, 2-1, 1-2, 1-6; Pittsburgh, 8-1, 3-1, 4-5 Boston, 15-1, 4-1, 8-5; Brooklyn, 60-1, 20-2, 8-1; Philadelphia, 500-1, 200-1, 100-1; Cincinnati, 1,000-1, 500-1, 250-1.

Sarpolis to Face McLain, Boesch Meets Nabors Thursday Night.

ALREADY having complied with public demand in doubling up on wind-up rassling features when he matched Everett Marshall with Rudy Dusek and Ernie Dusek with Abe Coleman for next Thursday night, Promoter Joe Turner yesterday advanced still another notch in local favor.

In supporting 30-minute lead-ups to the Earl McCready-"Bibber" McCoy main preliminary feature, Turner succeeded in pitting Dr. Karl Sarpolis against Mayes McLain and Paul Boesch vs. Sid Nabors.

Sarpolis' return will be warmly welcomed by local enthusiasts.

Following a long rest prompted by overwork, Boesch has been coming back stronger than ever of late.

Carter Gives Up Job As Wilmington Pilot

Wilmington, N. C., July 1 (Spl.). The Wilmington Pirates will enter the second half of the Piedmont League season here tommorow night against Greensboro without the services of a regular manager.

Skipper Otis ("Blackie") Carter handed in his resignation to Owner J. N. Bryant late last night after a 14-inning marathon with Asheville. He told the club prexy he believed a change of scenery would do him good, assigning no other reason for his action.

Frankie Parker Takes Kentucky Tennis Title

Louisville, Ky., July 1 (AP).—Frankie Parker, of Milwaukee, today won the Kentucky amateur tennis championship by defeating Wilmer iHnes, of Columbia, S. C., in straight sets at the Louisville Boat Club. The scores were 7—5, 6—2 and 6—1.

Jane Sharp, of Pasadena, Calif., defeated Catherine Wolf, of Elkhart, Ind., 8—6, 6—3, for the women's title.

Walt Mason, Himself

Care of the Dog.

One who loves his little pup tries to keep it tight side up, free from troubles that will make bow-wows' lives a constant ache. And he reads the magazines telling what ill treatment means; if he lets his doggie roam in the streets, away from home, 'twill associate with curs, full of fleas and cockleburs. Dogs have democratic tricks, and they'd rather go and mix with the mongrels, chasing rats, than with true aristocrats. So the petted dog breaks loose from its kennel, leash or noose, and hunts up some bow-wows strange which have itch and fleas and mange, and when he goes home again, he's a shock to decent men, for he's scratching day and night, he is in an evil plight. Then he must be washed and boiled and anointed where he's soiled. One must watch him and repeat or he's liable to eat something poisonous and foul that will make him weep and howl. So he's fed the finest things that the vet'rinary brings, but it is his dearest plan to hunt up a garbage can and devour the rancid meat that no pious dog should eat. So some morning he is found lying gasping on the ground, full of garbage that would slay any bow-wow, black or gray. Says the owner, all agog, "I'll ne'er have another dog."

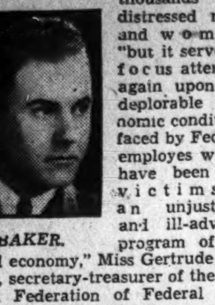
The Federal Diary

By Morgan Baker.
(Trade-mark Applied For)

Pictures of the 96 typical young Americans that represented the 48 States in the Federal Diary's Parade of the States will be on display this month in windows of Harris & Ewing, 1313 F street northwest opposite Loew's Palace Theater).



BAKER.

RESTORATION of an additional 5 per cent of the Government workers' pay yesterday not only will bring some relief to thousands of distressed men and women, "but it serves to focus attention again upon the deplorable economic conditions faced by Federal employes who have been the victims of an unjustified and ill-advised program of so-called economy," Miss Gertrude McNally, secretary-treasurer of the National Federation of Federal Employes, declared yesterday.

Return of this additional 5 per cent should not obscure them in the public mind, Miss McNally holds, as Federal employes today form the largest group of underpaid and overworked wage earners in the country.

"With the 'five and five' restoration effective," the employe leader said, "there is a general disposition to consider the Federal wage question settled. Nothing could be farther from either justice or a true statement of the facts.

"Federal employes always have been underpaid. When the so-called economy legislation came along, with the 15 per cent cut and pyramiding furloughs, which frequently ran the reduction as high as 50 per cent, thousands of Federal employes were brought to the brink of ruin. Underpaid before, their incomes often reached below subsistence levels.

"The Government has responsibility which it has failed to meet. The 'five and five' restoration is simply a step in the direction of overcoming a terrible injustice. Return of the additional 5 per cent should be a reminder that much remains to be done before the Government may say truthfully that it is in the vanguard as a progressive, forward-looking employer of labor," Miss McNally continued.

Meanwhile, headquarters of the National Federation of Federal Employes announced that it will continue its efforts at the next session of Congress to bring about a more equitable wage policy.

James Earle Miller (*), formerly with Veterans' Administration, has been appointed architect in charge of PWA projects in the Bureau of Agricultural Economics. Mr. Miller served 11 years in the Construction Service at Veterans' Administration, the past three years of which being chief of the Architectural Department.

LOW gross honors in the Income Tax Unit (Internal Revenue) Golf League's mixed foursomes at East Potomac Park go to Miss Era Tillotson (*), and Warren Lucas. Under ideal weather conditions 32 couples participated, the four leading low scores being: First low net, Mrs. John Hughes and Joseph Gross, 53-16—37; second low net, Miss Era Tillotson and Warren Lucas, 50-12—38; third low net, Miss Hollis Dunlop and John Seward, 52-13—39, and tied for fourth low net were Miss Grace Sexton and Allen Hendrix, 54-14—40, and Mrs. Isel McCormick and Arthur Adair, 53-13—40.

Fred Ruby and Miss Estelle R. Richardson, both of Hydrographic Office, Navy, were married Saturday afternoon at Elkton, Md. They immediately left on a honeymoon.

N. F. F. E. Meetings.

The N. F. F. E. program for the week includes a testimonial dinner to Lee R. Downs, Bureau of Standards employe, who retired Saturday after 31 years service. The Standards Local, No. 260, is honoring their fellow member and fellow-employe at the Tilden Gardens, adjoining the Bureau, at a banquet, Thursday, July 5, at 6:30 p. m.

Other meetings to be held at local headquarters, 710 Fourteenth street northwest, are that of the Navy Department branch, Local No. 2, Monday, July 2, 8 p. m.; Executive Council, Local No. 2, Friday, July 6, 5 p. m., and Local No. 71, colored employes, Friday at 8 p. m.

Diary Guest Tickets.

IF your name is followed by (*) call in person on the Federal Diary editor the same day. You will receive tickets to Loew's Columbia (Marion Davies and Gary Cooper in "Operator 13"); or to Loew's Palace (William Powell and Myrna Loy in "The Thin Man"); or to Loew's Fox (stage, Will Mahoney and Gertrude Miesen; screen, Shirley Temple in "Little Miss Marker").

Diary office hours are: Daily, except Sundays, 12 noon to 1 p. m., and from 4:30 to 6 p. m.; Saturdays, 12 noon to 2:30 p. m.

Barden Wins Carolina Democratic Run-Off

Charlotte, N. C., June 30 (AP).—Graham A. Barden, New Bern attorney, won the Democratic nomination for Congress in the Third District in today's run-off primary, on the face of nearly complete returns tabulated here tonight. He was opposed by Luther A. Hamilton, former State senator of Morehead City.

Barden and Hamilton, both young lawyers, entered the second primary as survivors of the first primary when Representative Charles Laban Abernathy, who represented the district 12 years, and three other candidates were eliminated.

Maryland College Plans New Building

The building will cost $165,000 and will house 160 students.

LIGHT BY RADIO- POWER TRANSMITTED BY THE NEW 500,000-WATT WLW STATION IN CINCINNATI CAUSED LIGHTS TO GLOW IN A RESIDENCE SEVERAL BLOCKS AWAY...
7-2-34
McNaught Syndicate, Inc., N. Y.

Ten times as powerful as the largest station in the country heretofore, the new Cincinnati station WLW broadcasts with 500,000 watts of power. This means that power equivalent to 700 horsepower goes into space from its huge antenna continuously when the station is operating.

Although this power diminshes very rapidly as the distance from the station increases, it has played strange pranks in the neighborhood of the transmitter. The sending station is located in Mason, Ohio, 22 miles from the Cincinnati studio.

At the residence of G. I. Gerard, in Mason, electric lights continued to glow even after they were turned off. This, radio engineers explain, was because the wiring of the house acted as an antenna which picked up enough power to light the bulbs. The Gerard home is located several hundred yards from WLW's antenna, but not until engineers rewired the house's lighting system was the unwanted power supply cut off.

If, however, all the power used by WLW was wired direct into homes it would be sufficient to serve all the domestic lighting needs of a city of 150,000 population—instead of lighting just a few lamps as it did by radio. Under normal operation the station will use 15,450,000 kilowatt hours in a year.

President Off On Hawaiian Cruise, With Work Taboo

Two of His Sons Accompany Him

Departure Ends Busiest Week of Roosevelt's Administration.

By Leon Dure, Jr.

Annapolis, Md., July 1.—With a minimum of ceremony, President Roosevelt early tonight boarded the cruiser Houston and began the longest voyage ever undertaken by an American Chief Executive.

The start of a month's cruise which will take him some 10,000 miles through the West Indies, the Panama Canal and on to Hawaii and back again was the anticlimax of one of the most spectacular weeks of the New Deal.

Accompanied by Mrs. Roosevelt, virtually all of the White House family, and a scattering of recovery lieutenants, the President drove immediately to the dock after an hour's motor trip from Washington.

The President paused at the gangplank of the destroyer Gilmer, ready to take him to the Houston, 8 miles offshore, for a last word with each of the family left behind. Clad in a gray striped suit, Panama hat and black and white tie, he formed the center of a laughing, happy group.

Informal Leave-Taking.

After embracing his tall sons, James and Elliott, he leaned forward for a few earnest words—and perhaps a bit of wifely advice—from Mrs. Roosevelt. Then, with a final kiss at parting, he strode up the gangplank, followed by the small retinue which is to accompany him.

Sailors on the Gilmer manned the rail. The boatswain's traditional piping heralded him aboard. But all ceremony was lost in the informal carefree atmosphere of the leavetaking. Mrs. Roosevelt circulated about bidding good-by to each of the President's companions.

Mr. Roosevelt stood at the rail for final photographs. Beside him beamed Rudolf Foster, executive clerk of the White House staff, who was singled out to be his only secretary aboard, and the President's youngest sons, Franklin, jr., and John.

At exactly 7:30 p. m. the Gilmer shoved off. Soon afterward the President was being taken aboard the Houston, which has been elaborately conditioned to serve as a temporary White House. As a flagship the Houston has admiral's quarters, which were converted and made

U. S. Restores 5 Per Cent Pay

Another 5 per cent of the Federal employes 15 per cent pay cut was restored yesterday, the Associated Press reports.

Under the terms of the independent offices bill, passed by Congress over President Roosevelt's veto, experts figured it would cost about $125,000,000 more than budget estimates for the new fiscal year which began today.

The independent offices bill also provided for restoration of veterans' compensation which was cut by the economy act. The total cost of both restorations was figured at $228,000,000 more than budget estimates.

Government workers received the first 5 per cent restoration last February. The President is empowered to give back the third and final 5 per cent on next January 1 if he finds a rise in living costs warrants it. Soldiers, sailors and other members of the military are included.

Here the restoration will put approximately $15,000,000 more into the pockets of the men and women in Government service.

Astor Newlyweds En Route West

Private Detectives Guard Honeymoon Train.

Philadelphia, July 1 (AP).—En route west on their honeymoon trip, Mr. and Mrs. John Jacob Astor 3d spent three hours in Philadelphia today to make train connections in their private car, the Superb.

They came from New York, arriving about 8 a. m. Private detectives guarded the car and none of the wedding party emerged. The car was attached to an express train and left for Chicago after 11 a. m.

The newlyweds are due in Chicago early tomorrow. From there they expect to go to Seattle and British Columbia.

U. S. Reveals Year's Deficit Of 4 Billions

Public Debt Is Raised to $27,053,141,414.48, All-Time Record.

(Associated Press.)

A deficit of $3,989,496,035.42 was announced yesterday by the Treasury for the first full fiscal year of the Roosevelt administration.

The Government spent $7,105,050,084.95 against an income of $3,115,554,049.53 and borrowed $4,514,468,854.33 to cover the difference and leave a sizable margin to carry into the new year.

The borrowings ran the Nation's public debt to an all-time peak of $27,053,141,414.48, against which Treasury had a cash remainder in hand of $2,581,922,240.16, a sum $1,719,717,019.55 greater than that with which the year began.

Disbursements were divided into $4,004,135,550.81 for emergency recovery program purposes and $3,100,914,534.14 for routine Government expenses, the latter figure being $765,000,924.74 less than for the prevous year.

Emergency Outlays Itemized.

The principal items of the emergency outlays were $1,714,932,338.15 for the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, $645,226,128.77 for the Public Works Administration, $716,162,892.29 for the Civil Works Administration, $340,742,149.08 for emergency relief and $331,940,851.40 for the Civilian Conservation Corps.

In this connection, officials pointed out that the RFC has collateralized repayable loans outstanding to a total of $1,722,000,000 (estimated as of June 8) and that the PWA holds State and municipal bonds totaling $149,335,229.75.

In an accompanying summary of the regular daily statement for the close of business last night, the end of the fiscal year, the Treasury noted that $359,864,092.90 had been diverted to "meeting sinking fund and other statutory requirements," so that the deficit, exclusive of debt retirements, was $3,629,631,942.52.

Similarly it deducted the balance of cash on hand, $2,581,922,240.16, from the gross public debt of $27,053,141,414.48, to produce a net public figure of $24,471,219,174.32. That is a customary procedure.

"Book" Profits Not Counted.

The statistics take no account of the book profit which the Treasury realized on its gold stocks due to the reduction in the gold weight of the dollar. This figure, $2,811,375,756.72, and the $2,000,000,000 exchange stabilization fund, taken from it, are carried in separate accounts.

The final figures for the year produced wide discrepancies with

Police Seek Fourth Man In Extortion Attempt

Murphysboro, Ill., July 1 (AP).—With three men in jail, authorities today sought a fourth suspect in connection with the attempt to extort money from James Rockwell, publisher of the Murphysboro Independent, and Lawrence Glenn, prominent attorney.

Sheriff W. W. Osborn said two of those held, James Small and Thurman Walker, had made written statements of their part in the extortion attempt. The third prisoner, Nathan Ripley, was quoted by the sheriff as saying a fourth man had forced him into the plot under threat of death.

Radio, Phone Market Bow To U. S. Rule

The Federal Government last night slipped a muzzle over the fangs of the bulls and bears of Wall street and fastened its grip on communications and aviation industries.

Manipulation, pool operations and other secret practices used to separate hapless investors from their savings, are barred, effective at once, by the stock market regulation act signed Saturday by President Roosevela.

He also set up the machinery by which he hopes to coax $1,000,000,000 of private capital into circulation to be used for modernization and repair of homes. James Moffett, named to administer the housing act, was instructed to get the renovation campaign under way within 30 days. The act authorizes the Government to guarantee 20 per cent which banks and building and loan associations lend to individuals for home renovation. It also provides that mortgages on new homes shall be insured by the Federal Government, provided they do not exceed $16,000.

Communications Hit.

Allegedly oppressive tactics in the vast communications industry will be scuttled by a boardheaded by Judge Eugene O. Sykes, whose soft Mississippi drawl masks an iron will and alert mind.

Clark Howell, editor of the Atlanta Constitution, will be chairman of a commission which will place the aviation industry on the dissecting table to see what makes it tick. His group will recommend a permanent airmail polisty to the Seventy-fourth Congress.

Having erected these three poles for his reform tent, Mr. Roosevelt made certain the second phase of his program—recovery—would not be endangered by industrial strife while he is away on his ocean cruise.

He created a National Labor Relations Board, headed by Lloyd Garrison, former Assistant Attorney General, with power to step in and force settlement of labor disturb-

Duke Forces In PWA Fight

(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press.)

The Duke Endowment last night initiated a public campaign for revocation by the Public Works Administration of a $2,767,000 loan and grant to Greenwood County, S. C., for a municipal power plant that would compete with the Duke Power Co.

Anticipating a PWA hearing today, Dr. W. S. Rankin made public a memorandum addressed to more than 300 beneficiaries of the organization founded in 1924 by the late tobacco multimillionaire, James B. Duke.

"The Federal Government," it said, "is pursuing policies which, unless abandoned, will seriously cripple, if not destroy, the Duke Power Co."

The endowment largely relies on that company, Dr. Rankin explained in handing out the document, for funds distributed annually in North and South Carolina to various hospitals, orphanages and churches, as well as Duke University, Davidson, Johnson, Smith and Furman Colleges.

It was revealed that Senator Bailey and Representatives Doughton and Bulwinkle, of North Carolina, had interceded with the Administration to get reconsideration of the loan. When the hearing was granted, identity of the objecting organization was not made public here.

Final Darrow Blast Backs Little Fellow

Roosevelt Is Told NRA Now "an Adjunct" to Monopolies.

Report Calls Codes Too Drastic; Steel Men's Insolence Cited.

By Frank Getty.

The Darrow board made its final appeal for the "little fellow" in industry yesterday.

In a third report to President Roosevelt, the board declared the National recovery act not only has failed to fulfill its purpose, but has become, in some instances, "not the foe but the adjunct of depression."

Monopolies have been fostered by NRA and nothing done to restrain them, the report asserted. Small enterprises are being suppressed and the consumer entirely overlooked.

There are too many codes, and they are too drastic and attempt too much, the board found, declaring "there seems to be a sinister purpose to entrench monopolistic practices and evil conditions in the processes of the recovery act."

Couched in spicy and vigorous language, characteristic of its retired chairman, Clarence Darrow, the board's report flays the revised steel code as oppressive and charges "purposed contempt," "chill insolence," "gouging" and "brigandage" against officials of United States Steel and other leaders of the industry.

Code Resignations Urged.

Wholesale resignations of existing code authorities are demanded.

Covering in detail the faults it found in 12 major codes, the National Recovery Review Board, to give it its official title, submitted strongly worded findings and recommendations, and announced it had gone into recess until it hears from the President. The report was signed by Darrow, W. W. Neal, Fred P. Mann., sr., and Samuel C. Henry.

While the report did not, as forecast, charge "betrayal" of small enterprises by NRA, it pointed out that such concerns "can not, without ceasing to exist, comply with the requirements that mean surrender of their vital business secrets."

Among the most important of the board's findings was that "the attempt to fix prices was an error, and should be abandoned as soon as possible."

Summarizing its work since March 7, when it was created by Executive order, the Darrow board advised the President it had investigated 34 codes, received and examined 3,375 complaints and held 57 public hearings. Its conclusions are summarized in nine paragraphs:

1. In industry after industry, the larger units, sometimes through the agency of an "Institute," have for their own advantage written their codes and assumed administration thereof. The interests of the Nation and the consuming public have been ignored.

Small Enterprise Ruined.

2. A majority of the codes not only permit but foster monopolistic practices, and the small enterprise is not only oppressed but in many cases its exit is accelerated from the field of business.

3. Although these evil conditions have been demonstrated and are known to exist, nothing has been done to remove or even restrain them. On the contrary, "there seems to be a sinister purpose to entrench them still more securely in the processes of the act, to make

Two Dead, Pilot Hurt In Air Stunting Crash

Browerville, Minn., July 1 (AP).—Two passengers were killed and the pilot seriously injured in a plane crash today.

The dead were Peter Buhl, 38, and Louis Nalewaja, 20, both farmers near here. The pilot was Andrew Buhl, 33, brother of Peter. He suffered internal injuries. The pilot was stunting at about 1,000 feet when the plane nose-dived.

Hitler Executes Ten More Rebels; Toll Now 18; Storm Troop Leaders Are Seized

(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press.)

Berlin, July 1.—Chancellor Hitler was reported today to have carried on his purge-by-death of the Nazi party by having ten additional rebelling Storm Troop leaders executed, bringing the total killed in this manner to 18.

This figure did not take into account those high in the nation who committed suicide or were killed "resisting arrest" as Hitler struck furiously against rebelling subleaders.

The general situation, outwardly calm today, was complicated by revelation that President Paul von Hindenburg is ill enough to require a "major medical council" of leading physicians at his summer home at Neudeck.

The nearest thing to official confirmation that ten names were added to the list of those executed was a statement by Hermann Wilhelm Goering, Prussian premier and copurger with Hitler, that "a few more" executions would be announced soon.

Lawyer Executed.

Nazi quarters in Munich stated that Kerl Zehnter, an innkeeper, and Alexander G. Laser, a lawyer, were executed today at Stadelheim Prison "as traitors."

The determination of Hitler and his colleagues to carry on ruthlessly was voiced in a radio speech by Dr. Joseph Goebbels, propaganda minister, in which he warned that "those who conspire against the state" are "playing with their own heads."

Meanwhile, Vice Chancellor von Papen, closest friend of Von Hindenburg in the present government, was partially under arrest in his own private residence, which he had been forbidden to leave.

A thorough investigation of the Storm Troopers found under arrest, which included the Berlin special staff guard, was promized by Goering. He said the public will be thoroughly advised of results of the investigation.

Reports tonight from the country estate of President von Hindenburg, at Neudeck, stated that no immediate crisis is feared and indicared that the remarkable vital-

Bandits Slug Doctor; Blame Upon Dillinger

Police were quick to express the opinion his assailants were members of the Dillinger gang, but tonight the doctor said he was not able to identify any photographs of known Dillinger mobsmen as those who attacked him.

"Of course," he said, "I might be mistaken, but I got a pretty good look at them. I don't know whether they were Dillinger men."

The sheriff, coming here from Warsaw where John Dillinger and a henchman not so long ago slugged a policeman and made away with arms and ammunition, said he was not certain that fingerprints found in the doctor's office would prove of value.

Routed From Bed.

The attack occurred in the early hours. The doctor was routed from bed by a knock o nhis door and asked by a man to go to his office to treat a friend hurt in an automobile accident.

When they arrived at his office, Dr. Laird discovered his patient suffering from a bullet wound in the arm. He treated it and then the men asked for narcotics. Refused, one of them strucn the doctor over the head with the butt of his gun, knocking him out.

The doctor recovered conscious-

Marie Dressler Passes Fairly Restful Night

Santa Barbara, Calif., July 1 (AP). Marie Dressler, veteran actress of the stage and screen, critically ill at the home of friends here, passed a "fairly comfortable" night, her physicians reported today. They said there had been no change in her condition.

Miss Dressler, who lapsed into a coma Friday, was able today to recognize attendants, and made efforts to speak to them. The actress is suffering from cancer.

France Vindicates 5 Soldiers Shot for Mutiny Under Fire

Paris, July 1 (AP).—Five war-weary soldiers, chosen by lot and shot for the mutiny of their company in 1915, were vindicated today and the widows of two of them awarded 7 cents apiece.

A special military tribunal acquitted them of the mutinous offense to clear their names. For more than ten years the case of the Fifth Company has gone from court to court while the widows of soldiers, Prevost and Morange, aided by interested attorneys, sought vindication.

On April 19, 1915, the Sixty-third Infantry returned to the trenches after a bloody expedition into the German lines in the St. Mihiel sector.

The Fifth Company, of which Sergt. Morange and Private Prevost were members, was almost cut to pieces.

But the Fifth had the best fighting record in the regiment, and the superior commander needed them. So it was returned immediately to the front lines while other companies rested.

"At the moment when the Fifth returned to the front line," says the official record, "the German machine gunners set up a terrific, endless fire. The trenches were a living hell. The dead from the preceding attack were piled one upon the other."

The officers of the Fifth gave the orders to go over the top, but the men did not move.

The commanding officers met shortly afterward and decided the whole company should be taken before the council of war, which undoubtedly would order them executed en masse. It was decided, instead, to select by lot, one man from each squad. Five men appeared before the council and were ordered executed by a firing squad.

When the present review court opened, one of the justices remarked that the war council never would have sentenced the men if it had known how they were chosen. But the company's officers did not explain.

Reich Rings With Hitler's Death Slogan

Joseph Goebbells Says More Heads to Roll, if Necessary.

Berlin, July 1 (AP).—Adolf Hitler's famous "heads shall roll" slogan was again drummed into ears of "conspirators" tonight by Dr. Joseph Goebbels, propaganda minister, in a nation-wide radio broadcast.

Speaking to a people which had just been startled by summary executions of men who stood high in the Nazi government, he threatened that there will be more executions if any one attempts a revolt.

"Those who conspire against the state may rest assured that they are playing with their own heads," said Goebbels in a dramatic voice.

He assured the public that order and quiet prevail throughout the Reich and that the situation is firmly in Hitler's hands.

Recalling Hitler's dramatic personal appearance at Munich before dawn Saturday to seize his former friend, Ernst Roehm, Goebbels said that Roehm and the other executed Storm Troop leaders "have met their fate."

"They did not understand our warnings," he said. "They speculated upon Hitler's leniency, but the punishment will be greater, the higher the rank.

"The friendliness of the party and the Sturm Abteilung (Storm Troopers) has been restored by Hitler and the whole nation indorses the Fuehrer's determined action."

The surprise raid on the mutinying Storm Troop leaders was a 100 per cent success, Goebbels said.

"The Fuehrer will grasp any one's hand extended to him in friendship," said Goebbels, "but fists raised against him will be broken with unprecedented force—conspirators will be thrown to the floor of their homes, broken."

The address, which was relayed to United States, British and Argentine radio stations, concluded with an appeal to the nation to stand with Hitler like one man.

2 Wealthy Children Die as Home Burns

Erhart Relatives Victims in California Blaze.

San Mateo, Calif., July 1 (AP).—John, 6, and Henrietta Ruggles, 8, grandchildren of William H. Erhart, New York and Cedarhurst, Long Island, multimillionaire, were burned to death today in a fire which destroyed the home of their mother, Mrs. Erhart Ruggles.

The children were trapped in their rooms as the flames, which firemen said apparently started from a short circuit, spread through the house.

Mrs. Ruggles was not at home at the time, while servants barely escaped with their lives without being able to aid the children.

Couple Try Surgery For Marital Trouble

Chicago, July 1 (AP).—The Folmer N. Petersons were about to break up, so they tried surgery. Mrs. Peterson asserted her husband had a terrible disposition and she filed for divorce. A doctor examined the husband, found he had a goitre, and operated. The operation, said the doctor, might ameliorate conditions around home.

Anyhow, Mrs. Peterson is giving the new Folmer a three weeks trial to see if surgery can help Cupid—and his disposition.

Father Kills 4 When Party Disturbs Him

Warns Once of Noise, Then Opens Fire With an Automatic Rifle.

East Tawas, Mich., July 1 (AP).—Sheriff Charles C. Miller and three guests at a house party in the Arthur Janson home here were shot to death early this morning by Arthur A. Woods, 52, Janson's father-in-law, who complained that the noise of the party disturbed his sleep.

The dead, besides Sheriff Miller, were Dr. Stanley Somers, of East Tawas, and Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Hayes. Roy Hickey, also a guest at the party, was wounded.

Woods, authorities said, complained about the noise interfering with his sleep. Without warning, he walked into the room and opened fire with an automatic rifle.

Dr. Somers was killed instantly. Hayes and his wife died in a hospital a few hours after the shooting. Sheriff Miller was shot as he met Woods at the rear door of the Janson home.

Woods fired once, the bullet striking the sheriff in the stomach. The sheriff died en route to the hospital.

Calmly, Woods reentered the Janson home, where his victims were still sprawled on the floor, gathered up his two grandchildren and took them to the home of a neighbor. Then he walked to Tawas City and surrendered.

Soldier Drowned At Herald Harbor

Sinks in Friends' Sight After Heart Attack.

William Upright, 23, Army private stationed at Walter Reed Hospital, was drowned Saturday night while swimming in Chesapeake Bay at Herald Harbor, it was learned yesterday.

Officials at the hospital said Upright motored down with a group of friends. Physicians, after an autopsy, said he apparently suffered a heart attack while swimming.

Witnesses reported that Upright was swimming from a small boat near shore. He had dived several times and was paddling a few feet away when he suddenly called for help and disappeared. It was nearly an hour before his body was recovered.

Upright came here from New York State and had been attached to the medical base for several months.

"Daddy" Browning's Condition Is Worse

New York, July 1 (AP).—Edward W. (Daddy) Browning is in a critical condition from a paralytic stroke at the Hospital for Joint Diseases, his physicians said today.

"Patient's condition not favorable," said a bulletin. "Stupor more pronounced. Heart action weaker. Breathing more shallow. Cyanosis deeper. Pulse is weaker. General restlessness."

Cardenas Wins Mexican Ballot

Mexico City, July 1 (AP).—Gen. Lazaro Cardenas, 39-year-old revolutionary veteran, today was chosen forty-fifth constitutional President of Mexico, in an election which reports from the principal cities indicated was the quietest in history.

Aided by the powerful political machine of the National Revolutionary party, Cardenas tonight appeared assured of at least 80 per cent of the total vote.

Gen. Antonio Villareal, candidate of the Independent Democratic parties, was running second, and Col. Adalberto Tejeda, Left Socialist candidate, trailed.

Police and soldiers were quartered in the capital and elsewhere but were not needed, as no disorder occurred.

Tejeda charged numerous irregularities and said he would appeal to Congress to set aside the election.

The whereabouts of Villareal has not been known since he left Monterrey Friday, resulting in rumors he was planning an insurrection.

RESTORATION of an additional 5 per cent of the Government workers' pay yesterday not only will bring some relief to thousands of distressed men and women, "but it serves to focus attention again upon the deplorable economic conditions faced by Federal employes who have been the victims of an unjustified and ill-advised program of so-called economy," Miss Gertrude McNally, secretary-treasurer of the National Federation of Federal Employes, declared yesterday.

Return of this additional 5 per cent should not obscure them in the public mind, Miss McNally holds, as Federal employes today form the largest group of underpaid and overworked wage earners in the country.

"With the 'five and five' restoration effective," the employe leader said, "there is a general disposition to consider the Federal wage question settled. Nothing could be farther from either justice or a true statement of the facts.

"Federal employes always have been underpaid. When the so-called economy legislation came along, with the 15 per cent cut and pyramiding furloughs, which frequently ran the reduction as high as 50 per cent, thousands of Federal employes were brought to the brink of ruin. Underpaid before, their incomes often reached below subsistence levels.

"The Government has responsibility which it has failed to meet. The 'five and five' restoration is simply a step in the direction of overcoming a terrible injustice. Return of the additional 5 per cent should be a reminder that much remains to be done before the Government may say truthfully that it is in the vanguard as a progressive, forward-looking employer of labor," Miss McNally continued.

Meanwhile, headquarters of the National Federation of Federal Employes announced that it will continue its efforts at the next session of Congress to bring about a more equitable wage policy.

Barden Wins Carolina Democratic Run-Off

Charlotte, N. C., June 30 (AP).—Graham A. Barden, New Bern attorney, won the Democratic nomination for Congress in the Third District in today's run-off primary, on the face of nearly complete returns tabulated here tonight. He was opposed by Luther A. Hamilton, former State senator of Morehead City.

Barden and Hamilton, both young lawyers, entered the second primary as survivors of the first primary when Representative Charles Laban Abernathy, who represented the district 12 years, and three other candidates were eliminated.

McNaught Syndicate, Inc., N. Y.

Ten times as powerful as the largest station in the country heretofore, the new Cincinnati station WLW broadcasts with 500,000 watts of power. This means that power equivalent to 700 horsepower goes into space from its huge antenna continuously when the station is operating.

Although this power diminshes very rapidly as the distance from the station increases, it has played strange pranks in the neighborhood of the transmitter. The sending station is located in Mason, Ohio, 22 miles from the Cincinnati studio.

At the residence of G. I. Gerard, in Mason, electric lights continued to glow even after they were turned off. This, radio engineers explain, was because the wiring of the house acted as an antenna which picked up enough power to light the bulbs. The Gerard home is located several hundred yards from WLW's antenna, but not until engineers rewired the house's lighting system was the unwanted power supply cut off.

If, however, all the power used by WLW was wired direct into homes it would be sufficient to serve all the domestic lighting needs of a city of 150,000 population—instead of lighting just a few lamps as it did by radio. Under normal operation the station will use 15,450,000 kilowatt hours in a year.

Tomorrow: The first father of his country.

President Off On Hawaiian Cruise, With Work Taboo

Two of His Sons Accompany Him

Departure Ends Busiest Week of Roosevelt's Administration.

By Leon Dure, Jr.

Annapolis, Md., July 1.—With a minimum of ceremony, President Roosevelt early tonight boarded the cruiser Houston and began the longest voyage ever undertaken by an American Chief Executive.

The start of a month's cruise which will take him some 10,000 miles through the West Indies, the Panama Canal and on to Hawaii and back again was the anticlimax of one of the most spectacular weeks of the New Deal.

Accompanied by Mrs. Roosevelt, virtually all of the White House family, and a scattering of recovery lieutenants, the President drove immediately to the dock after an hour's motor trip from Washington.

The President paused at the gangplank of the destroyer Gilmer, ready to take him to the Houston, 8 miles offshore, for a last word with each of the family left behind. Clad in a gray striped suit, Panama hat and black and white tie, he formed the center of a laughing, happy group.

Informal Leave-Taking.

After embracing his tall sons, James and Elliott, he leaned forward for a few earnest words—and perhaps a bit of wifely advice—from Mrs. Roosevelt. Then, with a final kiss at parting, he strode up the gangplank, followed by the small retinue which is to accompany him.

Sailors on the Gilmer manned the rail. The boatswain's traditional piping heralded him aboard. But all ceremony was lost in the informal carefree atmosphere of the leavetaking. Mrs. Roosevelt circulated about bidding good-by to each of the President's companions.

Mr. Roosevelt stood at the rail for final photographs. Beside him beamed Rudolf Foster, executive clerk of the White House staff, who was singled out to be his only secretary aboard, and the President's youngest sons, Franklin, jr., and John.

At exactly 7:30 p. m. the Gilmer shoved off. Soon afterward the President was being taken aboard the Houston, which has been elaborately conditioned to serve as a temporary White House. As a flagship the Houston has admiral's quarters, which were converted and made

U. S. Restores 5 Per Cent Pay

Another 5 per cent of the Federal employes 15 per cent pay cut was restored yesterday, the Associated Press reports.

Under the terms of the independent offices bill, passed by Congress over President Roosevelt's veto, experts figured it would cost about $125,000,000 more than budget estimates for the new fiscal year which began today.

The independent offices bill also provided for restoration of veterans' compensation which was cut by the economy act. The total cost of both restorations was figured at $228,000,000 more than budget estimates.

Government workers received the first 5 per cent restoration last February. The President is empowered to give back the third and final 5 per cent on next January 1 if he finds a rise in living costs warrants it. Soldiers, sailors and other members of the military are included.

Here the restoration will put approximately $15,000,000 more into the pockets of the men and women in Government service.

U. S. Reveals Year's Deficit Of 4 Billions

Public Debt Is Raised to $27,053,141,414.48, All-Time Record.

(Associated Press.)

A deficit of $3,989,496,035.42 was announced yesterday by the Treasury for the first full fiscal year of the Roosevelt administration.

The Government spent $7,105,050,084.95 against an income of $3,115,554,049.53 and borrowed $4,514,468,854.33 to cover the difference and leave a sizable margin to carry into the new year.

The borrowings ran the Nation's public debt to an all-time peak of $27,053,141,414.48, against which Treasury had a cash remainder on hand of $2,581,922,240.16, a sum $1,719,717,019.55 greater than that with which the year began.

Disbursements were divided into $4,004,135,550.81 for emergency recovery program purposes and $3,100,914,534.14 for routine Government expenses, the latter figure being $765,000,924.74 less than for the prevous year.

Emergency Outlays Itemized.

The principal items of the emergency outlays were $1,714,932,338.15 for the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, $645,226,128.77 for the Public Works Administration, $716,162,892.29 for the Civil Works Administration, $340,742,149.08 for emergency relief and $331,940,851.40 for the Civilian Conservation Corps.

In this connection, officials pointed out that the RFC has collateralized repayable loans outstanding to a total of $1,722,000,000 (estimated as of June 8) and that the PWA holds State and municipal bonds totaling $149,335,229.75.

In an accompanying summary of the regular daily statement for the close of business last night, the end of the fiscal year, the Treasury noted that $359,864,092.90 had been diverted to "meeting sinking fund and other statutory requirements," so that the deficit, exclusive of debt retirements, was $3,629,631,942.52.

Similarly it deducted the balance of cash on hand, $2,581,922,240.16, from the gross public debt of $27,053,141,414.48, to produce a net public figure of $24,471,219,174.32. That is a customary procedure.

"Book" Profits Not Counted.

The statistics take no account of the book profit which the Treasury realized on its gold stocks due to the reduction in the gold weight of the dollar. This figure, $2,811,375,756.72, and the $2,000,000,000 exchange stabilization fund, taken from it, are carried in separate accounts.

The final figures for the year produced wide discrepancies with

Police Seek Fourth Man In Extortion Attempt

Murphysboro, Ill., July 1 (AP). —With three men in jail, authorities today sought a fourth suspect in connection with the attempt to extort money from James Rockwell, publisher of the Murphysboro Independent, and Lawrence Glenn, prominent attorney.

Sheriff W. W. Osborn said two of those held, James Small and Thurman Walker, had made written statements of their part in the extortion attempt. The third prisoner, Nathan Ripley, was quoted by the sheriff as saying a fourth man had forced him into the plot under threat of death.

Radio, Phone Market Bow To U. S. Rule

The Federal Government last night slipped a muzzle over the fangs of the bulls and bears of Wall street and fastened its grip on communications and aviation industries.

Manipulation, pool operations and other secret practices used to separate hapless investors from their savings, are barred, effective at once, by the stock market regulation act signed Saturday by President Roosevela.

He also set up the machinery by which he hopes to coax $1,000,000,000 of private capital into circulation to be used for modernization and repair of homes. James A. Moffett, named to administer the housing act, was instructed to get the renovation campaign under way within 30 days. The act authorizes the Government to guarantee 20 per cent which banks and building and loan associations lend to individuals for home renovation. It also provides that mortgages on new homes shall be insured by the Federal Government, provided they do not exceed $16,000.

Communications Hit.

Allegedly oppressive tactics in the vast communications industry will be scuttled by a boardheaded by Judge Eugene O. Sykes, whose soft Mississippi drawl masks an iron will and alert mind.

Clark Howell, editor of the Atlanta Constitution, will be chairman of a commission which will place the aviation industry on the dissecting table to see what makes it tick. His group will recommend a permanent airmail polisty to the Seventy-fourth Congress.

Having erected these three poles for his reform tent, Mr. Roosevelt made certain the second phase of his program—recovery—would not be endangered by industrial strife while he is away on his ocean cruise.

He created a National Labor Relations Board, headed by Lloyd Garrison, former Assistant Attorney General, with power to step in and force settlement of labor disturb-

Duke Forces In PWA Fight

(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press.)

The Duke Endowment last night initiated a public campaign for revocation by the Public Works Administration of a $2,767,000 loan and grant to Greenwood County, S. C., for a municipal power plant that would compete with the Duke Power Co.

Anticipating a PWA hearing today, Dr. W. S. Rankin made public a memorandum addressed to more than 300 beneficiaries of the organization founded in 1924 by the late tobacco multimillionaire, James B. Duke.

"The Federal Government," it said, "is pursuing policies which, unless abandoned, will seriously cripple, if not destroy, the Duke Power Co."

The endowment largely relies on that company, Dr. Rankin explained in handing out the document, for funds distributed annually in North and South Carolina to various hospitals, orphanages and churches, as well as Duke University, Davidson, Johnson, Smith and Furman Colleges.

It was revealed that Senator Bailey and Representatives Doughton and Bulwinkle, of North Carolina, had interceded with the Administration to get reconsideration of the loan. When the hearing was granted, identity of the objecting organization was not made public here.

Final Darrow Blast Backs Little Fellow

Roosevelt Is Told NRA Now "an Adjunct" to Monopolies.

Report Calls Codes Too Drastic; Steel Men's Insolence Cited.

By Frank Getty.

The Darrow board made its final appeal for the "little fellow" in industry yesterday.

In a third report to President Roosevelt, the board declared the National recovery act not only has failed to fulfill its purpose, but has become, in some instances, "not the foe but the adjunct of depression."

Monopolies have been fostered by NRA and nothing done to restrain them, the report asserted. Small enterprises are being suppressed and the consumer entirely overlooked.

There are too many codes, and they are too drastic and attempt too much, the board found, declaring "there seems to be a sinister purpose to entrench monopolistic practices and evil conditions in the processes of the recovery act."

Couched in spicy and vigorous language, characteristic of its retired chairman, Clarence Darrow, the board's report flays the revised steel code as oppressive and charges "purposed contempt," "chill insolence," "gouging" and "brigandage" against officials of United States Steel and other leaders of the industry.

Code Resignations Urged.

Wholesale resignations of existing code authorities are demanded.

Covering in detail the faults it found in 12 major codes, the National Recovery Review Board, to give it its official title, submitted strongly worded findings and recommendations, and announced it had gone into recess until it hears from the President. The report was signed by Darrow, W. W. Neal, Fred P. Mann., sr., and Samuel C. Henry.

While the report did not, as forecast, charge "betrayal" of small enterprises by NRA, it pointed out that such concerns "can not, without ceasing to exist, comply with the requirements that mean surrender of their vital business secrets."

Among the most important of the board's findings was that "the attempt to fix prices was an error, and should be abandoned as soon as possible."

Summarizing its work since March 7, when it was created by Executive order, the Darrow board advised the President it had investigated 34 codes, received and examined 3,375 complaints and held 57 public hearings. Its conclusions are summarized in nine paragraphs:

1. In industry after industry, the larger units, sometimes through the agency of an "Institute," have for their own advantage written their codes and assumed administration thereof. The interests of the Nation and the consuming public have been ignored.

Small Enterprise Ruined.

2. A majority of the codes not only permit but foster monopolistic practices, and the small enterprise is not only oppressed but in many cases its exit is accelerated from the field of business.

3. Although these evil conditions have been demonstrated and are known to exist, nothing has been done to remove or even restrain them. On the contrary, "there seems to be a sinister purpose to entrench them still more securely in the processes of the act, to make

The dead were Peter Buhl, 38, and Louis Nalewaja, 20, both farmers near here. The pilot was Andrew Buhl, 33, brother of Peter. He suffered internal injuries. The pilot was stunting at about 1,000 feet when the plane nose-dived.

France Vindicates 5 Soldiers Shot for Mutiny Under Fire

Paris, July 1 (AP).—Five war-weary soldiers, chosen by lot and shot for the mutiny of their company in 1915, were vindicated today and the widows of two of them awarded 7 cents apiece.

A special military tribunal acquitted them of the mutinous offense to clear their names. For more than ten years the case of the Fifth Company has gone from court to court while the widows of soldiers, Prevost and Morange, aided by interested attorneys, sought vindication.

On April 19, 1915, the Sixty-third Infantry returned to the trenches after a bloody expedition into the German lines in the St. Mihiel sector.

The Fifth Company, of which Sergt. Morange and Private Prevost were members, was almost cut to pieces.

But the Fifth had the best fighting record in the regiment, and the superior commander needed them. So it was returned immediately to the front lines while other companies rested.

"At the moment when the Fifth returned to the front line," says the official record, "the German machine gunners set up a terrific, endless fire. The trenches were a living hell. The dead from the preceding attack were piled one upon the other."

The officers of the Fifth gave the orders to go over the top, but the men did not move.

The commanding officers met shortly afterward and decided the whole company should be taken before the council of war, which undoubtedly would order them executed en masse. It was decided, instead, to select by lot, one man from each squad. Five men appeared before the council and were ordered executed by a firing squad.

When the present review court opened, one of the justices remarked that the war council never would have sentenced the men if it had known how they were chosen. But the company's officers did not explain.

Hitler Executes Ten More Rebels; Toll Now 18; Storm Troop Leaders Are Seized

Goering Decree Places Ban on Discussion of Bloody Drive.

Ernst Roehm Shot Under Hitler Order

(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press.)

Berlin, July 1.—Chancellor Hitler was reported today to have carried on his purge-by-death of the Nazi party by having ten additional rebelling Storm Troop leaders executed, bringing the total killed in this manner to 18.

This figure did not take into account those high in the nation who committed suicide or were killed "resisting arrest" as Hitler struck furiously against rebelling subleaders.

The general situation, outwardly calm today, was complicated by revelation that President Paul von Hindenburg is ill enough to require a "major medical council" of leading physicians at his summer home at Neudeck.

The nearest thing to official confirmation that ten names were added to the list of those executed was a statement by Hermann Wilhelm Goering, Prussian premier and copurger with Hitler, that "a few more" executions would be announced soon.

Lawyer Executed.

Nazi quarters in Munich stated that Kerl Zehnter, an innkeeper, and Alexander G. Laser, a lawyer, were executed today at Stadelheim Prison "as traitors."

The determination of Hitler and his colleagues to carry on ruthlessly was voiced in a radio speech by Dr. Joseph Goebbels, propaganda minister, in which he warned that "those who conspire against the state" are "playing with their own heads."

Meanwhile, Vice Chancellor von Papen, closest friend of Von Hindenburg in the present government, was partially under arrest in his own private residence, which he had been forbidden to leave.

A thorough investigation of the Storm Troopers found under arrest, which included the Berlin special staff guard, was promised by Goering. He said the public will be thoroughly advised of results of the investigation.

Reports tonight from the country estate of President von Hindenburg, at Neudeck, stated that no immediate crisis is feared and indicared that the remarkable vital-

Bandits Slug Doctor; Blame Upon Dillinger

Police were quick to express the opinion his assailants were members of the Dillinger gang, but tonight the doctor said he was not able to identify any photographs of known Dillinger mobsmen as those who attacked him.

"Of course," he said, "I might be mistaken, but I got a pretty good look at them. I don't know whether they were Dillinger men."

The sheriff, coming here from Warsaw where John Dillinger and a henchman not so long ago slugged a policeman and made away with arms and ammunition, said he was not certain that fingerprints found in the doctor's office would prove of value.

Routed From Bed.

The attack occurred in the early hours. The doctor was routed from bed by a knock o nhis door and asked by a man to go to his office to treat a friend hurt in an automobile accident.

When they arrived at his office, Dr. Laird discovered his patient suffering from a bullet wound in the arm. He treated it and then the men asked for narcotics. Refused, one of them strucn the doctor over the head with the butt of his gun, knocking him out.

The doctor recovered conscious-

Marie Dressler Passes Fairly Restful Night

Santa Barbara, Calif., July 1 (AP). Marie Dressler, veteran actress of the stage and screen, critically ill at the home of friends here, passed a "fairly comfortable" night, her physicians reported today. They said there had been no change in her condition.

Miss Dressler, who lapsed into a coma Friday, was able today to recognize attendants, and made efforts to speak to them. The actress is suffering from cancer.

Reich Rings With Hitler's Death Slogan

Joseph Goebbels Says More Heads to Roll, if Necessary.

Berlin, July 1 (AP).—Adolf Hitler's famous "heads shall roll" slogan was again drummed into ears of "conspirators" tonight by Dr. Joseph Goebbels, propaganda minister, in a nation-wide radio broadcast.

Speaking to a people which had just been startled by summary executions of men who stood high in the Nazi government, he threatened that there will be more executions if any one attempts a revolt.

"Those who conspire against the state may rest assured that they are playing with their own heads," said Goebbels in a dramatic voice.

He assured the public that order and quiet prevail throughout the Reich and that the situation is firmly in Hitler's hands.

Recalling Hitler's dramatic personal appearance at Munich before dawn Saturday to seize his former friend, Ernst Roehm, Goebbels said that Roehm and the other executed Storm Troop leaders "have met their fate."

"They did not understand our warnings," he said. "They speculated upon Hitler's leniency, but the punishment will be greater, the higher the rank.

"The friendliness of the party and the Sturm Abteilung (Storm Troopers) has been restored by Hitler and the whole nation indorses the Fuehrer's determined action."

The surprise raid on the mutinying Storm Troop leaders was a 100 per cent success, Goebbels said.

"The Fuehrer will grasp any one's hand extended to him in friendship," said Goebbels, "but fists raised against him will be broken with unprecedented force—conspirators will be thrown to the floor of their homes, broken."

The address, which was relayed to United States, British and Argentine radio stations, concluded with an appeal to the nation to stand with Hitler like one man.

2 Wealthy Children Die as Home Burns

Erhart Relatives Victims in California Blaze.

San Mateo, Calif., July 1 (AP).—John, 6, and Henrietta Ruggles, 8, grandchildren of William H. Erhart, New York and Cedarhurst, Long Island, multimillionaire, were burned to death today in a fire which destroyed the home of their mother, Mrs. Erhart Ruggles.

The children were trapped in their rooms as the flames, which firemen said apparently started from a short circuit, spread through the house.

Mrs. Ruggles was not at home at the time, while servants barely escaped with their lives without being able to aid the children.

Couple Try Surgery For Marital Trouble

Chicago, July 1 (AP).—The Folmer N. Petersons were about to break up, so they tried surgery. Mrs. Peterson asserted her husband had a terrible disposition and she filed for divorce. A doctor examined the husband, found he had a goitre, and operated. The operation, said the doctor, might ameliorate conditions around home.

Anyhow, Mrs. Peterson is giving the new Folmer a three weeks trial to see if surgery can help Cupid—and his disposition.

Father Kills 4 When Party Disturbs Him

Warns Once of Noise, Then Opens Fire With an Automatic Rifle.

East Tawas, Mich., July 1 (AP).—Sheriff Charles C. Miller and three guests at a house party in the Arthur Janson home here were shot to death early this morning by Arthur A. Woods, 52, Janson's father-in-law, who complained that the noise of the party disturbed his sleep.

The dead, besides Sheriff Miller, were Dr. Stanley Somers, of East Tawas, and Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Hayes. Roy Hickey, also a guest at the party, was wounded.

Woods, authorities said, complained about the noise interfering with his sleep. Without warning, he walked into the room and opened fire with an automatic rifle.

Dr. Somers was killed instantly. Hayes and his wife died in a hospital a few hours after the shooting. Sheriff Miller was shot as he met Woods at the rear door of the Janson home.

Woods fired once, the bullet striking the sheriff in the stomach. The sheriff died en route to the hospital.

Calmly, Woods reentered the Janson home, where his victims were still sprawled on the floor, gathered up his two grandchildren and took them to the home of a neighbor. Then he walked to Tawas City and surrendered.

Soldier Drowned At Herald Harbor

Sinks in Friends' Sight After Heart Attack.

William Upright, 23, Army private stationed at Walter Reed Hospital, was drowned Saturday night while swimming in Chesapeake Bay at Herald Harbor, it was learned yesterday.

Officials at the hospital said Upright motored down with a group of friends. Physicians, after an autopsy, said he apparently suffered a heart attack while swimming.

Witnesses reported that Upright was swimming from a small boat near shore. He had dived several times and was paddling a few feet away when he suddenly called for help and disappeared. It was nearly an hour before his body was recovered.

Upright came here from New York State and had been attached to the medical base for several months.

"Daddy" Browning's Condition Is Worse

New York, July 1 (AP).—Edward W. (Daddy) Browning is in a critical condition from a paralytic stroke at the Hospital for Joint Diseases, his physicians said today.

"Patient's condition not favorable," said a bulletin. "Stupor more pronounced. Heart action weaker. Breathing more shallow. Cyanosis deeper. Pulse is weaker. General restlessness."

Nazi Slain by Dynamite.

Vienna, July 1 (AP).—A Nazi was reported killed today by an explosion of dynamite at Battenberg, Tyrol. Four bombings were reported.

Cardenas Wins Mexican Ballot

Mexico City, July 1 (AP).—Gen. Lazaro Cardenas, 39-year-old revolutionary veteran, today was chosen forty-fifth constitutional President of Mexico, in an election which reports from the principal cities indicated was the quietest in history.

Aided by the powerful political machine of the National Revolutionary party, Cardenas tonight appeared assured of at least 80 per cent of the total vote.

Gen. Antonio Villareal, candidate of the Independent Democratic parties, was running second, and Col. Adalberto Tejeda, Left Socialist candidate, trailed.

Police and soldiers were quartered in the capital and elsewhere but were not needed, as no disorder occurred.

Tejeda charged numerous irregularities and said he would appeal to Congress to set aside the election.

The whereabouts of Villareal has not been known since he left Monterrey Friday, resulting in rumors he was planning an insurrection.

Hitler Clean-up Fails to Check Beer Drinking

Uneasy Thousands Take to Resorts; Refuse to Talk Events.

(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press.)

Berlin, July 1.—Berlin drank its Sunday beer today in the tensest atmosphere since the Nazi government came into power in January, 1933.

Thousands of uneasy, coatless and hatless Germans, with only an inkling of the tragic events which took place behind the censorship screen, milled through historic Wilhelmstrasse under sharp eyes of police patrols.

The strollers paused ever and anon before Chancellor Hitler's residence, hoping to get a glimpse of the one man in the Reich who knows what is going on.

Just around the corner. Vice Chancellor Franz von Pappen watched the procession as Hitler's prisoner, under orders not to leave home without permission.

Reichswehr detachments marched with fife and drum in an obvious effort to demonstrate to the people that they still have an army, and one detachment paraded before Hitler.

When he came out to salute the soldiers, the crowd had its only view of the leader.

The troop details which yesterday were on outskirts of the city ready to rush in and take any action necessary were nowhere in evidence.

The feeling of uncertainty over what tomorrow will bring failed to interfere, however, with the typical German Sunday. The surrounding lake country beckoned, and overheated Berlin was deserted by thousands of holiday seekers who jammed railroad stations.

Many of these people apparently knew nothing of the tragic events involved in the Nazi "house-cleaning."

Those who had read the official communiques in the newspapers preferred not to discuss them until they had made sure that there were no government agents in the restaurant or railroad station where they happened to be.

Some remarked that they did not have to worry as long as they placed their faith in Hitler, "a man who knows what he wants."

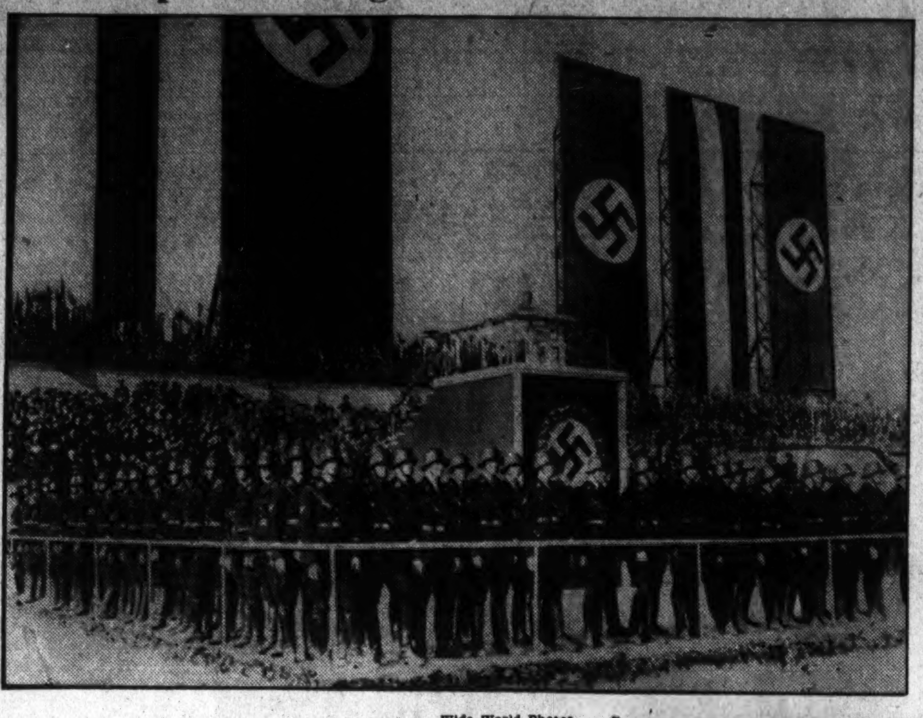
Troops Who Figured in German Revolt



Wide World Photos.

Hitler Executes Ten More, Orders Troop Chiefs Seized

The state secretary in the president's office, Dr. Otto Meissner, returned to Berlin with a statement that at present Von Hindenburg's condition appears satisfactory.

"Political Will."

When reports of the calling together of physicians reached Berlin, the rumor was quickly revived that Von Hindenburg had written a "political will" naming the conservative Von Papen as his successor and enjoining the army, always faithful to the President, to help him, if necessary.

While Von Papen was at home under government orders, it was revealed that his chief of vice chancellory staff, Hubert von Bose, had killed himself yesterday.

It was revealed officially that Capt. Ernst Roehm, cabinet minister without portfolio and chief of the Storm Troopers, was summarily executed early yesterday when Hitler raided his home in Munich.

A communique stated that he had been given the opportunity to "take the consequences" of his traitorous acts, but when he did not do so was shot.

Asked Hitler to Shoot.

One foreign office spokesman said that Roehm "pleaded with Hitler that he himself shoot him, but the chancellor saw no reason why he should honor a traitor by killing him."

Two other names were tentatively added to the list of those in high places who lost their lives when it was reported that Herr von Tschirsky, personal adjutant of von Papen, had killed himself and that Gregor Strasser, once a leading Naxi organizer, had been shot.

Von Papen's exact position was not clear, but it was considered significant that while he—the theoretical second in command in the Reich—was ordered to remain in his house, Hitler held a long conference with Dr. Joseph Goebbels, propaganda minister, and Hermann Wilhelm Goering, premier of Prussia.

Goering's position appeared to be closer to Hitler than ever, since his personal assistance yesterday in cleaning up the mutineers among the Storm Troops.

In the name of his chief, he ordered that the Storm Troopers not assemble again except on orders from the chancellor himself, even in civilian clothes.

The Storm Troop organization already had been ordered on a vacation, starting today. The belief persisted that few, if any, would be called back to duty.

Peaceful Appearance.

Berlin and other parts of Germany were given a peaceful appearance today as the Reichswehr (regular army) was released from emergency orders issued yesterday and the number of policemen on duty was reduced.

Gen. Werner von Blomberg, minister of defense, said that the army would return to its normal duties. In a gesture of loyalty to the chancellor a detachment of the Reichswehr marched in review before him at the chancellory today.

A few citizens of Berlin went to see the review and cheered as the goose-stepping Reichswehr passed Hitler, standing a stiff salute.

Most people, however, spent the day wondering what it was all about and gathering in the coffee houses to whisper among themselves after making sure no government agents were present.

People Ask Questions.

The citizens asked themselves many questions in their efforts to interpret summary execution of men hitherto held up as outstanding exponents of the national socialistic principle that "the commonweal comes before private gain."

Such questions as these were asked:

How could these deposed storm troop leaders be executed without trial?

What is behind Hitler's sudden decision to clean up the party?

Did President von Hindenburg know what was going on?

Whom did Goering mean when he said he went even beyond Hitler's instructions and struck at reactionaries, as well as rebelling Storm Troopers?

Did he mean the monarchists? The Hohenzollern family?

The first question was answered by government spokesmen, who explained unhesitatingly that the Storm Troopers since last July have been under the same rules and regulations as the regular army.

In case of a mutiny, it was explained, any officer has a right to kill mutineers.

In view of the fact that Roehm, Ernst Heines and others had armed their followers, Hitler was said to regard the mutiny as a revolution to disrupt the government.

Troops Marching.

Hitler's justification for summarily acting was that in Munich and Brunswick the Storm Troopers already had begun to march, presumably to seize the government, and the situation was sufficient in both cases to summon the Reichswehr and the Special Schutz Staffel organization to oppose them.

As to the monarchists, while Gen. Kurt von Schleicher, former chancellor, was one of those killed "resisting arrest," no action was taken against any members of the Hohenzollern family.

Former Crown Prince Friedrich Wilhelm remained unmolested in his Silesian estate. Neither guests nor soldiers were placed in vicinity of the Hohenzollern headquarters here.

The whole family appeared to have agreed, apparently on orders from the former Kaiser at Doorn, to say nothing whatever which could be interpreted as taking sides.

Some apprehension was felt over the fate of Prince August Wilhelm, himself a Nazi group leader and a close friend of the executed Karl Ernst, but he sent word tonight from his villa that he would be back in Berlin later. A reassuring message was said to have been sent to him by the chancellor.

Considering the condition of President von Hindenburg, it was assumed that he knew nothing in advance of the intention of Hitler to crush the mutineers.

Few Dead Unnamed.

While only eight names of men high in the Storm Troopers have been listed as having been executed, there were rumors that many others had been shot. These were denied by the propaganda ministry, which said, however, that "some few additional names are yet to be published."

Whatever may have been the significance of the Reichswehr's activities yesterday, army officers were emphatic today in saying that they have no intention to interfere, at least until after Hitler has had a chance to set the German house in order.

The significance of the order to Storm Troopers not to meet was variously interpreted. Some sources saw in the move an effort to sell the other European nations on the idea that Germany needs a bigger army and deserves one because the "quasi-military" groups are being abandoned.

Goering intimated that when the Storm Troopers are called back to duty the newcomers will be excluded, and only the faithful veterans of the pre-third Reich days will return to uniform.

With regard to the statement that Roehm and Gen. Von Schleicher had communications with a "foreign power," the general opinion was that the reference was to France.

These men, according to this interpretation, feared that unless some agreement could be made with France, Germany might find itself overrun by a "preventive war."

Position of Army.

In event of the death of Presiden von Hindenburg, an eventuality dreaded by every decent-minded German, the army may find itself in an entirely new situation.

To put it mildly, the army would come to a grave conflict of conscience if it were simultaneously to reecive two orders, one from Von Papen as 'heir" to Von Hindenburg, and the other from Hitler as chancellor.

Hitler's foreign political force during the next week probably will have much to do with the army's position in event of such an emergency. The army would frown upon anything that might precipitate a conflict with a foreign power.

One phrase which Goering and more lately Goebbels have harped upon—the fight against reactionaries — has never been defined clearly. Apparently both men consider anybody outside Nazi ranks who is against them a reactionary.

Lengthy debates within the cabinet are certain to take place within the next few days in an effort to bring the various groups into harmony.

Hitler Orders Leaders Of Storm Troops Seized

Berlin, July 1 (U.P.).—Chancellor Adolf Hitler, bowing bold opposition ruthlessly to his will, followed Saturday's executions by an order tonight of arrest of all members of the general staff in Berlin and Brandenburg of the superior branch of the Nazi Storm Troops.

"All members of the general staff in Berlin and Brandenburg of the superior branch of the Storm Troops are under arrest, pending an investigation of their knowledge of the rebellious leaders. Officers of inferior rank are hereby ordered to remain in their homes and await orders."

"Those participating in meetings discussing the shooting of brown shirts will be severely punished," the decree added.

Reports circulated yesterday that Capt. Ernst Roehm had committed suicide were revealed as wholly false. Roehm was held overnight at Stadelheim prison, Munich, after being offered a pistol with which to shoot himself. He refused, and word was awaited from Hitler on whether he should be executed. He was shot.

His death brought the total shot to 12, including Gen. and Mrs. Kurt von Schleicher. The others were:

Edmond Heines, Storm Troop leader in Munich.

Wilhelm Schmid, group leader of Munich.

Hans Peter Heiderbreck, group leader, of Pomerania.

Count Sprète, sub-group leader at Munich.

Heinrich Klausner, former Prussian minister of interior and a hign Catholic leader.

Ernst was shot by police at Bremen "while trying to escape," it was declared, and not executed, as first reported.

Already unconfirmed reports of uprisings were heard from Brunswick, where a group of the SA (superior branch of the Nazi Storm Troops) resisted official measures calling for their dismissal for one month.

Mexican Soldiers Capture Suspect

Alleged Slayer of U. S. Border Guard Caught.

Eagle Pass, Tex., July 1 (AP).—Mexican army forces numbering more than 1,000 men, who conducted a search throughout northern Mexico last night, captured Rafael Dominguez, alleged slayer of L. C. Henry, American customs inspector at Del Rio, Tex.

Henry died June 20 of three bullet wounds in the abdomen, received in a shooting near his home June 19.

Dominguez was captured on a ranch near Piedras Negras, across the Rio Grande from Eagle Pass. Henry, before dying, named Dominguez as his assailant. He said Dominguez was employed by other parties as the result of an old feud.

Socialists Nominate Thomas for Senator

New York, July 1 (AP).—Norman Thomas was nominated for United States Senator at the State convention of the Socialist party today, and former Assemblyman Charles Solomon, of Brooklyn, was named for Governor.

Austro-German Troops Guard Border, Roads

It was understood that the Austro-German border is being closely watched from both sides.

The German government, it was asserted, wishes to prevent fugitives escaping into Austria and to prevent the entry of radical elements. Despite these measures, it was reported that a number of fugitives succeeded in entering Austria.

More Trouble Seen.

Vienna, July 1 (AP).—With few exceptions, Austrian newspapers today interpreted Germany's bloody week-end as a prelude to a new period of turmoil.

"After the deadly outcome of this radical revolt, Austria naturally looks for a decided relaxation of the situation here," said this newspaper. "Now more than ever before, national socialism will be preoccupied with its own troubles and will have to abandon its offensive in foreign lands out of the sheer motive of self-preservation."

The same newspaper interpreted Chancellor Hitler's present position as extremely precarious, and the Tageblatt similarly suggested that there is more turmoil ahead.

Under a headline, "End of National Socialism," the Wiener Journal said that "national socialism, brown bolshevism and the third Reich are being liquidated and none other than Hitler himself is leading the mobilization."

The semiofficial Reichspost suggested that Hitler's cleanup must include the party program and methods, "otherwise this day's developments will remain only a symptom of degeneration."

Reichswehr Victory.

Paris, July 1 (AP).—A victory for the Reichswehr and the conservative junkers was seen as the chief outcome of Chancellor Adolf Hitler's drastic "housecleaning" by official circles here today.

These circles feel that the most vital element in the German crisis is the breakdown of the unity of the Hitler movement which now more than ever centers on his ability to keep violently differing parties from breaking out into civil war.

The press declared that the new events open the way for a return of the Hohenzollerns.

"The crown prince must be rejoicing, as he always believed his hour would come, and perhaps he is right," the newspaper l'Intransigeant declared. It added that, with the Reichswehr in the saddle, France must more than ever be on guard, as the army represents a more efficient military machine than the Brown Shirts.

Russian View.

Moscow, July 1 (AP).—The Soviet press today interpreted the developments in Germany as an indication of the desperation of the ruling class, which, hard pressed by the masses, is exterminating its opponents as the only means to prevent a proletarian revolution.

The killing of the Storm Troopers, says an article in the Communist newspaper Pravda, indicates that Hitler, in his alarm, "probably forgot Von Papen's warning of danger from below."

"Heads have fallen, but the Fascist dictatorship enters into a new period, with incomparably worse prospects for the future," the article says. "The fate of the ruling class in Germany is in the balance."

2 Women and Man Feared Lost at Sea On Adventure Trip

Los Angeles, July 1 (AP).—Fear for the lives of three Californians who began a two-year adventure cruise from San Diego February 10, and have not been heard from since, was expressed today by Miss Bette Comstock, daughter of one of the adventurers.

Miss Comstock said her stepfather, William Titlow, and her mother sailed in a 35-foot schooner, in company with a woman she does not know.

"My mother's last words to me contained the promise she would cable me from Honolulu in about two months," said Miss Comstock. "I have written letters addressed to general delivery, Honolulu, and all have been returned."

Titlow, an experienced navigator, said he did not intend to follow regular steamer lanes.

Honolulu, July 1 (AP).—The 35-foot schooner La Camarita, which sailed for Honolulu from San Diego, has not been reported here.

New Maine Law Draws Boycott of Cosmetic Makers

Portland, Me., July 1 (AP).—A virtual boycott of Maine as a market for cosmetics was predicted by dealers tonight as the State's new law on toilet preparations became effective.

Intending to protect consumers and produce revenue, the last legislature passed a law providing that manufacturers of preparations for the hair, face and hands must register at a cost of $1 each article offered for sale.

Manufacturers have notified merchants of their intention to drop the Maine market from their merchandising list. Maine is the pioneer in such legislation.

2 Bandits Get $107 In Holdup of Cafe

One Holds Revolver While Helper Searches Till.

One holding the manager at bay with a revolver while his companion searched the cash register, two robbers netted $107 in a raid on the Blue Bell Sandwich Shop, at 1501 H street northeast early last night.

Paul Royal, of 813 Eleventh street northeast, the manager, was alone in the shop. The bandits escaped in an auto.

Bull Fighter Seized, Bull Doing Just Fine

Chicago, July 1 (AP).—The city's first bull fighter, Alred Velasco, 30, has a joust with the law scheduled tomorrow.

Police seized him as he concluded what was billed as a bull fight yesterday at an amusement park. The fight wasn't very successful for the matador but the bull didn't do so badly—he got off with his life. Police made the arrest in spite of an injunction the amusement corporation obtained.

Four Accused of Plot To Overthrow Mendieta

Havana, July 1 (AP).—A former army officer and three civilians were arrested today in connection with a reported conspiracy against the government of President Carlos Mendieta.

Military authorities were rounding up additional suspects. Fourteen policemen, arrested yesterday and accused of complicity in the conspiracy, were confined incommunicado at Cabanas Fortress.

Boys Kick Dynamite Around; Live to Tell

Boston, July 1 (AP).—A group of boys playing football in a South Boston park today didn't know it, but they were kicking around a bundle of dynamite.

Patrolman James White stopped the game when he noticed a brown substance leaking from the bundle. He opened it and found a small quantity of dynamite. It was traced to a shack near the park containing 50 pounds of the explosive.

Modern Rail Fence Builder.

Logan, Ohio (U.P.).—Rail fences, more and more on the decline in Ohio, are the pride of James E. Brown, Marion township farmer, who has 275 rods of them in good condition. Claiming to be some sort of "rail fence champ," Brown this year added a new supply of rails from fine old chestnut trees which had died from blight.

4 Chinese Killed By Bomb in Train

First Peiping-Mukden Trip Brings Tragedy.

Tientsin, China, July 1 (AP).—Four Chinese were killed and ten injured by a bomb which exploded on the first train operating between Peiping and Mukden since the establishment of the Japanese-sponsored State of Manchukuo.

The bomb exploded in a third-class car tonight about 50 miles east of here. The damaged car was sidetracked and the train resumed its journey.

Sergeant Injured As He Trips, Falls

Injured when he tripped and fell while walking on Georgia avenue near Butternut street northwest, Staff Sergt. John Dorman, United States Army, attached to Walter Reed Hospital, was under treatment last night for severe lacerations to the head and face.

Sergt. Dorman struck his head on a curbstone. He was taken to the hospital emergency room by a police car.

Rum Row Shooting Victim Is Near Death

Howard Parker, 33, colored, of Boyds, Md., was near death in the Montgomery County Hospital last night, his chest torn by the charge of a shotgun fired, police said, during a quarrel over liquor on the Germantown pike near Germantown yesterday afternoon.

Police released Harry Bailey, jr., also colored, who said he fired in self-defense.

Warsaw Fliers Winging Way To Goal Again

Take-Off From Paris After Daring Flight From Farm Pasture.

Le Bourget, France, July 1 (AP). The Adamowicz brothers took off from here at 12:21 p. m. today (6:21 a. m., E. S. T.), resuming their New York-to-Warsaw airplane flight interrupted yesterday when fuel shortage and fog forced them down near Flers, France.

The brothers, Benjamin and Joseph, flew here from Flers this morning, remaining at Le Bourget only two hours while minor repairs were made.

They said they would avoid Berlin, flying directly to Warsaw, where they expect to remain for four days. The plane may be left in a museum there.

Joseph Adamowicz said he and his brother were "pretty much disappointed" and intend to try again next year to fly from New York to Warsaw.

Make Dare-Devil Take-off.

The Adamowiczs made a dare-devil take-off from the tall grass of the cow pasture where they landed yesterday. The tiny monoplane cleared a clump of trees by a few inches as it headed for Le Bourget.

They had had nine hours sleep in a seventeenth century farmhouse and said the admiration of the peasants had softened their disappointment over failing to complete the trip.

"We had a bad time before we came down on this field," Benjamin Adamowicz said before he clambered into the cabin. "Bad weather with snow flurries and rain hit us shortly after we left Harbor Grace.

"Ice soon coated the wings and things looked bad until we finally climbed to 16,000 feet. That carried us out of the first storm and we had good weather the rest of the trip over the ocean until about 250 miles off land on this side, which we approached Saturday morning soon after midnight. Again we ran into snow and rain followed by fog.

"By 7 a. m. we had only five gallons of gasoline left in the tanks. There must have been a leak in the carburetor.

"We had to do something and the fog was so thick we could not tell whether we were over land or sea. We had been flying blindly in circles for three hours trying to find Ireland.

"According to our calculations now we seemed to have been circling over the coast line of Brittany most of that time. We were hopelessly lost and didn't even know what country we were over when finally through a rift in the fog we saw land just 50 feet below us."

Peasants Thunderstruck.

As the fliers came down peasants mowing hay in nearby fields saw them throw cans of oil out of the plane to lighten the shock of landing the cans tore strips of fuselage off as they hurtled out.

The plane wobbled through a fence, snapping a fence post off at the ground. The tail bumped into a timothy-covered hole, breaking off the rear landing wheel.

Peasants ran up and eagerly questioned the pair as they climbed out uninjured.

"We thought it might be Scotland until the farmers began talking, then figured it was France," Benjamin resumed.

"We wanted to try and start again immediately for Warsaw if we could obtain enough gasoline, and instantly commenced to repair the plane. We later saw that it would necessitate a far longer runway and that the field was too rough for a take-off with a heavy load of gas."

It was the middle of the afternoon before the excited peasants thought of notifying the authorities, only four miles away.

The whole countryside was on hand, however, for the departure. The spectators gaped while the pair drank breakfast coffee in a yard with a farmer and his wife, who gave the aviators accommodations for the night.

The fliers received a bunch of flowers from a local dignitary and there was the customary cheek kissing all around on their departure.

4 Billions Deficit Announced by U.S.

the estimates sent to Congress by President Roosevelt in January, when he made allowance for all the possible contingencies of the recovery effort.

Then he predicted receipts of $3,259,938,756 (they proved to be $3,115,554,049.53); expenditures of $9,403,006,967 (actually $7,105,050,084.95); a deficit of $7,309,068,211 (actually $3,989,496,035.42), and a public debt at the end of the year of $29,847,000,000 (actually $27,053,141,414.48).

Officials found encouragement in an increase of $1,035,857,347.67 in receipts, made up largely of a jump in miscellaneous internal revenue collections from $858,217,511.61 in the fiscal year 1933 to $1,469,593,550.29 in the year just closed.

Income tax receipts also rose, increasing from $746,206,444.95 to $817,961,481.18, and customs collections jumped from $250,750,251.27 to $313,434,302.19. The total revenues also included $353,048,796.83 from the processing tax on farm products, by comparison with $72,143,916.19 paid out through the Agricultural Adjustment Administration.

Final Darrow Blast Backs Little Man Aginst the NRA

4. Monopolistic business combinations have had the antitrust laws suspended, industry put into their unlimited mastery and the means provided to silence, suppress, eliminate or ignore their complaining small competitors.

5. The present method of setting up code authorities is sadly defective and the cost of administration heavily burdensome to the smaller interests of the industry, who should be guaranteed a voice in the selection of the code authority.

6. The basing point system of price making is a "potent instrument to protect and further monopolistic practices and to increase the oppression of small enterprises. It should be eliminated from all industry."

Price Fixing "An Error."

7. While "stop loss" provisions in the codes are desirable and in harmony with the purposes of NRA, the attempt to fix prices was an error and should be abandoned as soon as possible.

8. Too many codes were attempted; most were worse than superfluous, they were inexcusable interferences with business enterprises.

9. The codes were too drastic and attempted too much.

"To deliver industry into the hands of its greatest and most ruthless units when the protection of the antitrust laws has been withdrawn," the report concludes, "was a grave error. It may safely be said that not in many years have monopolistic tendencies in industry been so forwarded and strengthened as they have been through the perversion of an act excellently intended to restore prosperity and promote the general welfare.

"These are the facts, and we believe that the sooner they are recognized frankly and dealt with bravely the better for the Nation and its people."

U. S. Boycott Scored.

As an additional feature, the board dealt with "the Governmental boycott." It was this phase of the report which, in the course of preparation, led to rumors that the Darrow board would charge NRA with "betraying" small enterprises.

"There is one other form of oppression of small enterprises," the report's added chapter said, "which, while inadvertent but often grievous, the board feels it can not overlook.

"By an executive order of March 14, 1933, every bidder for a Government contract must present with his bids a certificate of compliance with each code to which he is subject. However justifiable this provision may have seemed as a means to enforce NRA, its application has had most unfortunate consequences.

"Many small establishments honestly purpose to observe the code so far as possible, but find some of its provisions incompatible with continued business existence. The codes were most often made by large business units, animated by no higher purpose than their own advantage and the suppression of small competitors.

Trade Secrets Imperiled.

"We have been confronted with the cases of small enterprises that adhere strictly to the code requirements concerning hours of labor, wages and conditions of employment, but can not without ceasing to exist comply with the requirements that mean the surrender of their vital business secrets or the end of every chance to meet the stronger position and better resources of more powerful rivals. Yet such establishments are by this form of Government boycott excluded from every opportunity to do Governmental work."

The board found instances where "this practice has resulted in heavy losses to the Government, as well as a shrinkage of production and of employment."

"Without criticizing the motives that prompted these provisions," the report continued, "we think they should be radically amended, to save men that strive to be law-observing from becoming business outcasts or perforce evaders of the National enactment."

This third report of the Darrow Board covered codes for the following industries. Shipbuilding and ship repair, feldspar, motion picture, graphic arts, floor and wall clay tile, hosiery, steel and iron, saw and steel products, structural clay products, retail lumber, wholesale confectioners and builders supplies.

Film Industry Cited.

"In virtually all the codes we have examined, one condition has been persistent, undeniable and apparent to any impartial observation," the board stated. "It is this, that the code has offered an opportunity for the more powerful and more profitable interests to seize control of an industry or to augment and extend a control already obtained."

Of the motion picture industry, the board said:

"In its first report, this board described the lawless and outrageous excesses of the monopoly in this industry and demanded that something be done to protect the small enterprises, exposed to the insatiable rapacity of the powerful.

"Despite the uncontrovertible nature of the evidence upon which this finding was based, nothing has been done to better such conditions as caused the Constitutional and traditional guarantees of liberty to seem a mere bitter jest."

At another time, the report said, the existing situation "would startle and appall the average American."

The board recommended the abrupt dismissal of the present code authority "and the choice of another that can conceive something of the rights of the public and has some other impulse than the extraction of fat profits."

Graphic Arts Head Flayed.

Of the graphic arts industry, the report says:

"Monopolistic practices are rank and intolerable in this industry, and the oppression of the small enterprise is carried out with a high hand. The code authority in this industry should be dismissed and a new authority created that will have a glimpse of a purpose above the balance sheet of its own establishment."

Turning to the steel industry, the report said:

"In its first report, discussing the oppressions of the unjust steel code, this board pointed out the iniquity that is called the 'basing point' system of price-fixing, by which millions of dollars are annually collected from the public under the pretense of freight rate that are purely fictitious.

"It also set forth the unrighteous arrangements by which the great steel companies controlled the Steel Institute and their Steel Institute had become the code authority, thus delivering the entire steel industry into the power of a few overshadowing and grasping companies."

United States Findings Ignored.

The board expressed sympathy with the Executive order of May 31, proposing elimination of artificial transportation charges in price quotations, declaring "the basing point fraud is in violation of an order from a high Government body and likewise in violation of the express undertaking of the steel trust."

The Federal Trade Commission's order of 1924 that the steel interests desist from the "basing point" practice was "impudently" flouted by the industry, the report said, "and for 10 years the American public has been obliged to pay the huge tribute thus levied in defiance of the order of a branch of their Government."

"If the findings of the Federal Trade Commission can be thus set aside," the report continued, "and if monopoly can thus proceed at its own wild will and ride roughshod where it pleases, there seems to be no possible excuse for retaining the commission and it might as well be disbanded.

Changes Held Minor.

So far as complaints of small enterprises and the license of monopoly are concerned, the revised code shows no substantial improvement over the old document.

"The slight changes diminish in no way the practice of brigandage, against which so much resentment has been shown. And when we come to learn all that is invovled in these slight modifications, what we find is not a purpose to conform to public opinion, but such a deliberate gesture of contempt for it as may well startle and tutor the Nation.

"Of this gesture of cool insolence, the significance can hardly be overlooked. We have had before in the history of corporations in America instances of an overweening assumption of autocratic power, but not many marked by an equal appearance of purposed contempt.

"Nothing seems lacking except that the order of the steel trust, establishing unwarranted price increases, should end with the historic question:

"'What are you going to do about it?'"

New Liner Service To Britain Planned

New York, July 1 (AP).—A new fortnightly passenger and cargo service between New York and the British Isles will be inaugurated on July 21 by the United States Lines as part of its program of expansion under the American flag, it was announced today at the New York office of the line.

The service will be maintained by the steamers American Shipper and American Importer. Foreign ports of call for passengers will be Cobh and Liverpool.

Sawmill Closes, Blaming Code; Hill Town Hit

Majority of Towns Folk in Nelly's Ford, Va., Lose Livelihood.

By C. B. Carr.

Nellys Ford, Va., July 1.—A story of business adversity allegedly brought about by the demand of NRA code authorities that sawmills in this semimountainous region operate under the lumber code was unfolded here today by a group of lumbermen, who have made their living for generations through sawing virgin timber.

A. G. Small, veteran Nellys Ford lumberman, told how he had been forced to close down his sawmill thereby throwing a majority of his fellow townsmen out of work.

"For 20 years and more I have hewn timber out of these hills," Small said, "and I was able to make a good living and provide a livelihood for my townsmen until the NRA authorities informed me that I either had to operate under the code or close the mill."

Small related that it was impossible for him to operate under the lumber code because of wage and tax requirements.

He pointed out that the timbermen of this section had worked for years for a dollar a day. They were satisfied, Small said, because he had to haul the lumber a great distance before it could be sold at even a moderate price.

On May 1 he closed the mill after the code authorities demanded that he increase his wages from $1 a day to a minimum of $2.28 per day of eight hours. They also demanded $1.50 tax per 1,000 feet on all lumber sawed from September 1 to May 1 and $2 per 1,000 for all sawed since May 1, he said.

Dodd pointed out that relief money was unknown in Nellys Ford until Small's sawmill closed and since then, he added, "There has been plenty of demand for relief money."

"I never tried to make much money out of the mill," Small commented, "but on the other hand, tried to help my neighbors and here I am almost broke and with little chance of reopening the mill."

Small explained, however, that he would not mind increasing the wages and paying the tax to the Government if he could sell the lumber after it was sawed.

When the sawmill was operated on a normal basis, the pay roll to all employes ran as high as $200 a week.

Small said he was keeping wolf away from the family door by cutting chestnut and oak bark for tanning purposes. The market for this bark will, however, be closed October 1 until next spring.

President Leaves On Island Trip

even more commodious for the President's use.

To Be Guest of Presidents.

Trailed by the two destroyers—the Gilmer and the Williamson—the Houston weighed anchor a short while later for an overnight trip down Chesapeake Bay. Tomorrow morning the warships will pause in Hampton Roads to exchange pouches of mail. Then the Houston, with its convoy, will head for Cape Haitien in the West Indies, arriving about July 5.

In quick succession the President will call at Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, Cartagena, Colombia and Panama. At the latter two stops he will be entertained by the Presidents of Colombia and Panama.

Heading northwestward into the Pacific, the President plans to reach Hawaii about July 24, for a visit of four days. Then he will return to the mainland, probably landing at Portland, Oreg., for an overland return to the East. En route, he will make several stops for speeches.

Besides the immediate family, all of whom were here except his daughter, Mrs. Anna Dall, those on hand to bid the President good-by were Admiral William H. Standley, chief of naval operations; James A. Moffett, newly appointed Federal housing administrator; Harry L. Hopkins, relief administrator; Frank C. Walker, director of the National Emergency Council, and Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the RFC.

Cabinet Absent.

No members of the Cabinet, whom the President last week instructed to take vacations themselves, were here for the departure. Moffett came down from New York this morning to express appreciation for his appointment yesterday and joined the motor procession to Annapolis.

With the President aboard the Houston, in addition to his two sons and Foster are only Capt. Wilson Brown, naval aid; Commander Ross T. McIntyre, White House physician; Richard Jervis, head of the White House Secret Service detail, and Gus Gennerich, Secret Service attendant.

Additional Secret Servce operatives, to safeguard the President at his visits, are aboard the Williamson, while three newspaper men representing press associations are aboard the Gilmer. The only correspondents allowed to accompany the President are Francis M. Stephenson, of the Associated Press; Fred A. Storm, United Press, and Edward L. Roddan, Universal Service.

Obviously wearied by one of the most eventful weeks of his Administration, in which the amount of work completed surpasses all records, the President will seek the rest and relaxation he finds best at sea. Only the wireless will be available to worry him, as he reads from a special library or chats with officers of the Houston, which is commanded by Capt. Walter Woodson.

Last Rush of Work.

In the short space of five days, the President acted on close to 200 bills, three of first-rank improtance appointed five notable commissioners; issued an executive order which may end price-fixing under the NRA; proclaimed an embargo against the shipment of arms to Cuba; and, finally, made a radio report to the Nation.

The bills themselves represented a formidable amount of labor, especially when the President abolished the "pocket veto" for individual disapproval of more than 50 measures. Most significant of the bills made law were the Frazier-Lemke farm mortgage measure, the railroad pension and the housing acts.

Appointment of the Securities and Exchange Commissions and the commission to govern communications projected the Government into new fields of regulation. Other boards named included a new National Labor Relations Board, a commission to study both private and Federal aviation, and the President's committee on economic security.

Garner Invited To Help Shape Future Policy

Vice President Will Come Here in September to Aid Roosevelt.

(Associated Press.)

Vice President Garner has been invited by President Roosevelt to come to Washington in September, to help chart the course to be followed by the New Deal.

Some important decisions about the Administration's legislative program for the next Congress are to be made at the White House at that time.

Before he left for his Uvalde, Tex., home, Garner was told by Mr. Roosevelt that he wanted the advantage of his political judgment and experience on these points.

As much as Garner dislikes leaving his hunting and fishing in the Chaparral country of southwest Texas, he is planning on being on the job. In addition, he may make a nation-wide broadcast speech when the Administration drive for election of a New Deal Congress gets under way.

Silent for Year.

Garner has been silent on public matters since March 4, 1933, when he laid down the gavel of Speaker of the House, where he spent more than 30 years and went to the Senate to preside as Vice President.

He did this, the Texan explained to friends, because he believes it is the constitutional duty of his office. And by so doing, he has been in a position to aid the President, without appearing publicly in the political picture.

Long before the last Congress adjourned, Cabinet members and Democratic and Republican Congressional leaders recognized the Vice President as the contact man between the legislative and executive branches.

So much confidence did Mr. Roosevelt show in him during the last few months of the session, that he turned over to him several Administration measures to be given to the proper men for introduction.

Guide for Legislation.

In major legislative battles, the President looked more and more to the Texan for guidance in maneuvering to put through recovery proposals, and many of the difficulties that might have arisen were smoothed away.

In his one-room office in the Capitol, right back of the Senate chamber, Garner consulted with Senators and Representatives and Cabinet members, composed divergent views and "laid down the law" on occasion.

Garner attended, at the invitation of the President, all of the Cabinet meetings. He sat beside the Chief Executive and was always the first and last person to be allowed to express his views.

Held Balance Wheel.

Before he left for home, the Vice President and Mr. Roosevelt had a long talk. The President was understood to have expressed the highest regard for Garner, the valuable assistance he has rendered and to have told him that he wanted him to take even a greater part in the working out of Administration policies in the future.

In addition, it was reported, Mr. Roosevelt wants the country to know that he and Garner are going along hand in hand in the Administration's recovery efforts.

Further, the Chief Executive particularly wants Garner near him during the Congressional campaign. Garner, usually regarded as a conservative, is considered in Congressional and administrative circles as a balance wheel to some of the President's professional advisers, who are working out new plans for recovery.

Heat-Crazed Man Kills Policeman, Then Self

Elizabeth, N. J., July 1 (AP).—A heat-crazed man tonight fought a furious gun battle with police and when it was over one policeman lay dead, three were seriously wounded and the crazed man himself was slain. The dead were Patrolman Frank Carino, 37, and George Moran, 40.

The wounded are Patrolman Daniel Tracey, shot near the heart; Patrolman Thomas O'Brien, shot in the chest, and Patrolman Frank Binger, shot in a leg.

French Police Battle Radicals; 9 Injured

Lens, France, July 1 (AP).—Six mounted guards and three Communists were injured in a clash today between the two groups at Montigny-en-Gohelle.

The fight, during which the Communists threw stones and bottles and raided barricades, started after authorities had forbidden the radicals to hold a meeting. The Communists were raided.

Family Burned to Death.

Pacific, Mo., July 1 (AP).—Mr. and Mrs. Fred Thost, both 28, and their 4-year-old daughter, Doris Jean, were burned to death today as their motor car sideswiped another, plunged down an embankment and caught fire.

REPRESENTATIVE AYRES, yesterday was appointed a member of the Federal Trade Commission.

Ayres' Naming Gives Kansas Another Plum

Woodring, Helvering, Mellott Hold High Places Under Roosevelt.

Wichita, Kans., July 1 (AP).—The appointment of Representative William A. Ayres, of Wichita, to the Federal Trade Commission today, increased the list of important Government offices held by men from Kansas, a State that voted for Roosevelt in 1932, but restored Republicans to power within its borders.

Harry H. Woodring, who was defeated for Goovernor by the Republican Alf M. Landon, now is Assistant Secretary of War. Guy T. Helvering, former chairman of the Kansas highway commission, is Commissioner of Internal Revenue. A. J. Mellott, Kansas City, Kans., attorney, has charge of the collection of Federal liquor taxes.

Ayres has served longer in Congress than any other Kansas Democrat. He was first elected in 1914 and remained until the Harding landslide of 1920. Two years later he was back and in 1924 and 1928 won despite Coolidge and Hoover victories Nationally.

His popularity won him the position of Kansas's favorite son choice for President at the National Democratic Convention in Houston in 1928.

Acceptance of the appointment by Ayres would leave the Fifth District race "wide open," with only one Democrat and three Republicans in the August primary. The only Democrat to file against Ayres was C. F. Whitson.

The three Republicans who filed are Ira C. Watson, Wichita Sports Goods dealer; Hugh C. Gresham, of Cheney, editor and former minister, and Elmer E. Curts, of Wichita, none widely known.

ances. The new agency replaces the National Labor Board which Mr. Roosevelt set up a year ago when the NRA was in its swadding clothes.

In signing the Frazier-Lemke bill, Mr. Roosevelt etxtended to farmers the same helping hand he gave industry and citiesin lessening their debt burden. By approving the Crosser rail bill he made it possible for roads to pension thir aged workers anad open the way for new jobs.

Market Bill for Reform.

The stock market control legislation is definitely a reform measure. The President has been outspoken in his feelings that the wild era of speculation in securities and secretive practices through which prices were skyrocketed for the benefit of a few manipulators, were responsible to some extent for the crash.

Administration officials felt last night that Mr. Roosevelt had picked a strong board to administer the new exchange act. Its members will be Joseph P. Kennedy, millionaire New York and Boston financier; James M. Landis, member of the new Federal Trade Commission, who wrote the law; Ferdinand Pecora, New York lawyer and counsel for the Senate Banking Committee which directed the inquiry into stock market practices; Robert E. Healey, of Vermont, chief counsel of the Federal Trade Commission, and George C. Mathews, of Wisconsin, a member of the Federal Trade Commission.

Technically the muzzle was put on the bulls and bears yesterday as far as they were affected by Section 9 of the act which contains prohibitions against manipulation, pool operations, tipster sheets, &c. "Pegging" operations, included in this session, are barred effective October 1, 1934.

However, since al lprovisions of this session refer to transactions in registered securities or upon registered exchanges, these restrictions can not become operative until the exchanges have been rgistered, the President pointed out.

Provisions of the act affecting brokers and their customers' corporations whose securities are listed and the public generally, Mr. Roosevelt said as he signed the act, do not become operative before September 1, 1934.

The communications act is another reform measure. In addition to Sykes, those named to administer this law were Thad H. Brown, of Ohio, a member of the Federal Trade Commission; former Gov. Norman S. Case, of Rhode Island; Paul Walker, chairman of the Oklahoma Utilities Commission; Irvin Stuart, of Texas, a State Department expert on treaties, and Hampson Gary, former Minister to Switzerland. The commission assumes the powers of the Federal Radio Commission, which is abolished. It also has power over telephones and telegraph.

ness in about 45 minutes and notified authorities. His office had been ransacked by the pair, apparently in a search for narcotics.

No one could be found who had seen the pair leave North Webster, but officers were investigating reports that two other men had waited for the pair in an automobile.

On Line of Flight.

Authorities pointed out that North Webster would have been on the Dillinger gang's direct line of flight to hideouts in Ohio.

Five robbers, led by Dillinger, officers now are confident, took $28,439 from the Merchants National Bank of South Bend Saturday in the familiar Dillinger style. The technique—a sudden sortie just about closing time, the stationing of the lookouts, the reckless spray of bullets which took the life of Policeman Howard Wagner and the well-covered getaway were all typical of Dillinger's execution.

Witnesses identified the leader as Dillinger and asserted that Nelson and John Hamilton, notorious as Dillinger henchmen, were with him.

Reduced Air Mail Rate Now Effective

A flat postage rate of 6 cents an ounce for air-mail service went into effect yesterday, the Associated Press reports.

The old rate was 8 cents for the first ounce and 13 cents for each additional ounce.

Postal officials expressed the belief that an increase in business would offset any loss that might result.

Glider Crash Victim.

Lyons, N. J., July 1 (AP).—Gilbert Baker, East Orange, was killed today when his glider crashed near here after a wing collapsed. Baker, extricated from the wreckage, was taken to a hospital and pronounced dead.

Takoma Park Fourth of July Fete Is Ready

Plans for Tercentenary Parade Announced by Committee.

Following the appointment of officials to supervise the boys and girls athletic contests, plans are virtually complete for the all-day celebration of the Fourth of July at Takoma Park, Md., Wednesday.

Those named to handle the athletic events are E. Brooke Fetty, referee; E. J. Hibbs, starter; Ralph E. Gould, timer; David A. Penney, Abbie Clark and Philip Fox, track judges; Town Councilman Peter Remsen, sr., Eugene Penney and Hjalmar Erickson, field judges; Town Councilman John R. Adams, tug of war judge; Herbert W. Rutledge, gymnastics judge; James Myers, boxing judge; Misses Jeannette Adamson, Norma Lewton and Doris Griffin, girls' events judges; Herman Riley, clerk; Peter Remsen, jr., assistant clerk, and Ralph Harries and Wilmer Steiner, announcers.

The parade committee consisting of Mrs. Henry Ewing, Mrs. Margaret Dodge, Mrs. A. A. Spear and Mrs. J. Wilson Dodd announces the following floats entered in the parade as part of a Maryland Tercentenary pageant:

Community League Float.

Community League, George Calvert, Junior Women's Club, Court of Charles I and Henrietta Marie, Takoma Park Citizens Association, Granting of the Charter to Cecil Calvert, Mrs. Hext P. Ware, Route of the Ark and the Dove.

Takoma Park (D. C.) Citizens Association—Leonard Calvert, first Governer, founds St. Mary's City; Takoma Park Women's Club—Margaret Brent Demands a Vote at the First Meeting of the Assembly; Robert Field—William Stone, First Protestant Governor of Maryland; Takoma Playground—Old St. Mary's in 1660.

Sterling Marshall—Law for Free Schools, Gov. Nicholson in 1701; Takoma Horticultural Club—Plants in Maryland; Miss Alberta Heale—Life in Maryland in 1750; Mrs. D. P. Busby—French and Indian War.

Takoma Park Junior V. F. W. Post—Mason and Dixon Surveys, 1763-67; Mr. C. Leonard Boyer—Repudiation of Stamp Act at Frederick, 1765; Mount Pleasant Lodge No. 29 I. O. O. F.—Maryland Signers of the Declaration of Independence.

Others in Parade.

Women's Democratic Club—Nationality of Early Settlers; Young Men's Democratic Club—Washington Resigns Commission in Army; Mrs. William Kubach—Maryland Cedes Land for Capital of Nation; Mrs. J. W. Wellington—the Star-Spangled Banner.

Chillum Lodge, F. A. A. M.—Breaking Ground for Baltimore & Ohio Railroad; H. W. Rutledge—First Telegraph Line in United States, Washington to Baltimore; Mrs. H. W. Wilson—Barbara Frietchie in Frederick.

Former Town Councilman C. Leonard Boyer will be grand marshal of the parade, assisted by Maj. Lee F. Hamm and Mrs. Frederick L. Pratt.

The parade will include units from the seven Montgomery County American Legion posts, including the Takoma Park post, sponsors of the parade, and seven bands, as well as marching units from civic and private organizations.

Queen Anne Tax Rate Is Slashed to 78 Cents

Centreville, Md., July 1 (Spl.).—Queen Anne County's tax rate has dropped to the lowest point in this century as the board of commissioners announced a 10-cent cut, bringing the combined county and school tax rate to 78 cents on the $100, nearly half the rate of four years ago.

The school rate for 1934 will be 47 cents and the county rate reaches the all-time low of 31 cents. The combined State, county and school rate will be $1, the State rate being set at 22 cents.

Four Are in Hospital After Virginia Crash

No One to Lose In Edmonston's Election Today

"Contest" for Six Offices Just "One Horse Race" for Candidates.

With only one candidate aspiring to each of the six offices to be filled, the annual town election today in Edmonston, Md., promises to provide only perfunctory balloting. This is in contrast to the spirited contests that marked recent years.

W. Eldridge Lusby, who served as mayor from July, 1931, to July, 1932, but was defeated for reelection, is unopposed for mayor. Mayor D. Hazen McLeod announced some time ago he would not be a candidate to succeed himself.

Henry A. Eberle, treasurer of Edmonston since its incorporation in 1922, again is a candidate for reelection and, as usual, is unopposed. The treasurer, like the mayor, is elected for a 1-year term.

Clyde Veach is a candidate for the 2-year term in the council from the first ward to succeed William Page, long a member of the council. Charles L. Devilbiss, who was named to finish the first year of the term of Councilman Milton Clark, first ward, who died as the result of an automobile accident, is an aspirant to complete the year remaining on the term. Councilman Cliff Brown, second ward, also is retiring. George Fenwick, aspires to succeed him for a 2-year term and Malcolm Dent is a candidate to finish the year remaining on the 2-year term for which Kinjiro Matsudaira was originally elected. Matsudaira resigned and former Councilman William W. Webber, who was named to serve out the first year of the term, is not an aspirant to serve the remaining year.

Balloting will be in the basement of the Edmonston School from 1 to 7 p. m. The election will be conducted by the board of registration and election consisting of Mrs. M. M. Tierney and Mrs. Roberta W. Webber, judges, and Mrs. Florence Page and R. C. Eaton, clerks.

North Brentwood Puts One Up for Each Post

With only one candidate each for the two seats on the council to be filled, the town election to be held today in North Brentwood, Md., is a tame affair. Councilman Frank Holmes, Second Ward, aspires to succeed himself, and Martin V. B. Miller is the candidate for the Third Ward seat now held by William H. Thomas. The latter is not a candidate for reelection. Both councilmen are to be elected for two-year terms. Mayor Julius Wheeler, Mrs. Sadie J. P. Ingram, town treasurer, and Councilman James Wallace, First Ward, each has another year to serve. The judges for the election to be held in Firemen's Hall from 1 to 7:30 p. m., are Clarence A. Quander, Robert. A. Washington and Mrs. Helen Harris, the latter serving as clerk.

Byrd Battles Levies On American Apple

Winchester, Va., July 1 (AP).—Proposed new restrictions on the importation of apples into England will be the subject of a conference this week between Senator Harry Flood Byrd and Secretary of State Cordell Hull, if the senator can arrange it.

He telegraphed Secretary Hull asking him to do what ever was possible through diplomatic channels to avoid a heavier English duty on apples.

Senator Byrd said the proposed 7 shilling duty would make apple exports from here prohibitive. Twenty per cent of the Virginia crop has been shipped to England for many years.

Klemm to Seek Gambrill's Seat

Mt. Rainier Democrat Is in House Race 3d Time.

Dr. John William Klemm, Democrat, of Mount Rainier, a candidate for the House of Representatives from the Fifth Maryland District in the 1928 and 1932 elections, has filed his candidacy for a third time.

The Congressional seat now is filled by Representative Stephen W. Gambrill, of Laurel, who, it is expected, will seek reelection. Mr. Gambrill also is a Democrat.

During the last two elections the party ticket has consisted only of Dr. Klemm and Mr. Gambrill.

Veterans' Post Will Receive New Members

War-Time Yarns Will Be Recounted at Meet in Alexandria.

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

The Russell Mitchell Post, Veterans of Foreign Wars, of Alexandria, will hold an open meeting tonight in Pythian Temple, 319 Cameron street, at 8 o'clock, when 25 or 30 members will be received. George Minnigh, adjutant, asks that veterans come prepared to talk over their war-time experiences.

The post was organized in 1920. after a few months, it became inactive. Recently, it was reorganized, with Norman Roberts, a former member of the famous Rainbow Division, as commander, and now has a large membership. One of the requisites for membership is foreign service.

Several entertainment features and refreshments are promised.

The funeral of Mrs. Virginia B. Lerch, 64, wife of Samuel T. Lerch, who died last Thursday in the Alexandria Hospital, will be held at 2 p. m. today from the home on North Washington street. The burial will be in Harrisburg, Pa.

The funeral of James H. Skinner, 36, who died Saturday at his home, 210 South Payne street, will be held at 3:30 p. m. today from the home. Services will be conducted by the Rev. Percy Foster Hall, rector of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, and burial will be in Bethel Cemetery.

Stockholders of the Northern Virginia Hotel Corporation, operators of the George Mason Hotel, this city, will meet at 8 p. m. July 9, to select directors. They also will transact such other business that may be presented.

Funeral services for C. Urban Smith, World War veteran, who died yesterday in the Alexandria Hospital, will be conducted at his late residence, 6 Holly street, Mount Ida, tomorrow afternoon, followed by interment in Arlington National Cemetery.

Mr. Smith was wounded and gassed in France, and had been in ill health for some time. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Louise E. Smith, and three children, a son and two daughters.

They Weren't So Good At Golf But Knew 'Rods'

Chicago, July 1 (AP).—One foursome today cost the Twin Orchard Golf Club $600. Asked to register as they entered the clubhouse, the "golfers" whipped a submachine gun out of a golf bag.

"Sure, we'll register with this," one of them replied. Instead of mashies other members of the foursome produced guns. Albert C. Schultz, cashier, opened the safe rather than test the accuracy of the foursome's "iron shots."

Virginia Makes Good Progress In Rum Trade

Board Draws Attack for Delay in Opening Dispensaries.

By J. K. Irving, Jr.

Lynchburg, Va., July 1.—The Virginia Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, all considered, has not made a bad start in operating chain liquor dispensaries in the State. It is being heartily condemned for so-called unnecessary delay in opening stores and for favoring tidewater sections. That will be forgotten as stores quench thirsts.

Thus far Roanoke and Lynchburg are the only "back-country" cities enoying repeal. Charlottesville, apparently next in line, has its problem of location settled, but remains in a "lather" over deliberation of Board Member McCall Frazier, who promises action in due season. There still is talk of how much revenue the State is losing because of links yet to be welded. Former Gov. Pollard continues to be complimented for not having included in his tentative budget estimate the probable earnings of the stores for the fiscal year.

Bootlegger Jolted.

Nevertheless, it must be admitted that the bootlegger is getting a considerable jolt on the jaw. He admits it freely and proves it by making purchases from the stores to retail by the drink, thus reducing a well established business to the primitive methods of peddling. But that does not mean that the bootlegger is whipped, for the stores are young yet. The immediate popularity may not be permanent. The present trend toward "going legal" may be a passing fad. One thing is true, though; the situation possibly will be altered in time. Bootleg quality has not fallen, though the illegal price has.

Then there is the new, but ever increasing, cry of competition from venders of wine. Their objections seems to be well founded. They must make their purchases, of course, from the ABC Board. In their own retail field, they are confronted by State stores stocked with vintages. It is a condition, the wine licencees point out, wherein the board is a wholesaler at headquarters and a retailer wherever there is a dispensary. Except that the State makes its profit when it sells to the merchant and when it serves the public, price competition does not enter the equation as a major contention. The list is fairly standard wherever the State sticker is affixed.

The principal argument of the retailers is that customers are naturally inclined to make their purchases where they buy hard liquor. It would be the same way with, "off premises" beer, they declare, if beer were stocked in dispensaries. The public has not yet been sufficiently educated to the idea of having its wine dropped in the basket along with the family groceries. On the other hand, attention is called to the fact that few merchants carry, or can afford to carry, the wide variety offered on the State list. Dealers make the retort that they will when their trade develops; that the State is placing an obstacle in the way of development. It now appears probable that the matter will eventually be thrashed out.

Altogether, it seems that the kinks will be straightened out, one after the other.

Meanwhile, Virginia's liquor establishments are doing a land-office business. Appointments of store personnel, while they are strictly political, have not turned out to be political sinecures. One sweating young worker in a Lynchburg store was heard to remark a few days ago:

"I always thought a political job was a cinch; it ain't."

It is much too early to brand the Virginia system as remotely approaching the ideal, but so far it is getting along "as well as might be expected." Better and cheaper liquors combined with something like normal service might keep the business on its feet.

Robbers Keep Police Busy in WeekEnd Rush

Hyattsville Man, Beaten, Loses $42; Liquor Store Window Crashed.

City-wide reports of robbery and violence marked week-end police activity yesterday and last night.

A lone gunman, attired in sport shoes and summer clothing, was sought after robbing Millard Purcell, manager of a filling station at 1251 Bladensburg road northeast. The bandit forced Purcell into a rear room and took $17 from a cash drawer.

Two colored men attacked Allen H. Duvall, of Hyattsville, Md., as he walked through Willow Tree alley southwest, and robbed him of $42. Two suspects were arrested several hours later. They said they were Samuel Johnson, 39, of the 300 block of B street southwest, and Wierd Gibson, 32, of the 200 block of Fourth street southwest.

Knocked Down by Men.

Duvall said one of the men knocked him to the ground and held him while the second rifled his pockets.

Charles E. Bird, 53, of 528 Shepherd street northwest, told police he was robbed by a gang of colored youths near Ninth and N streets northwest. Bird said members of of the gang beat him and took $17 and a watch valued at $25.

While standing in a crowd at the scene of a minor accident at Eleventh and M streets northwest, Alfred Powell, of 1314 Tenth street northwest, reported his pocket was picked of a leather billfold containing $7. Two colored men fled when he attempted to question them, he said.

Miss Jule Purcell, of 619 Pennsylvania avenue northwest, reported that a young colored boy ripped the pocket from her dress and escaped with $7 as she stood near Sixth and N streets northwest.

Liquor Window Broken.

Thomas Chaney, 29, of the 1300 block of Eleventh street northwest, was arrested for questioning in connection with the robbery of a liquor store at 1210 New York avenue northwest. Samuel April, manager, said some one smashed a plate glass window and escaped with assorted liquors valued at $75.

Detectives were attempting to trace bloody fingerprints found on the wall of a filling station at Sixth street and Maryland avenue southwest. A. F. Woods, manager, said the place was ransacked while he stepped out for a few moments early yesterday. It was believed the intruder was cut by smashed glass in a front door.

Storm Lays Waste Loudoun County

Leesburg, Va., July 1 (Spl.).—Late reports coming in from different sections of Loudoun County, which was cut off from all telephone and telegraph communication last night as the result of yesterday's severe wind, rain and electrical storm show great devastation resulting from high winds and electricity.

Two hundred and thirty telephones were out of commission and a large number of the company's poles, as well as those of the electric service company, were down. Large tree limbs were blown down and smaller branches strewn over the ground. Corn fields were laid flat, and large hailstones damaged gardens.

Lightning struck the courthouse in Leesburg, blowing out fuses and tearing down wires. Eleven out of 14 cattle on the Harrison farm near Aldie were killed by lightning. Maurice Carnes, living near Lucketts, was treated by a physician for lightning shock, received when a bolt hit a tree in his yard. Leesburg and adjacent towns were in darkness throughout the night, and a large force of men was at work during the night and today repairing damage.

Mr. Tugwell Has Private Little Brain Trust All His Very Own

His Advisers Range From Detective Author to Star Student.

The Department of Agriculture, bailiwick of Brain Truster Rexford G. Tugwell has a private little brain trust of its own.

It includes a writer of detective fiction, a naturalized Russian, who once pressed pants for a living, an expert on corporate structure, a plant breeder and a youngster just a few years removed from the campus. The oldest member is 38, the youngest, 25.

Tugwell is, of course, the head man. Some of the group are his proteges, owing their position to his patronage.

Next in importance is Dr. Mordecai Ezekiel, shy, nervous and a wizard with a slide rule. Ezekiel is economic adviser to Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace. He figured out the Agricultural Adjustment Act and knows a great deal about wheat, foreign trade and what makes farm prices go up and down.

The Senate committee hearings on Tugwell's qualifications to be Undersecretary made him probably the most widely kown Administration figure next to the President and Gen. Hugh S. Johnson. Huey Long publicized Ezekiel.

Brains to Be Cooled Off.

The others of the department's brain trust are not as well known. They occupy a series of offices adjoining Tugewll's and consult with and are consulted by him all the time. They may have to move elsewhere soon to make way for Prof. M. L. Wilson, another brain truster, who is comoing down to take Tugwell's old place as Assistant Secretary. It would be an unwelcome move. The offices are about to be air-cooled.

Dr. Earl N. Bressman, Ph. D., is 35, blond, handsome and well-dressed. With Secretary Wallace he wrote a book called "Corn and Corn Growing." Like Wallace he is a geneticist and plant breeder. He graduated from Iowa State College, Ames, and later taught there. He also taught at the University of Arizona, Tucson, and at the University of Oregon, Corvallis. Tugwell was traveling in Oregon last summer, met Bressman and was so impressed that he brought him back to Washington.

The sweet potato glue factory established by the Government at Laurel, Miss., is Bressman's idea. He is particularly interested in persuading farmers to plant specialty crops, in places where competitive crops grow or used to. With $200,000 handed him by PWA he is developing insecticides to substitute for arsenate of lead, so people as well as bugs won't be killed.

Louis H. Bean was born in a Russian province, now Latvia, in 1896. In the "old country," as he calls it, his first name was Laib and his last meant "Bee." In 1906 he settled in Laconia, N. H., and started building up a fund to educate himself by picking berries, pressing pants, selling fruits, vegetables and cigars. He attended the University of Rochester and spent one vacation fitting noses on shells in an ammunition factory.

During the war Bean enrolled at Plattsburg Military Camp, where were Ezekiel, A. A. Berle and Gardner B. Means, none of whom he met until much later, when they all became brain trusters. After the war he went to Harvard Business College. From 1923 until he was drafted by the AAA as economic adviser, Dean worked with the Bureau of Agricultural Economics. He's an expert on price analysis, but has a contempt for slide rules and an aptitude for quick mental calculation.

Jay Franklin Unmasked.

John Franklin Carter writes in a popular magazine under the name of Jay Franklin. His murder mysteries he signs, "Diplomat." His accent is Bostonian and erudite, his alma mater, Yale. During the war he unraveled code mysteries for the U. S. Embassy at Rome. Later he was Rome correspondent for the London Chronicle. A contributor to "Time" magazine and The New York Times. He's a preconvention Rooseveltian and says business is to maintain friendly relations between radical, independent groups, like the technocrats, and the New Deal. He is, he says, one of the founders of technocracy.

Carter helps Tugwell write and edit his speeches. He is interested in the economic rehabilitation of Puerto Rico and the upper Monongahela Valley of West Virginia.

Gardner B. Means is 38, curly-haired and a Harvard man. He knows more about industry than agriculture and says he keeps his back to agriculture and helps it by observing its relationship with industry. He is a member of the NRA Consumers Advisory Board. With A. A. Berle he wrote an authoritative treatise on business, "The modern corporation and private property." Means flew an airplane in the war.

Fred Bartlett 25, lived with Tugwell in his Georgetown home until Tugwell moved. He was the undersecretary's star pupil when Tugwell taught at Columbia.

CCC to Hire 110,000 From Drought Areas

Enrollment of 160,000 new men in the Civilian Conservation Corps, representing 110,000 replacements and 50,000 additions to camps in the drought area, begins in every State of the Union today.

The replacements will make up for some 70,000 men discharged Saturday in compliance with the regulation limiting membership to one complete year, and another 40,000 who dropped from the ranks, the last three months to accept outside employment.

The 50,000 additions will be spread over the 22 drought States, and supplement the strength of approximately 300 existing camps and provide for 173 new forest camps, said Robert Fechner, director of the emergency conservation work.

Setting up of the 173 new forest camps will bring the total number of such units to 1,641.

Fechner said that the $12,500,000 which President Roosevelt ordered advanced for CCC operations in the drought area will be supplemented by additional allotments later. He said he expected that a total of $50,000,000 would be expended on special CCC drought activities.

Of the 50,000 to be enrolled in the drought area, 45,000 will be young men between the ages of 18 and 25 and the remainder will be recruited from war veterans.

Virginia Hunting Licenses Muddled

Danville, Va., July 1 (Spl.).—Virginia hunters are perplexed over the variety of licenses that are available. There are no fewer than 11 types of licenses, the fees ranging from $1 to $50.

Hitherto it has cost the hunter $3 to fish, hunt and trap in the State and $1 in a county.

This year the State separated trapping from hunting and fishing and has created new classifications.

The most expensive license is that of the nonresident trapper, who must pay $50.

Man Hits Head on Car; Dies Later in Hospital

Winchester, Va., July 1 (Spl.).—W. Henry Snyder, 21, of Wardensville, Va., died in Memorial Hospital here today from a fractured skull and internal injuries received in an auto accident last night.

Snyder was said to have been riding on the rear seat of an auto and his head was struck with great force against a door handle. Snyder was a son of Mr. and Mrs. Bronson Snyder, of Wardensville.

New Norfolk Heat Mark Set in June

Police Seek Relatives of Sun's Latest Victim.

Norfolk, Va., July 1 (Spl.).—June was the hottest month the Weather Bureau has ever recorded for Norfolk.

A middle-aged white man, identified through letters in his pocket as Christopher Curtis, collapsed from sunstroke on the street yesterday and died as he was being taken to St. Vincent's Hospital.

Identification had not been made last night. The man was 6 feet tall, with gray hair, and was wearing a white shirt, blue trousers, tan shoes and a leather belt with a single initial "C" on the silver buckle. The man had two burn scars, one under the right side of his jaw, the other running from elbow to shoulder on his right arm.

Ritchie's Foes Still Far at Sea On Who's Who

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Efforts to concentrate behind one man the opposition to the fifth term aspirations of Gov. Albert C. Ritchie were the high lights on the Maryland political scene during the last week. The difficulty was that each opposition candidate wanted to be the "one man."

The first move in this direction came to light when it became known that the managers of the gubernatorial campaign of George L. Radcliffe made a definite offer to Mayor Howard W. Jackson of Baltimore to support him for the Democratic senatorial nomination if he abandoned his desire to live in the governor's mansion at Annapolis.

Following this up, Radcliffe suggested a conference of leaders in the Ritchie opposition to decide on the best way of unseating the Governor. Jackson and Dr. Charles H. Conley, of Frederick, who also is an avowed candidate for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, were not adverse to the suggestion, but reiterated their intention of staying in the race.

Radcliffe Strength Doubted.

Moreover, Jackson let it be known that he was not interested in the Senatorial nomination, explaining he had chiefly devoted his talents to the administrative end of government. But the real reason is that Jackson is convinced the Radcliffe boom for Governor has slight prospects of success, and as a comparatively young man he is not enthusiastic about tying up with a movement apparently doomed to defeat.

It is perfectly obvious to those who have some understanding of the inner workings of the Democratic party in Maryland that Jackson's hope has been that sufficient opposition to a fifth term for Ritchie would be mobilized to scare the Governor out of the race. In that event, Jackson's prospects of getting the nomination would be as good or better than any other candidate.

But Ritchie has indicated most emphatically that he is not scared and, in order to show his confidence, he filed his certificate of candidacy during the week, reiterating that he preferred to be Governor of Maryland rather than Senator. When Ritchie makes such declarations, with his hand on his heart, in effect, they can not be treated lightly.

Ritchie in Race to Stay.

Thus with Ritchie in the race to stay—and that appears to be as certain as anything can be in politics—Jackson's best bet seems to be to make a bid for another term as mayor. He is careful to speak well of Ritchie and this writer believes that if the Ritchie people in Baltimore, with the Governor approving, promised to support him for another term as mayor, he would step out of the gubernatorial race and throw his support to Ritchie.

But the Ritchie district and ward leaders in Baltimore do not like Jackson—a fact which was quite evident some months ago when the Governor was reconciled to running for the Senate, but changed his mind when his Baltimore lieutenants said they would not stand for Jackson for Governor. These Ritchie leaders make no secret of their intention to oust Jackson next year.

Nevertheless, as long as Jackson stays in the gubernatorial race he has a real nuisance value and may cause the Ritchie camp much trouble. The Ritchie leaders in Baltimore in 1932 cared no more for Jackson than they do now, but the latter received the Democratic mayoralty nomination because of the support he had given Ritchie the year previously. That may happen again as Jackson has been an especially good Mayor of Baltimore, Ritchie asserting he is the best mayor the city ever had.

So much for the Jackson angle of the four-cornered situation. As usual Dr. Conely was on the sidelines, saying little. Senator Millard E. Tydings, the chief supporter of Radcliffe, however, was busy, seeking to bring about a consolidation of the Ritchie opposition behind his candidate.

Amateurish Tactics Seen.

The Radcliffe-Tydings tactics became somewhat amateurish during the week. For instance, Tydings announced that if Ritchie would run for the Senate, he would be glad to resign from the Senate—provided the new Governor promised to reappoint him later—in order that Ritchie might be the senior Senator from Maryland. Tydings gave the impression he thought this was a great concession.

Anyone who knows Ritchie, also knows that he could not be attracted to run for the Senate by being promised such flimsy prestige as being the senior Senator from Maryland. The senior Senator, except that he has earned a committee chairmanship by his long service—which Ritchie anyway would not have—has no more prerogatives than the junior Senator.

The whole Maryland Democratic political scene shifted during the week to Atlantic City, where the Maryland Bar Association held its convention. From that cool spot, Tydings was reported to have issued an ultimatum to Ritchie to announce his decision to run for the Senate by last night or prepare to fight. Ritchie, who started to fight several months ago, was unmoved by this "ultimatum" which was played up with great solemnity in the Baltimore newspapers.

The truth of the whole situation is that Jackson and Radcliffe have been unable to make any great headway against Ritchie in eliciting the support of party leaders and Democratic organizations, either in the city or the counties. Their only hope, if the contest goes to a showdown, is that Democratic voters who are not attached to political machines or local bosses have become so dissatisfied with Ritchie that they will turn to one of his opponents.

During the coming week the anti-Ritchie forces may hold a conference, but it is doubtful whether anything conclusive will develop from it. Jackson will not step out of the race for Radcliffe; Radcliffe will not step out for Jackson; neither feels he can step out with good grace for Ritchie. The Ritchie forces have suggested that Jackson or Radcliffe run for the Senate. Radcliffe is said to be thinking that over, but if he aligned himself with the Ritchie camp, he would leave his friend, Tydings, out on a limb, because the latter has reiterated his conviction that Ritchie's gubernatorial candidacy would ruin the Democratic party.

It is strange that with a plethora of candidates in both Republican and Democratic parties for Governor, none has yet announced for the Senate. Each says the other should run for the Senate, as though the latter were some inferior place unworthy of the aspirations of worthwhile statesmen. It is a situation not only unique in Maryland but in the country.

Secret Tydings Parley Fails to Solve Riddle

Baltimore, Md., July 1 (Spl.).—Amid a great show of secrecy, leaders of the anti-Ritchie clique of the Democratic party met here today in a "peace parley," at which candidates for the gubernatorial nomination were scheduled to pool their resources and unite behind one strong candidate to oppose the Governor's election.

The meeting was held at the offices of United States Senator Millard E. Tydings in the Baltimore Trust Building. So secret was the proceedings, however, that not even the names of those who attended could be learned.

Reports were, however, that Mayor Howard W. Jackson of Baltimore and several of his lieutenants were there, and consulted at length with George L. Radcliffe and his principal sponsor, Senator Tydings.

Jackson and Radcliffe are two of the three anti-Ritchie gubernatorial candidates.

Dr. Charles H. Conley, of Frederick, the third anti-Ritchie candidate, was not present, according to reports.

Whether any definite agreement was reached at the meeting of Jackson and Radcliffe could not be learned. It had been previously reported that Jackson would seek to persuade Radcliffe to join his ticket as senatorial candidate, and it was also reported that Radcliffe would try to persuade Jackson to become senatorial candidate on the Radcliffe ticket.

Neither would agree to the other's proposal, however, according to reports, and the meeting was said to have ended in an impasse.

Farm Credit Unit Made Permanent

Winchester, Va., July 1 (AP).—The Strasburg Production Credit Association, set up on a temporary basis early last spring, is being merged into a permanent organization, J. A. Everly, secretary-treasurer, announced today, in order that farmers of the lower Shenandoah Valley may continue to obtain loans from a regular source for production requirements.

Farmers of Frederick, Clarke, Warren, Page and Shenandoah Counties are members of the organization, and are eligible to apply for loans.

County agents have been cooperating with the association.

Excitement Rules Virginia Strike Area

More than 2,000 workers at the Tubize Chatillon artificial silk plant at Hopewell, Va., are on strike. Above, George E. Moorehouse, organizer for the United Textile Workers, instructs strikers in their picketing duties, just after they had walked out, forcing Virginia's largest single industry to close its doors. Fifty picked men were allowed to enter the plant Saturday, with the understanding they would leave today, to remove highly explosive nitrocotton from pipes and avert the likelihood of a serious explosion.

Strikers have just bodily lifted this automobile, turned it around, and sent it and its occupant, a plant foreman, away from the plant.

Deadly Cotton Being Cleaned Out of Looms

Drying Nitro Textile Taken From Machinery at Strike Plant.

The workmen, who were rushed to the plant yesterday by State police, armed to protect the workers from strike pickets, remained in the plant day and night, having food and clothing with them to last until their job is finished. The task is expected to require two days, permitting the men to leave the plant some time tomorrow.

Calm settled over the town and there was no outward sign of last week's friction between strikers and plant management.

The workmen were allowed to enter the building by the textile union local executive committee, after Gov. Peery interceded in an effort to remove what the plant management warned was a serious danger of explosion from the unfinished and drying nitro-cotton in the plant's equipment.

Labor leaders agreed to permit the workmen to enter on condition that two of their men be allowed to watch their work, to be sure there was no production of rayon.

A conciliator of the Federal Department of Labor is expected here tomorrow to begin negotiations looking toward a settlement of the strike.

The strike was called Friday after the plant management had challenged the jurisdiction of the Federal Labor Board and had ignored the board's mandate that ten workmen, said by union leaders to have been discharged because of their union activities, be reinstated.

Mrs. Nannie R. Levi To Be Buried Toda

Boyce, Va., July 1 (Spl.).—Funeral rites will be conducted here tomorrow for Mrs. Nannie Rogers Levi, 64, widow of Robert C. Levi, of Clarke County, who died in Harrisonburg yesterday.

The services will be conducted from the home of her brother, Clay Carr, with the Rev. Dr. L. A. Parker, the Rev. J. McL. Carr and the Rev. C. V. Van der Linden officiating. Burial will be in Berryville.

Surviving Mrs. Levi are two sisters, Mrs. T. B. Levi and Mrs. J. W. Eddy, both of Boyce, and two brothers, Clay Carr, of Boyce, and J. S. Carr, of Leetown, W. Va.

Maryland Club Asks Roosevelt To Yacht Fete

Silver Jubilee and 300th Birthday of State to Be Observed.

Baltimore, July 1 (Spl.).—If expectations of the Maryland Yacht Club are realized President Roosevelt will attend the joint observance of the yacht club's silver jubilee and the Maryland Tercentenary on August 11.

The President has indicated he will attend, if his business affairs can be so arranged, and yacht club officials are confidently expecting he will be on hand, basing their hopes on his well-known liking for boats and also on the fact he was unable to attend the Maryland Tercentenary celebration at St. Mary's City on June 16 and 17.

Mayor Howard W. Jackson has announced detailed plans for the celebration here.

"The observance will open on August 10, with a marine parade off the Maryland Yacht Club quarters in Broening Park," the mayor said. "After the parade, hundreds of visiting yachts, battleships, and Coast Guard boats will be assigned positions around the 2½-mile race course, off Fort McHenry, and powerboat and sail races will begin.

"Band concerts are scheduled at Broening Park and Fort McHenry by Army bands from various posts during the evening, while a formal reception will be held at the club.

"The races will be continued Saturday and Sunday, with band concerts and other features interspersing. President Roosevelt is expected Saturday afternoon, and will be in the parade Saturday night. More than 10,000 service men also will march.

"At sundown Sunday a spectacular water pageant is planned. It will be followed by a 'bombardment' of Fort McHenry by the battleships."

The celebration is expected to bring to Baltimore the largest number of boats and watercraft of all varieties that have ever assembled in the East. A committee is hard at work arranging for the various events, and it is expected Mayor Jackson will declare August 11 a legal holiday in the city.

Four Maryland Companies Authorized to Issue Stock

Frederick, Md., July 1 (Spl.).—Incorporation for four concerns and amendments to the fifth were filed in the Circuit Court yesterday. Three firms are authorized to issue $65,000 worth of capital stock, while another reduces its stock by $20,000.

The reduction was asked by the Frederick Iron & Steel Co. and approved by the State tax commission. Instead of 1,500 shares of capital stock at $100 a share, as heretofore, the company will issue 1,000 shares of preferred stock at $100 each, and 6,000 shares of common stock at $5 each, for a total of $130,000. The amendment names William A. Riddell, George M. Gittinger and Claude S. Hahn as directors. Benamin B. Rosenstock is attorney.

The Depositors Holding Corporation was formed to receive and possess the property which may be transferred by the Middletown Savings Bank, as provided in the plan of reorganization of the bank approved by the State bank commissioner. The directors are M. Foster Ahalt, Peter E. Bussard, G. Harland Dinterman, Charles W. Grossnickle, John F. Harshman, George C. House, George W. Kefauver, Herman L. Routzahn, John L. Routzahn, William S. Routzahn and John B. Schildknecht. John L. Routzahn, Middletown, is named resident agent. No issue of capital stock is authorized.

New Schroeders, Inc., this city, is authorized to issue 2,000 shares of common stock at $10 a share. The directors are Herbert C. Meurling, Everett P. Gue and Mary Waghelstein, all of Baltimore. Mr. Gue is named resident agent.

The Frederick Theater, Inc., is authorized to issue 200 shares of capital stock at $100 a share. The directors are J. F. Falls and Marie P. Falls, both of Danville, Va., and Ashley M. Abendschein, this city. Mr. Abendschein is named resident agent. Harry Wooding, jr., Danville, Va., is attorney.

The Hillside Coal Co., this city, is authorized to issue 2,500 shares of stock at $10 each. Directors are Paul L. Romsberg, who is resident agent; Carrie E. Romsberg and Mary A. Davis.

500 Expected At Retreat for Young People

Southern Methodists Will Supervise Vacation in Virginia.

Harrisonburg, Va., July 1 (Spl.). Five hundred young people are expected at Massanetta Springs, religious retreat, tomorrow when the twelfth annual Young People's Assembly of the Baltimore Conference, Southern Methodist Church, opens a conference which will last through July 9.

The theme this year will be "Dare We Be Christian?" and the members have secured outstanding ministers and laymen to carry out the idea in lecture and study course. This year's assembly has a four-fold purpose: To deepen spiritual lives; encourage brotherhood and cooperation; instruct those who attend to be better leaders, and to furnish a well-rounded Christian vacation.

Organize Big Staff.

An extensive staff has been organized, including Charles S. Jarvis, president; Herman S. Moorman, dean; Miss Hazeltine Settle, registrar; Miss Northie Foster, room registrar; Miss Beryl Echols, class registrar; Mrs. Watson E. Holly, dean of women and assembly hostess; the Rev. Watson E. Holly, dean of men; the Rev. J. H. Hobbs, song leader; Mrs. J. H. Hobbs, pianist; Dr. Esther F. Kuhm, assembly doctor; Ivan Washburn, bugler, and Mr. Jarvis, Miss Elsie Oberlin, Miss Mable Collins, John J. Hawse and Bernard W. Woodahl, executive committee.

Courses offered at the assembly will be divided into two fields—enrichment courses and program and organization courses.

Enrichment courses included "The Story of Job," the Rev. Dr. E. L. Woolf; "How to Enjoy the Bible," the Rev. Dr. Hubert Sydenstricker; "Christian Patriotism," the Rev. Watson E. Holley; "Personality Development," the Rev. Dr. J. J. Rives; "Christian Use of Leisure," the Rev. W. G. Winton; "Our Methodist Church," the Rev. Dr. H. H. Sherman; "What It Means to Be a Christian," the Rev. H. E. Cromer, and "Leaders' Round Table," the Rev. B. L. Schuble.

Other Courses Named.

Courses on program and organization will include "Planning the Department Program," the Rev. B. L. Schuble; "Using Dramatics," Mrs. Pearl B. Long; "Committee on Worship," the Rev. Frank A. Settle; "Evangelism and Church Relationship," the Rev. W. G. Winton; "Missions and World Friendship," the Rev. W. E. Holley; "Citizenship and Community Service," the Rev. C. C. Burruss; "Recreation and Personal Development," K. M. Cowen, and "Committee and Leadership Training," Mrs. E. L. Woolf.

The daily program for the week of the assembly follows: Monday, keynote address, the Rev. Dr. N. B. Harmon, jr., editor of the Baltimore Southern Methodist, and lawn social; Tuesday, theme address, the Rev. Dr. J. J. Rives, and lantern hike; Wednesday, annual banquet; Thursday, vesper service and play; Friday, missions program, "Daring Together," and campfire program; Saturday, coronation of king and queen, and Legion of Service program; Sunday, communion service, consecration service; 3 o'clock musicale and evening worship.

Hastings Wallops New Deal at Rally

Lewes, Del., July 1 (Spl.).—Shouting vehemently, "The devil with the Blue Eagle," to the accompaniment of lusty cheers from his audience, United States Senator Daniel O. Hastings, of Delaware, fired the opening gun of a State G. O. P. rally in Sussex County here last night, where approximately 600 sweltering Republicans packed the fire hall with the thermometer registering 90. Senator John G. Townsend, jr., of Delaware, presided.

Senator Hastings told the audience in no uncertain terms that "unless the Republicans come to the rescue of the country at the November elections and demand a square deal instead of the New Deal requiring the accumulation of a public debt of 10,000,000 a day, the consequences will be disastrous."

Senator Frederick C. Walcott, of Connecticut, a member of the Finance Committee, was a guest speaker, preceding Senator Hastings talk with an outline of the financial situation at Washington. He stated that although President Roosevelt had instilled new confidence in the people for the first eight months of his administration, the Nation's hope for good from the NRA and the AAA had proved in vain.

$5,214,000 Is Earned By Bank of America

San Francisco, July 1 (AP).—Earnings of the Bank of America National Trust and Savings Association and of Bank of the America (California), totaled $5,214,000 for the first six months of 1934, Bank of America announced today.

Earnings covered dividend requirements for the entire year by a margin of more than $1,000,000, and were 17 per cent above those for the first six months of 1933.

Institute Session Leaders

Four of more than a score of State and National leaders who are taking a leading part in the Institute of Public Affairs, which opened yesterday at Charlottesville, Va. Top, left to right, Dr. John McDowell, of the board of National missions of the Presbyterian Church in the United States, who opened the institute when he spoke at vesper services, and Dr. George W. Spicer, of the university, who will direct the forum on "County Government and State Planning." Bottom, left to right, Dr. Francis W. Coker, professor of political science, at Yale, who will speak on that topic; and Grover Clark, of New York, consultant on Far Eastern affairs to international organization, will direct the "Currents of Conflict in the Far East" forum.

Dr. McDowell Opens Public Affairs Forum

Charlottesville, Va., July 1 (AP).—Dr. John McDowell, of the Board of National Missions of the Presbyterian Church in the United States, opened the eighth Institute of Public Affairs of the University of Virginia, as he spoke at vesper services. Dr. McDowell voiced his belief that the church ought to understand the social, political and industrial trends of the times, as well as the moral and spiritual life that surrounds it.

The Rev. Cameron Parker Hall, pastor of Christ Presbyterian Church, New York, also spoke Each afternoon this week he will participate in a round table discussion group which Dr. McDowell will lead on "The Function of the Church in Modern Life."

Five other round table conferences are on the first week's program. The subects they will consider are the "God Neighbor" policy in Latin America; dictatorship versus democracy; money—a challenge to world statesmanship; county government and State planning and home ownership and the country church.

Gov. George C. Peery will assist in exercises in McIntire Amphitheater tomorrow night, which mark the beginning of the round table talks.

In his opening sentences Dr. McDowell said that, "to know the times in the social, political and industrial as well as the moral and spiritual sense, the church must know just where the center of interest lies at any given time. This center of interest is undoubtedly a changeable matter. Sixty years ago it lay in the relation of relligion to science, 40 years ago it lay in the relation of religion to scripture; today it lies in the relation of religion to society.

"The real questions of our day are not speculative. They are terribly practical."

Maryland Tobacco Men To Hold Annual Outing

Annapolis, Md., July 1 (Spl.).—The annual picnic of the Maryland Tobacco Growers Association, always a big affair among southern Maryland farmers, will be held at Seaside Park, Calvert County, July 19.

Prominent speakers will address the gathering in the afternoon. The picnic also will be a mecca for State and local political candidates and leaders in the fall campaign.

Martinsburg Nursery School Opens Today

Martinsburg, W. Va., July 1 (Spl.). A nursery school for children between 3 and 6 years of age will open tomorrow at Stone Home. Misses Evelyn Wever and Anna McKee will teach.

Youth Will Be Served

29-Year-Old Senate Aspirant Calls on Shade of Henry Clay to Prove He Can Be Seated in August Body.

By W. L. Geppert.

Charleston, W. Va., July 1.—The age of Rush D. Holt, of Weston, youthful member of the House of Delegates for Lewis County, has become an issue in the West Virginia primary campaign.

Holt, a Democrat, is a candidate for his party nomination for United States Senator. Shortly after he made his formal announcement, question was raised as to his eligibility under the Constitution. The State Blue Book sets forth that he was born on June 19, 1905. The Federal Constitution provides that a United States Senator shall have reached the age of 30 years. Wherefore, it was held that Holt could not qualify if elected and therefore is ineligible as a candidate.

Holt thereupon issued a statement that this would not affect his primary race but would be up to the United States Senate, the sole judge of the qualifications of its members, and recalled that Henry Clay was seated when only 29.

"It is quite probable," Holt stated, "that many earnest and sincere citizens may be somewhat disturbed about this possibility, but I suspect that the question was raised by die-hard reactionaries who are determined to arrest the progress of the New Deal of our beloved and humanitarian President, Franklin D. Roosevelt, and who have seized upon this flimsy pretext to disguise their real purpose.

"Even admitting that the Senate would disregard precedent and refuse to seat me, I would be able to take my seat on June 19, which is six months earlier than any other West Virginia Senator ever assumed his duties. Heretofore, Congress has not ever assembled until December of the year following the election."

Coolidge Memorial Urged.

Northampton, Mass. (U.P.)—Councilman Edmund L. Lampron has introduced a resolution urging this city, home of the late Calvin Coolidge, to erect a suitable memorial, to the former President. Lampron is a Democrat.

Wicomico Fair Is Abandoned At Salisbury

Annual Festival Is Ended After 25 Years; to Sell Grounds.

Salisbury, Md., July 1 (Spl.). For the first time in 25 years Salisbury will have to do without its annual Wimomico County Fair, State Senator D. J. Ward, president and manager of the Wicomico Fair Association, Inc., announced today.

Senator Ward said the fair not only would not be held but the property would be offered for sale this summer.

Consent of the stockholders to this program is being secured by Clarence W. Whealton, secretary of the association.

The fair has been unable to operate at a profit for several years and the buildings are rapidly depreciating said Senator Ward.

Attendance dropped off so sharply last year that the management decided to do away with the admission charge and depend on concessions for revenue. This plan also failed.

Organized in 1909 the fair was highly successful for many years. The property lies just outside the city limits of Salisbury and consists of 26 acres with scores of large exhibition buildings, stables and grandstand.

Upon the half-mile track many of the fastest races in the country have taken place with some of the best known horses in the East participating.

Hog-Raising Law Violation Charged

Winchester Former Mayor Ordered to Court.

Winchester, Va., July 1 (Spl.).—F. Amos Shryock, former mayor, will appear before Magistrate Donald L. Weems tomorrow to answer a charge of keeping hogs in violation of the city ordinance prohibiting raising swine for commercial purposes here.

Shryock was summoned shortly after he had obtained an injunction in Corporation Court restraining the city from erecting a fence on his lot to keep his hogs from near a spring from which the city obtains part of its water supply.

Relief Head Faces Nonsupport Trial

Martinsburg, W. Va., July 1 (Spl.).—Raymond J. Horner, formerly of Martinsburg, recently living in Chambersburg, Pa., where he has been employed as supervisor of the Federal Reemployment Service Bureau, was arrested here yesterday on a warrant from Chambersburg, charging desertion and nonsupport of his wife, now living in Chambersburg.

Horner demanded extradition papers and posted a bond for his appearance later before Justice Smith. Pennsylvania authorities are understood to have taken steps to have extradition papers issued for his return.

Berkeley 4-H Girls To Leave for Camp

Martinsburg, W. Va., July 1 (Spl.). Twelve 4-H girls from Berkeley County 4-H Clubs leave tomorrow under care of Home Club Agent Esther Brucklacher, and County Agents McClung and Bolton, for Jacksons Mill, to attend the younger girls camp.

Mrs. Brucklacher will remain there through the week teaching leathercraft and astronomy.

Virginia Airship Firm Seeks $912,000 Loan

Richmond, July 1 (AP).—Garrette W. Peck, president of the Virginia Airship Co., Inc., announced tonight that his firm will apply to the Publics Works Administration Monday for a loan of $912,000.

The company's plan is to borrow the money with the understanding that it will transfer to the State title to all property acquired with the fund, on condition that the State lease to the company a State airport near Sandston, Va., for 30 years.

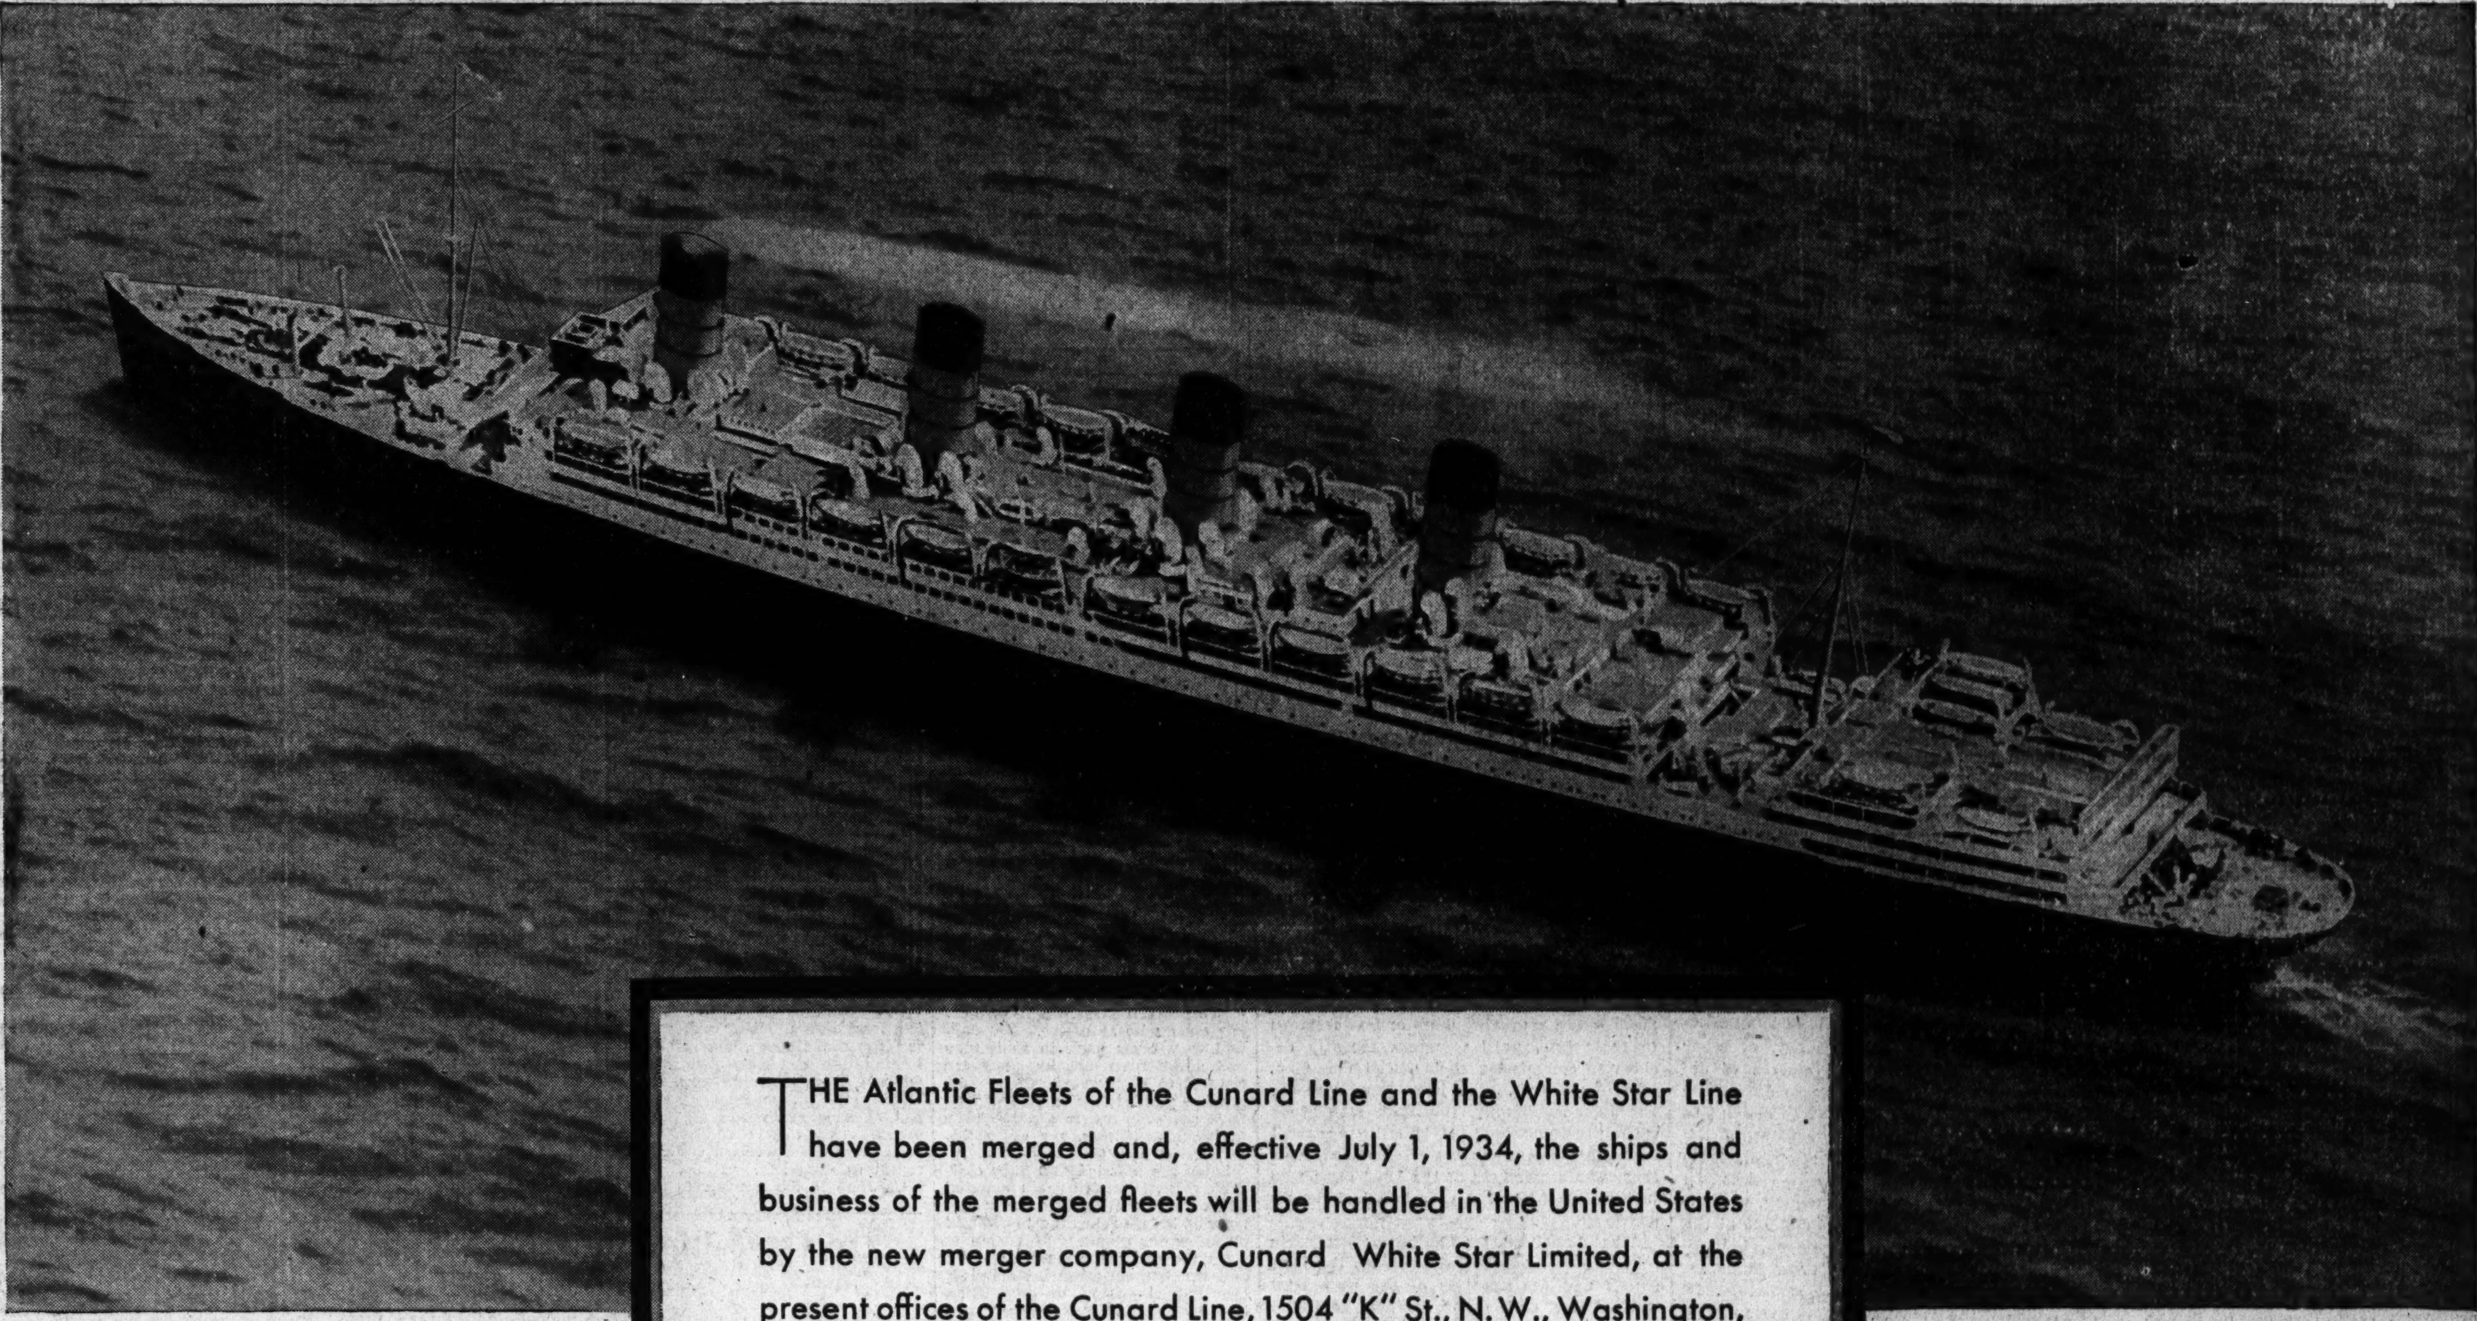
CUNARD WHITE STAR LIMITED



THE Atlantic Fleets of the Cunard Line and the White Star Line have been merged and, effective July 1, 1934, the ships and business of the merged fleets will be handled in the United States by the new merger company, Cunard White Star Limited, at the present offices of the Cunard Line, 1504 "K" St., N.W., Washington, D. C., and branch offices in the principal cities of the United States: New York, Atlanta, Chicago, Los Angeles, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Cleveland, Minneapolis, Pittsburgh, St. Louis, Boston, Detroit, New Orleans, San Francisco, Portland, Me., Seattle.

Your Local Travel Agent is ready to serve you.

CUNARD and WHITE STAR are now one, a saga of the sea which is the history of Britain. For seamen founded this island kingdom. Ships were "The wooden walls of England" . . . far-flung boundaries which fostered industry and commerce to keep step with empire. Life was inextricably bound in with the needs of England's growth over the seven seas . . . the best of the land went into her ships, the best of her men to man them.

And throughout the last century almost the whole story of Britain on the seas is the history of the parallel development of Cunard and White Star. Together they have gone forward, participating alike in a tradition of ships and seamen which has become almost synonymous with the record of achievement in ocean transportation as we know it today. And now Cunard and White Star are one in fact. Their union brings into being what is by far the greatest fleet on the Atlantic—616,000 tons—with the world's two largest vessels as flagships. These vast resources under one management are immediately significant to the traveller and shipper. But there is another significance that lies behind the veil of statistics. The British tradition of seamanship lives in the hearts and minds of men and there we believe lies the supreme good in the Cunard White Star union. It brings together a great body of officers and men . . . irreplaceable men without whom ships would be so much steel. It joins and vitalizes the traditions of seamen who made ocean transportation what it is today; who today are making it what it will be tomorrow.

The Cuban Embargo.

President Roosevelt's proclamation, laying an embargo against the shipment of arms, explosives and munitions to Cuba, offers further evidence of this country's good will toward the insular republic. In our relations with Cuba's revolutionary governments the President's policy of being a "good neighbor" has been well exemplified.

Cubans were delighted when the United States agreed to abrogation of the Platt Amendment, thus ending this country's right to intervene in the island to preserve order. But officials at Havana still recognize the importance of aid from Washington. They found that munitions and explosives were being smuggled into Cuba to carry on a terroristi campaign against the Medieta government. The State Department was asked to cooperate in preventing these shipments. Consequently, arms may be shipped to Cuba only through requests from the Havana government.

If this action had been taken two years ago, it probably would have been denounced as imperialistic by some of the officials who are now in power at Havana. Nevertheless, it indicates a genuine desire on the part of the American Government to be helpful in the restoration of orderly government within the island. With or without the Platt Amendment this country has a deep interest in Cuba's welfare. Cooperation of this kind in the maintenance of peace is entirely proper.

The American people are waiting anxiously to learn Cuba's reaction to this friendly policy. Some recent events in Havana give the impression certain elements there are thinking more of the rights and privileges of full sovereignty than of Cuba's obligations. Good will and the cooperative spirit can be preserved, of course, only when they are mutual.

A Logical Merger.

Merger of the Washington Chamber of Commerce with the Board of Trade should have been effected years ago. The purposes, functions and objectives of the two organizations are identical. In fact, they have worked in harmony in recent years. Their consolidation appears to be agreeable to the membership of both organizations. Certainly they will be in a position to render more effective community service as a single unit.

At the time the Chamber of Commerce was organized there was a rather distinct cleavage of opinion between the two groups regarding the development of Washington. But these differences have been gradually removed with the steady growth of the Capital City. Problems with which the business men of Washington are now concerned tend to bring groups of this kind together instead of driving them apart. It is gratifying to note that any rivalry which might have existed between these two organizations has been submerged for the welfare of the community.

The Board of Trade and the Chamber of Commerce have taken an active interest in the orderly development of Washington. Projects in which their influence has been felt include Union Station, codification of District laws, extension of library facilities, &c., as well as business and commercial undertakings. They have worked assiduously to secure a square deal for District taxpayers and to bring about equitable fiscal relations between the District and the Federal Government. It is reasonable to assume that the consolidated organization will continue this community service with increased influence and prestige.

Steers Vs. Foxes.

Yankees have a way of answering one question by asking another, and sometimes this is a most effective way of winning an argument. In a London police court the other day Tex Austen, described as an American rodeo impresario, found it his best defense. He had been charged by the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals with "terrifying an animal, to wit, a steer." This summer there has been an invasion of Britain's calm by several groups of American Westerners, with their 10-gallon hats and their lariats, who have been staging rodeos. The society with the long name has been quite put out about their "cruelty."

For its misunderstanding of American ways the society will have to pay all the costs of the trial of Mr. Austen. He, it seems, with another person, was "doing a breakaway roping" when the steer in question ran into a fence and was slightly injured. Haled into police court, Mr. Austen was asked in effect if he had frightened that steer. Although it appears from his first name that he hails from the region of the Rio Grande, he countered with an answer that would have done credit in the court at Newfane, Vt. His answer was, in effect, are not Englishmen cruel when they chase foxes, and which is worse, to rope a steer or turn the countryside loose on a defenseless rodent?

Chasing and roping steers is not so ancient a "sport" as fox hunting, but it takes more skill and more risks. Fox hunters and steer ropers both indulge in the human enjoyment of hunting animals, and while either may be decried as cruel, we rather think the American had the better of the argument.

At any rate, Mr. Tex Austen is to be congratulated for his Yankee tact.

Stripping The Mask.

Additional gloom is added to the somber German scene by reports of rapidly failing health for aged President von Hindenburg—the one national figure around whom all German factions might be able to rally if the Nazi regime collapses. And that this possibility has now become almost a probability becomes more clear as analysis is given to the events of the Reich's tragic week-end.

The vigor and ruthlessness with which Hitler and Goering have acted were doubtless calculated to demonstrate their ability to hold together the tottering Nazi fabric. But what these political assassinations have demonstrated far more clearly is the rotten character of the government which "Der Fuehrer" heads. The executed Storm Troop leaders are men who heretofore have been held up as paragons of patriotic virtue. The revelation of their real character as sexual perverts, grafters, plotters and conscienceless self-seekers will be the more hideous for the idolatry which Hitler has heretofore demanded for all who wear the swastika.

If this unmasking were all that confronted the Nazi regime today, its effects would be serious enough. But the proof of individual corruption among many of its leaders coincides with demonstrations of bankruptcy in every field of National Socialist government. In 17 months of personal dictatorship Hitler has piled up a list of failures which makes the rule of Nero seem enlightened and successful by comparison. The man whose mission it was to lead Germany out of enslavement has dragged his country into a servitude far more degrading than any an alien conqueror could impose.

History shows that the German people are easy to fool. And history shows that this strong and rather stubborn race can be very terrible when it awakes to realization of self-deception. Thousands of families in Germany today have suffered from the tyranny and persecutions of those whom Hitler first honored, and now disowns. To suppose that he will not be held responsible for acts of subordinates whom he has denounced too late, is to suppose that the Germans are a race lacking in both intelligence and pride.

For the outside world, at this critical juncture of German affairs, the reasonable attitude is clear. The sorely tried German people, who have suffered even beyond all others the past two decades, obviously deserve sympathy in the rude awakening they face. But something more than mere sympathy may be necessary in the days ahead.

After all, Germany holds a keystone position in Europe's economic fabric. What happens in that country is of far more than merely academic interest to the rest of the world. Once the Germans decide to be done with a government which has so slandered German traditions it will be the course of good sense as well as good feeling to make the rehabilitation of this great nation as easy and as rapid as possible.

Rise In Bank Deposits.

Since the end of February Government officials estimate that there has been an increase of $1,000,000,000 in all bank deposits, exclusive of Government deposits and those held for the account of other banks. If the last-named classes of deposits are included, the increase during the period in question is believed to amount to $3,000,000,000. As further evidence of the rapid expansion that has occurred, it is stated that all deposits have now reached an estimated total of $46,000,000,000, as compared with less than $39,000,000,000 at the end of the bank holiday in March, 1933.

Are we to conclude that these gains reflect increases in the "real accumulated" savings of the American people due to business recovery? Or is the Government's program of deficit financing primarily responsible for this growth? Certainly gains in Government deposits resulting from the heavy borrowing operations of the Treasury and reflected in rising public deposits are not a product of savings. They are, on the contrary, a result of inadequate resources which have necessitated increasing governmental dependence upon the banks to finance uncovered outlays. Some idea of the extent of that reliance is gained by an examination of the statements of reporting member banks, which on June 20 held $6,582,000,000 in Government securities, an increase of over $1,200,000,000 during the year. Meantime Government deposits had risen approximately $720,000,000, and all other (demand) deposits had increased about $1,500,000,000.

Since the Government took over the reserve system's gold stocks, the Treasury has been depositing gold certificates with the Federal Reserve Banks and establishing credits against which it can draw. Thus by Treasury sales of securities to the banks and by deposits of cash, the amount of purchasing power represented by bank deposits has been rapidly swollen. As disbursements are made for account of the Government, funds are redeposited by the recipients. The result has been an extraordinarily rapid addition to all classes of deposits, reflecting for the most part the borrowing and spending operations of the Government. There is no warrant, therefore, for assuming that the additions to individual and corporate deposits have been produced by a sudden expansion of business activity and an increase in material well-being. That may be true to a limited extent, but it is not the major reason for the expansion.

The result of the steady outpouring of borrowed funds by the Government has been an excessive ease of credit which has been reflected in an unusually large volume of excess bank reserves. These reserves would permit an expansion of credit on a colossal scale. With no end to the Government's spending program in sight, it is impossible to see how an effective check could be offered to a runaway type of inflationary credit activity, should such a movement develop. Instead, therefore, of pointing with pride and satisfaction to the accelerated increase in bank deposits, Government officials ought to be regarding them as signals of possible trouble ahead.

The Stock Control Board.

The new Stock Exchange and Securities Commission is potentially one of the most important independent regulatory agencies ever established under Federal law. The extensive discretionary powers conferred upon it give those called upon to administer the securities act and the stock exchange law great influence in determining the pace and character of future industrial expansion. Through its authority to check unlation. These misgivings will be considersound developments and suppress illegitimate speculative trading the commission may not only protect investors, but also lay the foundation for a more stable business structure. For these reasons selection of its personnel has been awaited with great eagerness, not unmixed with anxiety.

Fears have been expressed that the commission might approach its task in a hostile spirit, with emphasis upon the suppressive instead of the constructive aspects of regually lessened by the selection, as a member and probable chairman, of a man whose past activities and affiliations have given him an inside knowledge of the problems of the financial community. Since Mr. Kennedy is a personal friend of President Roosevelt, his appointment strengthens the belief that the commission will work in cooperation with the regulated interests, not against them.

Fortunately the commission is not handicapped by appointees selected solely on personal or political grounds, without regard to their special qualifications for the task assigned them. All of the members are entitled to rank as experts, with an intimate knowledge, gained through study or official contacts, of the complex problems they will be called upon to solve. That seems to be the best possible guarantee of reasonable regulation and administrative efficiency. Lack of preparation and ignorance of what ought to be done or can be done are largely responsible for the mistakes of policy that so often bring government regulation into disrepute.

It has sometimes been feared that Messrs. Landis and Pecora were bent upon destructive regulation of stock and securities markets. However, any investigator seeking evidence upon which to base a case for regulation, and any reformer trying to secure support for his regulatory ideals, is inclined to show a crusading spirit that may not be displayed when he is placed in a position of high administrative responsibility.

If the bureaucratic and doctrinaire elements are prepared to give due weight to the views of those who have practical experience with market operations, the commission ought to render a great service by encouraging a healthy growth of investment activity.

All For Love.

Amid the vicissitudes of National recovery, the turmoil in Germany and the excitement of President Roosevelt's departure for a long vacation, a serious problem has arisen in the naval service. One-half of the Naval Academy's graduating class of 1933, it seems, has been subjected to irksome regimentation. That is to say, these young ensigns have been denied the privilege of getting married until June, 1935.

As will be noted from a letter to the editor of The Post elsewhere on this page, these young men were more or less resigned to their fate, until Congress recently decided to commission their fellow classmen, who, for a year, have been free from the ban upon matrimony. Can Navy men brook such discrimination? It is quite apparent from this young ensign's communication that certain members of the 1933 class who were commissioned a year ago feel deeply aggrieved.

What does it matter whether governments fall, war goes on, drought withers the food supply and the agencies of the New Deal tumble over each other in their scramble for recovery, if the yearnings of love are denied? How is it possible that the Brains Trust could overlook such a problem? Where is that coordinating agency which is supposed to iron out irregularities from the New Deal? Surely there must be some redress for servants of the Republic who are thus caught in the net of tantalizing bureaucracy. The situation seems to call for an investigation by the Navy, and it might well be brought to the attention of Marc Connelly.

TWENTY YEARS AGO TODAY.

IN A FORMAL "conference" the majority in the Senate adopted a resolution that Congress should not adjourn until the trust program had been carried out.

THE FAILURE OF Congress to enact the District appropriation bill before the beginning of the fiscal year, and the necessity of the various municipal departments operating under a continuance of the old appropriation practically halted all work of improving government buildings in the District.

Letters to the Editor

The Marriage Ruling.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: When we entered the Naval Academy we began a new existence. There were no longer any distinctions and each man rated exactly the same as another. To a degree this is true througout the naval service. Each officer is allowed 30 days leave each year. The base pay is the same in each grade. The duration of shore duty, sea duty and foreign duty is prescribed by Navy regulations and policies. Every officer has promotion examinations to pass. Now, however, a discrepancy in this fair and square dealing seems to have crept in.

On June 1, 1933, only half our class was commissioned. Academically we were the best fitted half to receive commissions. On us were brought to bear certain new regulations. First we were to serve under probationary commissions for two years. Secondly, for these two years we were not to be married. All well and good, although the second regulation seemed rather harsh.

Now Congress has decided to commission the remaining half of our class who so desire. Not only will they come back in as if they had never been out, but they are allowed to be married. They, who have so much to make up and who have not even put in a year's time as bachelor officers, are given this privilege which we are denied.

Some are married and have children Others hurriedly get married when they realize they must get married before returning to the fold or suffer our plight.

On the other hand, we stand by and watch them come in—married! Can they laugh at us—yes! They have lost nothing in their year's absence and come back privileged people.

We are the best fitted to get married since we are a year ahead of them in service and ahead in academic standing. Still nothing is done to give us equal rights, which surely we are entitled to. Most of us are here on the East Coast now, grabbing the opportunity of seeing our fiancees for the first time in one whole year. Would not the square deal be to let the first half of the class of '33 get married? After all, this has been a long year.

Next spring we face the prospect of maneuvers around Alaska and Honolulu. How can we be married then in June, when it will be allowed, if we are off on this cruise? How much time would we have with our wives?

I do not think this is purposely meant to be unfair, but is merely the result of an oversight. This article is written to bring to the attention of the proper authorities, with all due respect, the necessity for rectifying the situation.

"Still" Democracy.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In a recent Post are three news items of great importance I have not found in any other newspaper. They show a Federal dictatorship denied by the President himself at New Haven when he became an "alumnus" of Yale and declared: "We are still a democracy." If "we" are, then the other two items disclose what is left of "our" democracy to be very "still," indeed.

The second item is headed: "AAA Autocracy Fight Renewed by Senator Byrd," and the third is a statement by the Department of Labor officials that, regardless of Congress' refusal to give them the autocratic discretion to deport or not deport alien lawbreakers as they think it "in the public interest," they will continue to do so as to 465 aliens until the next Congress.

Their excuse is their opinion that an alien who enters illegally or who after legal entry has broken our laws should be sent back to his own country, if the alien has married, has had children or has other "near relatives" here! In the Department of Labor therefore and in other departments is to be found the very same substitution of personal ukase for law and for the deliberately expressed will of the legislative branch.

P. H. JAMES.
Washington.

Dictatorship.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In a recent issue of The Post is the amazing news release by the Department of Labor that 465 alien deportations will be suspended another six months. The law expressly provides that aliens breaking our laws "shall be taken into custody" by the Secretary of Labor "and deported." There is absolutely no discretion "not to deport."

The stated excuse in the release is a resolution adopted "unanimously" by the House Committee on Immigration and Naturalization, at which I am reliably informed there were only six members present. But even if every one of the 22 members of that committee had been present such action could not repeal existing law.

On June 15 the House refused to confer on the Secretary of Labor and associates the very discretion just used. The Secretary of Labor, according to the debates on the bill, had repeatedly asked for such a discretion.

Repeatedly, we nave been assured by those high in authority that we still have a democracy and a representative form of government divided three ways, as per our written Constitution, into legislative, executive and judicial departments, and yet here is an autocratic usurpation of the legislative function by appointed executive officials.

If this is not a clear instance of dictatorship and the substitution of personal edict for regularly enacted constitutional law, I have never seen or read of such.

J. L. MASON.

A Non-Sectarian Movement.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Please accept my congratulations and thanks for your editorial on "A Popular Campaign." In view of advertising that was very brave of you, and we of the decent element appreciate it. Sectarian lines have been broken down in this campaign. The Protestant clergy and press are urging our people to give the movement whole-hearted support. Again from my heart I thank you.

A. H. THOMPSON.

In Opposition to District Vote

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Several days ago, Mr. Roberts, counsel for the utilities commission and who, with Mr. Donovan, the District auditor, is assisting the Senate District Committee in a study of the District government, suggested over the radio that District citizens present their views on what, if any, changes should be made.

As Mr. Roberts has always been in favor of all kinds of suffrage for the District, and I against any kind so far suggested within my knowledge, I am glad to avail myself of his request. I mention this question of District suffrage because Mr. Roberts has asked: Should the District Commissioners be elected?

I can make my comment shorter by elimination. Thus I am unalterably opposed to so-called National suffrage for the District which would in fact if not in name make the District a "city-State." City-States have never been very successful as political units, and certainly they would not be under our Federal Constitution.

No Congress and no President since the formation of this Nation has favored creating a city-State in the Union; in fact each opposed it. But a few individuals, most of whom were from the District of Columbia, have demanded that Washington be made a city-State.

If one may judge from results—and efficient city government is the one great objective and ideal—the present form with three Commissioners appointed by the President is a vast improvement over the elective form of common council and mayor we had prior to 1871. The Territorial form of government for the District, instituted in 1871, but abolished three years later, was an utter failure.

The present form of District government was the outgrowth of 75 years of municipal suffrage for the District and three years as a Territory. After nearly 70 years the present form's severest critics dwell mostly on denial of suffrage and not on inefficient and dishonest District government.

The peculiar and unique relation existing in the Federal Capital District between the District residents on the one side and the Federal Administration and Congress on the other, suggests the almost utter impossibility of devising a scheme of local government which would still leave original and exclusive power in the Federal Government and yet give the District resident control over the local affairs.

The President must retain the power to appoint District officials and Congress the power of levying taxes and making appropriations to give the best results. To do otherwise would throw us back into the days prior to 1874.

A city-manager form would be a dismal failure unless the set-up gave the city-manager and his local "small council" supreme control over taxation and appropriations.

Senator King's bill proposing to appoint the Engineer Commissioner from civil life instead of from the Army as at present would weaken the present commission form rather than strengthening it in any way. Certainly we could hardly hope to get a more efficient engineer or one less beholden to politicians if appointed from civil life. Election of the Board of Education offers no advantages over the present method of appointment by the Supreme Court of the District, and the appointment of the board by the District Commissioners suggests no improvement. It is my belief that elective boards of education are no more efficient than those appoited.

Therefore I unhesitatingly favor retention of the present set-up of the District government, but suggest two things: 1—that the Board of Commissioners be given greater administrative powers; just what these "greater powers" should be, can be worked out by the Senate Committee at the hearing next fall; 2—that it should not be within the power of the National budget officer to make the local budget conform to the exigencies of the National Government's economic policy. I can see no reason why the National budget officer should not put his okey on or disprove this or that item; but that his judgment should be the controlling factor is neither good business nor fair to the District residents.

The Post Impressionist

Another Prophet?

Postoffice, Thursday.

YOU know how studiously this column avoids everything of a political character. But when politics impinge upon prophecy, we too, are tempted to trespass.

Here is our country in a period of portentous change—and here is somebody saying that England's historian Macaulay predicted it, over 77 years ago: if not just what we're getting, at least what some sincere folk fear we may get. The column succumbs!

* * *

Mr. James A. Noon, of Portland, Me., is a representative of Ernst & Ernst, accountants and auditors with offices pretty much everywhere. Mr. Noon writes to a friend of ours:

"The enclosed copy of a letter reputed to have been written by Lord Macaulay * * * came to my attention through our New Orleans offices, and I thought you would be interested in reading it."

* * *

The "copy" bears date of London, May 23, 1857. It is addressed to the "Hon. H. E. Randall, of New York." And, after a brief introduction, it says:

"I have long been convinced that institutions purely democratic must, sooner or later, destroy liberty or civilization, or both. In Europe, where the population is dense, the effect of such institutions would be almost instantaneous. What happened lately in France is an example. In 1848, a pure democracy was established there. During a short time there was a strong reason to expect a general spoliation, a national bankruptcy, a new partition of the soil, a maximum of prices, a ruinous load of taxation laid on the rich for the purpose of supporting the poor in idleness.

"Such a system would, in 20 years, have made France as poor and as barbarous as the France of Carlovingians. Happily, the danger was averted and now there is a despotism, a silent tribune, an enslaved press; liberty is gone, but civilization has been saved. I have not the smallest doubt that if we had a purely democratic government here, the effect would be the same. Either the poor would plunder the rich, and civilization would perish, or order and prosperity would be saved by a strong military government, and liberty would perish.

* * *

"You may think that your country enjoys an exemption from these evils. I will frankly own that I am of a very different opinion. Your fate I believe to be certain, though it is deferred by a physical cause. As long as you have a boundless extent of fertile and unoccupied land, your laboring population will be far more at ease than the laboring population of the Old World, and while this is the case the Jeffersonian policy may continue to exist without causing any fatal calamity. But the time will come when New England will be as quickly populated as Old England. Wages will be as low and will fluctuate as much with you as with us * * * Hundreds of thousands of artisans will assuredly be sometimes out of work * * * Distress everywhere makes the laborer mutinous and discontented and inclines him to listen with eagerness to agitators * * *

"In bad years there is plenty of grumbling here and sometimes a little rioting. But it matters little, for here the sufferers are not the rulers. The supreme power is in the hands of a class * * * deeply interested in the security of property and the maintenance of order. Accordingly, the malcontents are firmly, yet gently, restrained. The bad time is got over without robbing the wealthy to relieve the indigent * * *

"Through such times the United States will have to pass, in the course of the next century, if not of this. How will you pass through them? I heartily wish you a good deliverance, but my reason and my wishes are at war, and I can not help foreboding the worst. It is quite plain that your Government will never be able to restrain a distressed and discontented majority. For with you the majority is the Government and has the rich, who are always a minority, absolutely at its mercy. The day will come when * * * a multitude of people, none of whom has had more than half a breakfast, or expects to have more than half a dinner, will choose the legislature. Is it possible to doubt what sort of legislature will be chosen? On one side is a statesman preaching patience, respect for vested interests, a strict observance of public faith. On the other is a demagogue ranting about tyranny of capitalists * * *

* * *

"I seriously apprehend that you will, in some such season of adversity as I have described, do things which will prevent prosperity from returning; that you will act like people in a year of scarcity, devour all the seedcorn and thus make the next year not of scarity, but of absolute distress. The distress will produce fresh spoliation. There is nothing to stay you. Your constitution is all sail and no anchor. As I said before, when society has entered on this downward progress, either civilization or liberty must perish. Either some Caesar or Napoleon will seize the reins of a government with a strong hand, or your Republic will be as fearfully plundered and laid waste by barbarians in the twentieth century as the Roman Empire was in the fifth—with this difference, that the Huns and Vandals who ravaged the Roman Empire came from without, and that your Huns and Vandals will have been engendered within your own country by your own institutions. * * *"

* * *

"Well, well," as Reggie Fortune would say, "it may be." Interesting it certainly is. Certainly, also, Mr. Noon and his informants are sincere believers in the authenticity of the letter. But, for our part, we should like to see the original before committing ourselves upon that point. And we still have some hopes for America's future.

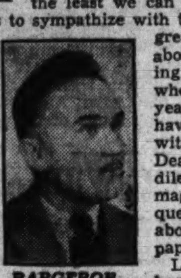
The Great Dilemma.

THE Democrats have done so much for all of us that I think the least we can do in return is to sympathize with them in their great dilemma about supporting progressives who are up this year and who have gone along with the New Deal. It is a dilemma of rare magnitude. Frequently we read about it in the papers.



BARGERON.

Let's see now, how does it go? There is Senator Hiram Johnson's case which is so easily disposed of because the Democrats in California have decided not to put up a candidate of their own. Ah, but it is quite different in the cases of Senator La Follette and Senator Cutting. Both are New Dealers, more enthusiastically so than many Democrats. They supported Mr. Roosevelt in the campaign and his Administration has been theirs. They are friends.

* * * *

But what to do about supporting them in their campaigns this year? In both Wisconsin and New Mexico Democrats are insisting upon running, all the efforts of the Administration to get them to keep quiet being unavailing. What a problem it presents to the Administration! Shall it go to the support of men being opposed by candidates of the Democratic party? That would be a little unusual, of course. Yet the Administration would certainly like to see Senators La Follette and Cutting retain their places.

Our hearts should go out to the Administration on this; we should be unstinted in our commiserating grief. It just seems like there isn't any compensation for the good. For an Administration that has been so frank and earnest to run into a problem like this makes one wonder about the justice of things. It doesn't seem fair.

The fact of the matter is, of course, that it is not much of a problem for the Administration. It seems to be dealing with it most effectively.

What it is doing is crucifying the Democratic candidates before they start. Every now and then the President or some of his aids confide in the newspaper boys that they are certainly up against a problem in the matter of Messrs. Cutting and La Follette. Yes sir, a real problem and one you boys will easily understand.

The problem you boys see is this: There is no doubt that we want Messrs. Cutting and La Follette returned, but whether we will be able to support them against the Democratic candidate is another matter. You understand. It's embarrassing, it really is.

* * * *

And the newspaper boys go out and innocently write that the President unmistakably wants the reelection of Messrs. Cutting and La Follette, but because of the embarrassment of supporting them against Democrats he hasn't decided just what course he will pursue.

He is already pursuing the course.

If there is any newspaper reader in Wisconsin of New Mexico now who doesn't know that the President would prefer Cutting and La Follette to Democrats he must be very dumb, indeed. This being the case it would seem that the President has already done his job. There is nothing left for him to do.

I don't suppose he would be expected even in the case of direct support to go out to Wisconsin and New Mexico and campaign for the gentlemen. He would hardly under any circumstances go further than make his preference known.

This he has already done. And if after what he has done there are still men in Wisconsin and New Mexico who insist upon running as Democratic candidates they are very hardy men. What they perhaps haven't realized is, that the President has counted them out, to the extent that his influence prevails, before they even get into the race.

Mrs. O. M. Riger Funeral Is Held

Westernport, Md., July 1 (Spl.).—Funeral services for Mrs. Theresa Wilhelmina Rizer, widow of Oliver Mortimer Rizer, who died at her home in Piedmont, W. Va., Friday, were held in St. James Episcopal Church this afternoon with the Rev. R. J. Harkins officiating. Interment was in Philos Cemetery.

Mrs. Rizer, who was 70, was born in Wheeling and was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Charles Huth, who resided in Piedmont for many years. She is survived by five children, Mrs. Albert Clark, of Potsdam, N. Y.; Mrs. Clyde Walton, of Washington; Frank Rizer, of Baltimore, and Harry and Charles Rizer, of Piedmont. She also leaves two sisters and two brothers, Mrs. Annie Schramm, of Piedmont; Mrs. Lena Smith, of Westernport; Charles Huth, of Piedmont, and Ernest Huth, of Cumberland.

Mrs. Rizer was a past supreme representative of the Pythian Sisters of West Virginia, having, with the aid of Mrs. Levina Haverfield, of Martinsburg, instituted 30 years ago Calanthe Temple, No. 8, of Piedmont, and Olive Temple, No. 59, of Keyser. She was the second grand chief of West Virginia.

In Judgeship Race.

Westminster, Md., July 1 (Spl.).—J. Albert Mitten, Westminster, has announced his candidacy for judge of the orphans' court of Carroll County in the Republican primaries.

Martinsburg Man Buried.

Chaco's War Drags On After 56 Years

President Hayes' Arbitration Failed to Please, So Bolivia and Paraguay Keep Spilling Blood; Commission Explains Fight.

By Lothrop Stoddard

(Special Correspondent of The Post)

WE usually assume that wars spring from profoundly vital causes. That may be true in most cases, but the present death-grapple between Bolivia and Paraguay in the Chaco seems to have been due mainly to chance and drift. A controversy at first largely academic was left unsettled. Gradually it became embittered, was complicated by new material stakes, aroused popular passions, and finally exploded into war. An excellent instance of the homely adage about "a stitch in time!"

The Chaco is (or, until recently, was) a vast wilderness lying in the heart of the South American continent. Much of it is barren waste. Other portions are grassland, swamp and jungle. Its original inhabitants were nomadic Indian tribes.

In Spanish days, the Chaco was neglected and almost unexplored. When Spain's colonial empire gave place to a series of independent republics, more than a century ago, the Chaco was claimed by Argentina, Bolivia and Paraguay. But these conflicting claims were not pressed vigorously at the start, because none of the claimants was particularly interested in an unknown region then considered almost worthless.

At length, Argentine and Paraguay submitted their rival claims to arbitration, the arbiter being none other than the then President of the United States, Rutherford B. Hayes. In 1878, President Hayes assigned to Paraguay the southeastern corner of the Chaco, where it comes down in a broad wedge to the confluence of the Paraguay and Pilcomayo Rivers. So far as Argentina and Paraguay were concerned, the trouble was over.

Then Paraguay and Bolivia Start Their Long Struggle.

AS BETWEEN Paraguay and Bolivia, however, trouble had only started. Bolivia claimed the whole Chaco, including the region assigned Paraguay by the Hayes award. But Bolivia had never occupied or controlled the Chaco, which ran right up to the Paraguay River just across from the Republic of Paraguay's chief cities, including the capital. Still, at this time Bolivia was not vitally concerned about the Chaco, because the settled part of Bolivia lies far to the westward in the Andean plateaus above the Pacific Ocean. So about all Bolivia did for the moment was to reassert her historic claims and insist that they were not affected by the Hayes arbitration between Paraguay and Argentina, to which Bolivia had not been a party.

Soon after this, however, Bolivia got mixed up in a war between Chile and Peru, on the latter's side. Chile beat both countries and Bolivia lost her frontage on the Pacific. Become thus a landlocked country, Bolivia looked eastward and revived her claims to a region which would give her access to the Atlantic Ocean, the Paraguay River being navigable for ships of considerable size. The Chaco had thus become a "live" issue.

It got steadily livelier as time went on. Paraguay had begun to develop the Chaco from her end; or, rather, foreign capital went into the Chaco to develop it under Paraguayan auspices. The Chaco jungles are filled with quebracho wood, a valuable source of tannin. This and other projects gave Paraguay a sizeable stake in a formerly worthless region.

While Paraguay was thus penetrating the Chaco from the east, Bolivia was entering it from the west, likewise mainly through the medium of foreign capital. Finally, traces of oil were discovered in the Chaco, thereby investing it with alluring possibilities.

Writers in Both Nations Add Fuel to the Flames.

BY now, public opinion in Bolivia and Paraguay was taking a keen interest in the interminable dispute. In both countries, controversial books were published, magazine articles were written, biting editorials were penned—and foreign interests did their propaganda bit. Under these incitements, popular passions rose, politicians talked about the national honor, and generals urged preparedness for grave eventualities. In short, war-clouds loomed on the Chaco horizon.

The sharpening crisis between Bolivia and Paraguay made their neighbors highly uneasy. So diplomacy took a hand. First, South American governments tried to frame a compromise; then Pan-American good offices were enlisted, with the United States taking a prominent part therein.

All in vain. Some bloody "incidents" between Bolivian and Paraguayan patrols in the Chaco were adjusted and an outbreak was postponed. But at length the inevitable happened. In June, 1932, heavy fighting broke out. Both Bolivia and Paraguay mobilized their armies, and for two long years war has raged with ever-increasing ferocity.

In the spring of 1933, the League of Nations came actively into the picture. Of course, the league had followed the struggle closely from the start, especially since both Bolivia and Paraguay were members. But neither nation had brought the controversy before the league under the covenant; in fact, for the first year of fighting there was no declaration of war. Also, the league council hesitated to take action while Pan-American diplomatic efforts were going on.

In May, 1933, Paraguay formally declared war on Bolivia and the latter promptly protested to the League Council under the terms of the Covenant. Also, it had become evident that Pan-American peace efforts were futile. The Council of the League, therefore, dispatchd a commission to the scene of hostilities, much as the Lytton Commission was sent to Manchuria. This commission spent several months investigating the situation and trying to get the combatants to stop fighting and have the dispute adjudicated. The commission's official report, copies of which have just reached Washington, gives a most illuminating survey both of the problem itself and of the methods employed by the league to stop a war in mid-course.

Commission Fails to Halt War, but It Has a Plan.

THE commission did not succeed in stopping the war, but it claims to have clarified the issues by consulting with both the combatants, and to have framed a draft treaty which, if signed by Bolivia and Paraguay, would not only avert the horrors of further warfare but also would lay the foundations for a mutually honorable and equitable settlement.

Briefly summarized, the treaty would ensure immediate cessation of hostilities and mutual demobilization. The Chaco would be provisionally divided into two zones roughly corresponding to the present military occupations. These zones would be policed by Bolivia and Paraguay respectively, with a narrow neutral strip between. The controversy itself would be referred to the World Court. While both litigants would retain the right to present their maximum claims, the draft treaty provides that, "in a spirit of conciliation," Bolivia would modify her uncompromising attitude regarding the portion of the Chaco awarded Paraguay by the Hayes arbitration, while Paraguay in turn would agree to be more accommodating in her claims on the extreme north of the Chaco; claims which, if successfully upheld, would shut Bolivia off from any outlet on the Paraguay River and hence would debar her from access to the sea.

In its summary the commission's report stresses the fact that, by reason of the clarification of issues, "the Chaco conflict, the persistence of which had gradually created a sense of discouragement, as if it had been an irremediable catastrophe, could be settled by conciliation and law. The replies from the two governments have shown that the draft treaty represents an equitable proposal, carefully devised in all its parts for the purpose of finding the exact point at which, with a little will to peace," diametrically opposite theses and aspirations could be made to meet, and that any additional concessions to the demands of either party could only have increased the divergence between them.

As we know, the "little will to peace" has not materialized. War passions are still rampant in both Bolivia and Paraguay, so the war itself continues—perhaps to mutual ruin and bankruptcy. Yet the commission's report has undoubtedly affected world opinion. It certainly influenced this country to impose its embargo upon further sales of war materials to the fighting nations. At least, everybody knows, or can know, clearly what the war is about.

Maryland Wheat Production Good

Reports Reveal Yield of 30 Bushels an Acre.

Hagerstown, Md., July 1 (Spl.).—Bearing out predictions that the wheat crop here would be larger than at first anticipated, farmers, who started harvesting last week, reported yields averaging 30 to 35 bushels an acre.

The corn crop in western Maryland also is promising, but rain will be needed, within the next week, farmers report.

The present hot weather was declared by farmers to be ideal for harvesting of wheat, as it ripened quickly, and the dry weather likewise was a benefit.

3 Injured, Burned In Railroad Blast

Gasoline Motor Explodes on Norfolk & Western.

Charles Town, W. Va., July 1.—Three men were injured, two seriously and one probbaly fatally, when a railway gasoline motor car they were riding exploded on the Norfolk & Western tracks here today. They were rushed to the Charles Town General Hospital.

Charles Hite, of Antietam, Md., 45, the most seriously injured, suffered cuts, severe burns and possible internal injuries. S. G. Darr, 66, of Shenandoah Junction, was pinned beneath the car after the explosion with his clothes afire. He was released by George K. Norman, 45, of Hagerstown, Md., who extinguished the flames only after Darr had been seriously burned. Darr is in a critical condition. Norman was burned about the hands, in addition to suffering severe lacerations in aiding his coworkers.

The men were testing switches when the accident occurred.

Services for Mr. Caricofe Held at Bridgewater

Bridgewater, Va., July 1 (Spl.).—Funeral services for Andrew J. Caricofe, 55, well-known farmer of the Spring Creek community, who died Friday, were held here this afternoon, with the Rev. A. S. Thomas officiating.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Mollie Hisey Caricofe; six children, Mrs. Grace Hunter, of Marshall, Va.; Blanche, Christine, Wade and William, at home; one sister, Mrs. Arthur Wenger, of Spring Creek; two brothers, D. A. Caricofe, Washington, D. C., and W. L. Caricofe, of Hopewell.

Fraternity Head Named.

Hagerstown, Md., July 1 (Spl.).—Peregrin Wroth 3d, son of Dr. Peregrin Wroth, jr., of Hagerstown, a senior this fall at Brown University, has been elected president of the Phi Gamma Delta Fraternity at that university.

Hot Weather Fiction

HERE'S a tale to take your mind off the mercury bubbling quietly at the top of the thermometer. It's about a mild little English school teacher, shy as a trout and equal to three Einsteins in mathematical power, who hits on an invention to shake the world. By some gadget or other he can send out a beam which de-magnetizes every magnet.

THEO. HALL.

You think that's small potatoes? Well, magnets are at the heart of all street cars, buses, automobiles, electric trains, telephones, airplanes, generating stations, transformers, and railroad signals. In other words, our professor can just about say "yes" or "no" to the whole industrial system.

Luckily, he has ideals. The race for armaments sickens him. So he pens a little note to the London Times to the effect that England will jolly well quick decide to do something better with munitions money, or else—

What the professor does, and the absolute hay his invention makes of London will keep your thumbs fumbling with C. S. Forester's "The Peacemaker" (Little Brown, $2) throughout an evening. A crackajack yarn!

If you get the Forester taste, you might go back to his historical thriller about a 6,000-pound bronze cannon in the Spanish Peninsular wars against Napoleon. It's called "The Gun," same publisher and price.

But there's plenty of fiction this season for all tastes. Are you a Janeite—that is, a Jane Austen idolator? Not unlike her pastiches of provincial life is a new novel by Somerset Maugham's niece, Kate Mary Bruce. "Duck's Back" (John Day, $2.50) tells about a quite horridly spoilt American girl who messes up the lives of a sober British family. She herself gets along as pretty as you please. The tale is remarkably well written. A note printed behind the title page informs us, with no other point but snootiness, that Mrs. Bruce's London house (duly street-numbered) once belonged to a mistress of Charles II. While I'm speaking of such intrusions upon the text of a book, I'd like to go on record with thumbs down for a habit certain publishers (notably Doubleday Doran) have of printing blurb material on the leaf before the title page. It's as annoying, and out of place, as cracker crumbs in bed.

But to our muttons. Behind the provoking title—"Mice for Amusement" (Dutton, $2)—you will find a tale of English high society decked out in the most popular manner with lush and lively incidents. Baroness von Hutten, who once rang the bell with "Pam" to the tune of 570,000 copies, knows her audience.

For a right-about-face in setting and mood, try George Dixon Snell III's "The Great Adam" (Caxton Printers, $2.50). It's a powerfully naturalistic account of the rise to fortune of a small-town Western banker. From the same Idaho press comes Nancy Noon Kendall's "The New House" ($2.50), which tells of a boy on the Northwest Coast who grows up to revolt against his coddling and who founds a world of his own among an isolated colony of picturesque Finns. A good story, but told in a "literary" manner. The namesake of this press, by the way, must be turning over in his grave at the firm's typographical sense.

Seven heroines, the Hart sisters, give a running start to Inez Haynes (Mrs. Will) Irwin's "Strange Harvest" (Bobbs Merrill, $2.50). Mrs. Irwin's skill keeps up the momentum. Following these women through their long and diverse lives (set in Massachusetts in the Victorian era), we arrive to the conclusion which Julia Ward Howe once expressed in an age-muted but confident voice: "Life is like a cup of coffee—the sugar is all at the bottom!"

Highly romantic and pleasingly witty is G. M. Attenborough's "Honeymoon House" (Stokes, $2). It's England again, with ladies and duchesses, canons and Oxford undergraduates—all most innocuously pleasant. "Until I Close My Eyes" (Ballou, $2), by Allen R. Taft, dilates upon the problem of Jewish-Gentile marriage with great seriousness and a rather over-intense drama. It probably won't hold you until we have a cool spell. But at least it offers a foot-down on the terra firma of Brooklyn before we once again take off romantic England in the pages of Alice Grant Rosman's "Somebody Must" (Minton Balch, $2). Here's all sweetness and good works. "Somebody Must" may be interpreted as "somebody must lend a hand to the old folks." For Kay Flete, just out of an Oxford woman's college, finds her father and mother at sixes and sevens. She settles down to straighten things out, and, oh yes, she finds romance. Very dilute.

After such a diet, blessed are the "Westerns." In "Smugglers' Ranch" (Macrae Smith, $2), Charles H. Snow tells about a sheriff who is going to lose the next election hands down unless he brings in, dead or alive, one Patricio O'Higgins. That marvelous sobriquet covers a distinctly bad hombre, and the resulting action proves quite satisfying. Turning to the great Northwest, we find that the odd topic of horse racing plays a part in Ridgwell Cullum's "The Flaming Wilderness" (Lippincott, $2). A half-breed orphan falls in love with his benefactor's daughter. She has other ideas.

Rather Mild as "Westerns" Go.

The real prize on today's list, for a reason soon to be obvious, is William Byron Mowery's "Challenge of the North" (Little Brown, $2). To be sure, it's a very grand yarn about an adventurous prospector and his bride who fly a plane over the north country in an effort to protect their gold mine against the big "interests." But I commend to you the exquisite pleasure, these days, of reading snowdrifts, blizzards and frozen tundra.

The Once Over

Probation for Lawyers.

At a meeting of the joint conference on legal education in New York recently it was proposed that the bar be purged of discreditable lawyers by requiring all young attorneys to serve two years "on probation."

* * * *

The difficulty about this plan is that a young lawyer gets so few cases during his first two years he would have to be judged entirely by his conduct in the face of hunger.

* * * *

But two years are hardly enough to judge a young barrister in these days when the profession is so overcrowded that the only way he can get into court is to pay somebody to sue him.

* * * *

Luther Blank: We favor giving this young man a full membership. In common with thousands of other young lawyers he had so little business during his first two years that your committee could judge him only by his general appearance asleep in a chair and his reaction to money. His hysteria when shown a dollar by a committeeman disguised as a client was so mild that we think he will be a credit to the bar.

* * * *

John Smith: We don't know what to say about this young man. His case is a most baffling one. After waiting 18 months for a case, he finally got a client who offered him $5,000 to represent him in a fraud case. Mr. Smith refused to take the case until he first ascertained whether the client was a crook or not. Ethically he rates 100 per cent but we are afraid he would embarrass the older and bigger attorneys.

* * * *

Charles Jones: We asked the young man three questions:

1. Would you deliberately misrepresent the facts to a court of law?
2. Would you sacrifice your moral principles for money?
3. If a client offered you a retainer of $50,000, would you be concerned about the merit of his case?

The young man skipped the first two questions and answered the third thusly: Yes, but for $60,000 I would overlook everything.

We favor another two years' probation at least.

* * * *

Edward Brown: This man opened an office exactly two years ago on probation. We visited him this week and found him so emaciated he weighed less than 100 pounds. We think this prima facie evidence of superior honesty as a practicing attorney, and favor full membership and a plate of hot soup.

Handicapped.

During the British open a caddy employed by Gene Sarazen quit in the midst of play, complaining that the bag of clubs was too heavy. If this idea spreads to America a lot of beginners at golf are going to have to learn the game with nothing in excess of 50 or 60 implements.

Mr. Pecora is to head the board to control the stock exchange under the new rules. How about abandoning the custom of opening the market with a gong and opening it with an "Answer yes or no!"

1934 Tax Rate Is Unchanged

$1 Charge Is Maintained in Carroll County as State Cuts.

Westminster, Md., July 1 (Spl.). A tax rate of $1 on the $100, the same as last year, was announced yesterday by the Carroll County commissioners. The commissioners said, however, that a reduction of 3 cents had been effected in the State tax rate, making the new tax 22 cents.

The $1 tax rate is expected to produce total receipts for the county of $392,933.15, which is slightly lower than last year owing to depreciation of stocks and bonds.

The largest slash made in this year's budget was in appropriations for the board of education which were reduced from $208,000 to $199,000. A budget calling for $200,000 was submitted to the commissioners by the school board.

Other appropriations which show a reduction in this year's budget include interest on outstanding obligations and commissioner's salaries. Only $15,000 was levied for interest on road bonds this year as compared with $27,000 in 1933, while commissioner's salaries have been reduced from $3,000 to $2,500.

The only increase contained in the budget was an additional amount of $1,000 appropriated to the Children's Aid Society.

Birds Learn Only When They Must Fly or Go Bump

By Robert Quillen

The young people who deserve pity are not those who begin life in poverty, but the victims of parental folly who are weakened by too much coddling.

One of these, typical of his kind, recently got into newspaper headlines by way of the divorce court. His wife quit him because his inordinate selfishness required more humoring and petting than any self-respecting woman could supply.

He was not a weakling by nature. He began life with no handicap except the unwise love of his parents.

They would not permit him to grow up. Having no other children to share their affection, they gave their whole attention to the business of spoiling him.

They protected him from rough children and rough weather. They never permitted him to make a decision. They kept him as dependent as an unweaned calf.

Unfortunately, he developed a "voice" and sang often in church, where the too-generous praise of motherly women completed his undoing. He purred like a cat when they stroked him with a compliment.

When he married and escaped the parental roof at the age of 30, he was no more self-reliant than a normal boy of 12. Self-centered, sensitive, soft, conceited and easily alarmed, he was a typical "sissy."

In some ways, perhaps, he is an exception; but every youngster who is petted and shielded and coddled from adolescence to maturity retains in some measure the characteristics of a spoiled infant.

It is human nature to accept the softest cushion available and make no more effort than circumstance requires, and few ever learn to stand alone while they have opportunity to lean.

It isn't a kindness to make life easy for Junior. It is cruelty. At best it robs him of the world's respect; at the worst it dooms him to failure and shame.

Where the only rule is root hog or die, the kindest parents are those who teach Junior the art of rooting.

Daily Talk About Books and Authors

July.

This was originally the fifth month of the year and was named by the Roman Quintilis. But in later years they changed the name in honor of Julius Caeser, who was born in this month, and the new name became generally adopted about the time of his death, 44 B. C. The Anglo-Saxons called it the haymonth; but if the Middle West does not get more rain pretty soon, there will not be any hay in July, 1934.

John Adams thought the Second of July was going to be the National holiday in future years; on July 3, 1776, he wrote to his wife.

"Yesterday the greatest question was decided which ever was debated in America; and a greater perhaps never was, nor will be, decided among men. A resolution was passed without one dissenting colony, that those United Colonies are, and of right ought to be, free and independent States. . .

"The second day of July, 1776, will be the most memorable epoch in the history of America. I am apt to believe that it will be celebrated by succeeding generations as the great anniversary festival. It ought to be commemorated as the day of deliverance, by solemn acts of devotion to God Almighty. It ought to be solemnized with pomp and parade, with shows, games, sports, guns, bells, bonfires, and illuminations, from one end of this continent to the other, from this time foward for evermore."

On July 2, 1881, President James A. Garfield, was shot at the railway station in Washington, by an unbalanced assassin named Charles J. Guiteau. The President was going to attend the commencement exercises of Williams College, where he was graduated. He was talking on the platform with the Secretary of State, James G. Blaine, when Guiteau fired two shots into his back. He died on September 19. His son retired this year from the Presidency of Williams.

The fact that most children love December more than July was well expressed by the poet, W. M. Praed.

"I remember, I remember,
How my childhood fleeted by—
The mirth of its December,
And the warmth of its July."

Premier Silent On Resignation In Girl Case

Edmonton, Alberta, July 1 (AP).—Premier J. E. Brownlee of Alberta tonight refused to comment on reports he will resign following the verdict of a Supreme Court jury which awarded $10,000 damages to Vivian MacMillan, 22-year-old stenographer who charged he seduced her.

It was reported that members of the government will hold an emergency meeting to consider the verdict. The premier's resignation would carry with it resignations of all members of his cabinet. Lieut. Gov. W. L. Walsh also refused to comment.

The jury of six upheld Miss MacMillan's claim in a verdict late last night after almost five hours of deliberation. She was awarded $10,000 and her father, Allan MacMillan, $5,000.

Justice W. C. Ives, presiding, said he disagreed sharply with the verdict and reserved his decision, thereby holding up conclusion of the action.

Before the case went to the jury Premier Brownlee dropped his counter-accusations of conspiracy against the girl and John Caldwell, young medical student who once proposed marriage to her. Counsel for the premier said Brownlee sought merely to "vindicate his honor," and that no witnesses would be presented to substantiate his charges.

Miss MacMillan testified she had been induced to come to Edmonton from her home town of Edson, Alberta, and that Brownlee had obtained a position for her in the office of the provincial government.

Hawaiian Air Mail Is Planned by U.S.

Bids to Be Advertised for in Next Few Days.

Postmaster General James A. Farley announced yesterday that the Postoffice Department plans to inaugurate air-mail service in the Hawaiian Islands. Establishment depends on whether the department receives what it considers reasonable bids.

This proposed service will link the four large islands of the group, Hawaii, Oahu, Kauai and Maui, and will embrace the principal cities of each, thereby serving 325,000 residents.

Advertisements for bids will be issued within the next few days to all air lines in the United States and on the Hawaiian Islands. Amphibians will be required. Contracts will be let for one year.

This proposed service will embrace a mileage of 333 miles.

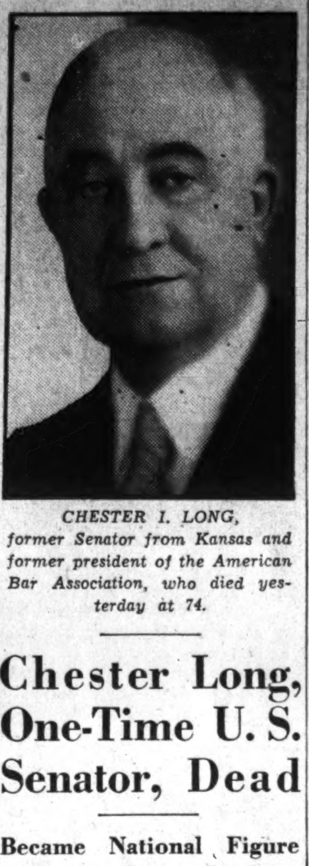
Former Senator Dies



CHESTER I. LONG, former Senator from Kansas and former president of the American Bar Association, who died yesterday at 74.

Chester Long, One-Time U. S. Senator, Dead

Death came suddenly to the 74-year-old Republican hard-money stalwart, following a blood transfusion performed in treatment of a kidney ailment last week. It occurred within a week of the passing of another widely known legislator and his one-time law associate, former Senator Charles Thomas, of Colorado.

Senator Long, who had been practicing law in the Capital since 1929 as senior member of the firm of Long, Chamberlain & Nyte, now Long, St. Lewis & Nyte, had been suffering from kidney trouble for nearly five months.

Leads Bar Activities.

For years and almost to the moment of his death he was one of the leading spirits of the American Bar Association. He was its president in 1925 and 1926, had served on the executive committee, and at his death was a member of the board of editors.

Senator Long's political career began with his election to the Kansas Legislature in 1889. There he served until 1893. Two years later he was elected to the Fifty-fourth Congress to represent the Seventh Kansas District in the House on a sound money platform.

Then began a series of nip-and-tuck battles for the House seat with Kansas' famed "Sockless" Jerry Simpson, Bryan silverite. The tide of contest alternately favored one candidate and the other. Long lost to Simpson in the race for the Fifty-fifth Congress. He was returned to the Fifty-fifth and again to the Fifty-sixth.

Born in Pennsylvania.

A native of Perry County, Pa., his father, Abraham G. Long, moved the family into Kansas when the former Senator was 5 years old.

Mrs. Long, well known in Congressional social circles, died in 1919. Surviving him are three daughters, Mrs. Harry F. Gee, jr., of Atlanta, Ga., and Mrs. W. E. Stanley and Mrs. Roger S. Hurd, both of Wichita, Kans.

The body will be sent to Wichita probably today for services there.

Martinsburg Man Injured by Binder

Farmer Crushed as Plane Frightens Horses.

Martinsburg, W. Va., July 1 (Spl.). Frightened by the noise of an airplane a team of horses hitched to a wheat binder bolted while drawing the machine to a farm this morning, one of them throwing William Weidman, 33, riding the horse, to the ground, dragging him some distance and crushing him under the binder.

He is in a local hospital with injuries which are believed will prove fatal. He is suffering from internal injuries, a broken leg, and a possible skull fracture.

A brother, Lemuel, who was riding the binder, jumped from his seat and escaped injury.

Two Are Killed, Many Injured By Automobiles

Woman Pedestrian Dies After Being Hit; Crash Fatal to Man.

Two dead and several persons injured represented yesterday's traffic toll.

Mrs. Mary Brennah, 59, of 1224 B street southeast, died in Casualty Hospital several hours after she was knocked down by an automobile at Eleventh and B streets southeast.

Robert L. Swann, 24, of Issue, Md., injured Saturday when his auto hit a fallen telephone pole near Tompkinsville, Md., died in Providence Hospital.

Police said that Mrs. Brennah was crossing Eleventh street at the crosswalk when struck by the auto of Irving C. Eshleman, 34, of the 600 block of E street northeast. She was dragged several feet before Eshleman could stop, witnesses reported. The woman suffered a fractured leg, mangled arm, fractured skull and internal injuries. Eshleman was charged with reckless driving.

Swann was brought to Washington by a motorist and treated for a fractured skull. Police said his auto hit a telephone pole, felled by Saturday's heavy windstorm.

Miss Frances Fernald, 40, of 1514 Columbia road northwest, was reported in a critical condition at Emergency Hospital. She was struck by a Capital Transit street car yesterday near Sixteenth and H streets northwest. Physicians said she received a possible fractured skull, body bruises and internal injuries.

William E. Matthews, of the 200 block of Twelfth street northeast, motorman, was not held.

Two young women were slightly injured in a crash near Marlboro, Md. Miss Janey Sessons, 21, of the Park Lane Apartments, and Miss Jeanette Scanlon, 23, of 236 Thirteenth street northeast, were brought to Gallinger Hospital by a motorist.

Miss Sessons received lacerations to the head and a bruised right shoulder. Miss Scanlon suffered a fractured right arm and lacerations. Samuel Levine, of the 2800 block of Thirty-third street southeast, driver of the machine, escaped hurts. The car ran from the highway and struck a fence, police reported.

Double Wedding's Last Half Comes Off on Schedule

Richmond, July 1 (AP).—The other half of a double wedding that didn't come off was held in St. Peter's Church here yesterday when Irma Lee Reid became Mrs. John Herbert Rose. Her sister, Charlott, 18, who was to have married a Richmond man at the same time, did not attend. She is in Atlantic City, N. J., the bride of Don Carlos, orchestra leader.

Charlotte and her romantically named spouse were married Friday after the girl suddenly left Richmond. For several days she was missing. Police in Washington and nearby cities were asked to watch for her. Then her mother, Mrs. William L. Blassenahm, located Charlotte, who said she was working at the resort and didn't intend to return to Richmond. Later came word she and the orchestra leader were married.

Morrison to Deliver Harrisonburg Address

Harrisonburg, Va., July 1 (Spl.). Former Mayor John W. Morrison will make the Fourth of July address at a local theater Wednesday morning.

Children of the city and county will march in a parade, carrying American flags, and assemble at the theater. The chamber of commerce, American Legion and Veterans of Foreign Wars are participating in the local observance of Independence Day. The Harrisonburg Boys Band will lead the procession.

Norfolk Woman Choked And Robbed of Purse

Police were furnished at once with a good description of the thief, given by Mrs. Moler to Detectives J. L. Stanley and H. L. Dickens. The purse contained $10 in cash, two rings, and personal articles, Mrs. Moler reported.

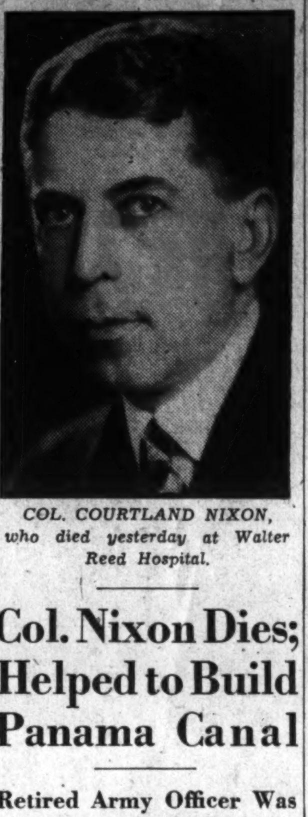
Retired Officer Dies



COL. COURTLAND NIXON, who died yesterday at Walter Reed Hospital.

Col. Nixon Dies; Helped to Build Panama Canal

Retired Army Officer Was Head of Georgetown Boys Club.

Col. Courtland Nixon, a resident of Washington for nine years, president of the Georgetown Boys Club and active in other philanthropic work, died at Walter Reed Hospital yesterday. He had been ill more than a year.

Col. Nixon was the son of Col. and Mrs. John B. Nixon and was born at Fort Brown, Tex. He was graduated from Princeton University as a civil engineer in 1895. He entered the Army as a second lieutenant during the Spanish-American War and saw service in Cuba and the Philippines. During the construction of the Panama Canal, he was detailed with the Isthmus Canal Commissioners, under Gen. Goethals. Under the bill passed by Congress, he retired at will, along with other officers who were given the privilege as a reward for their services on the Canal Zone at that time. He went to France as division quartermaster with the Eighty-Third Division and afterward was appointed division quartermaster of the Second Army.

Col. Nixon was formerly president of the Princeton Alumni Association of Washington and was a member of the society of the American Civil Engineers, the Princeton Club of New York, University Club of Denver, the Army and Navy Country Club, the Army and Navy Club of Washington and the Society of the Carribou.

Col. Nixon is survived by his widow, Julia Campbell Nixon, and a daughter, Margaret.

Potato Purchasing By U. S. to Begin

Norfolk - Elizabeth City Area to Be Relieved.

Norfolk, Va., July 1 (Spl.).—Purchase of potatoes in carload lots by the Government to relieve the impending surplus in the marketing of the present crop is expected to begin here early this week as a result of the meeting Friday night, when growers and shippers in the Norfolk-Elizabeth City district unanimously accepted the marketing agreement of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration.

Potato shippers, expecting the arrival of a representative of the Federal Crop Surplus Bureau here today, have been informed an initial purchase of 225 carloads will be made from the Norfolk supply either tomorrow or Tuesday. There are about 2,000 carloads of potatoes awaiting shipment here.

Other purchases will be made simultaneously from the principal potato markets in other States where the spring crop is now ready for movement. The Government has indicated that 2,000 carloads will be purchased to relieve the market, and it is believed that further assistance may be given to assure a stable price.

Motor Registration Decreases in U. S.

1933 Figures 1.2 Per Cent Less Than 1932.

Motor vehicle registration in the United States decreased 1.2 per cent in 1933 from the 1932 total, the Bureau of Public Roads, Department of Agriculture, reported yesterday.

The registration was 23,827,290, divided as follows: Passenger vehicles, 20,600,543; trucks, 3,226,747; trailers, 472,789; motorcycles, 91,987.

Considering the trend of motor vehicle registration from the peak of 26,545,281 in 1930, the declines in total registrations have been 2.8 per cent in 1931, 6.6 per cent in 1932, and 1.2 per cent in 1933. Truck registration also declined in 1931 and 1932.

Funds Allocated For Relief Work

Waynesboro, Pa., July 1 (Spl.).—With allocation of $25,000 to Franklin County for relief work projects in July, work will be resumed tomorrow, county headquarters here announced today.

Floyd Chalfont, county administrator, received a telegram yesterday from Eric H. Biddle, State administrator, following a Federal grant of $11,000,000 for Pennsylvania, stating that projects can be continued.

During the past week, 470 men were employed on works division projects. A total of $6,009.19 in wages was paid.

Black Bass Season Opened In Maryland; Conditions Ideal

Baltimore, July 1 (Spl.).—With ideal fishing conditions promised throughout the State, the Maryland black bass fishing season opened today, which also marked the closing of the trout season.

Fishermen are not greatly concerned about the latter circumstance, however. Whenever fly-casters get together, it is generally agreed that the black bass is a far gamer fish than the trout. The perch and crappie season also starts today.

State Conservation Commissioner Swepson Earle has announced that streams throughout Maryland have been stocked with bass, perch and crappie, in anticipation of the rush. He anticipates an active season.

Waters Now Clear.

He has received reports from A. M. Powell, superintendent of the State fish hatchery at Lewistown, that the waters of western Maryland are now clear, after running muddy for several weeks. Conowingo Lake is reported to be full of bass, and the Potomac near Williamsport is said to provide excellent fishing. On the Eastern Shore, lakes and ponds in several counties are reported to be well stocked.

Mr. Earle announced the following distribution of fish by the State hatcheries in the counties:

Baltimore, 1,000 small-mouth in the Patapsco and 200 in Red Run; 2,200 large-mouth in Lake Roland, 50 in the Patapsco, 200 in the Seneca and 100 in Druid Ridge Cemetery Lake.

Carroll, 700 small-mouth in Big Pipe Creek, 260 in Dougle Pipe Creek, 250 in the Patapsco River.

Caroline, 8,000 crappie in Beulah Pond, 10,000 in Langrell's Pond, 6,000 in Deans Pond.

Frederick, 800 small-mouth in Monocacy River, 800 in Toms Creek, 800 in Owens Creek.

Garrett, 1,120 yellow perch in Deep Creek Lake.

Lakes Are Stocked.

Harford, 2,000 small-mouth in Deer creek, 140,000 crappie in Conowingo Lake; 55,970 large-mouth in Conowingo Lake (55,000 being 1 to 1½ inches), 1,960 yellow perch in Conowingo Lake.

Howard, 20,000 crappie in East Branch of the Patuxent River, 500 in Buckeys Pond; 200 large-mouth in East Branch of the Patuxent, 100 in Buckeys Pond, 1,200 in the Patapsco River.

Kent, 500 large-mouth in Higman Pond, 500 in Clothiers Pond; 10,000 crappie in Higman Pond, 8,000 in Clothers Pond.

Montgomery, 570 large-mouth in Little Patuxent River; 15,000 crappie in Little Patuxent River, 9,500 in Seneca Creek.

Queen Annes, 5,400 crappie in Unicorn Lake.

Talbot, 30,000 crappie in Lakeland Lakes; 1,200 large-mouth in Lakeland Lakes.

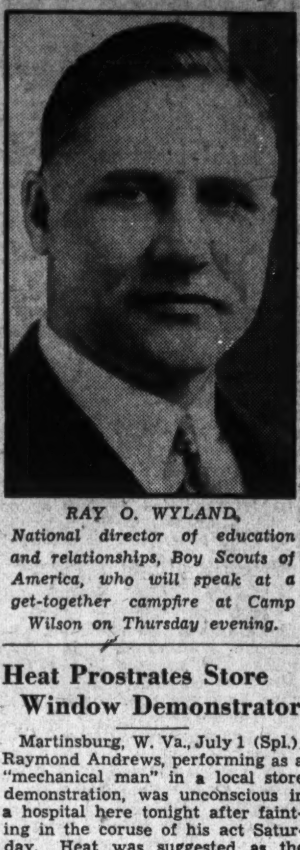
Worcester, 10,000 crappie in Pocomoke River, 15,000 in Big Mills Pond; 1,800 large-mouth in the Pocomoke and 2,000 in Big Mills Pond.

Bright Boys to Receive Fascist Leader Training

Rome, July 1 (AP).—Italian youths showing aptitude for leadership in Fascist affairs this week will start receiving training as "observers" of party leaders.

Under the plan, devised by Premier Mussolini, groups of youths will be assigned to follow and work with regional party secretaries and other officials. The groups will be changed periodically.

To Speak at Camp



RAY O. WYLAND, National director of education and relationships, Boy Scouts of America, who will speak at a get-together campfire at Camp Wilson on Thursday evening.

Heat Prostrates Store Window Demonstrator

Martinsburg, W. Va., July 1 (Spl.). Raymond Andrews, performing as a "mechanical man" in a local store demonstration, was unconscious in a hospital here tonight after fainting in the coruse of his act Saturday. Heat was suggested as the probable cause.

Miss Holliedt Rites Are Set for Today

Widely Known Church Aid Died Here Saturday.

Funeral services for Miss Wilhelmine Dorothy Holliedt, 74, will be held at 2 p. m. today at the S. H. Hines funeral parlors. The Rev. Charles Enders, pastor of Concordia Lutheran Evangelical Church, will conduct the services. The body will be sent to Pittsburgh for burial.

Miss Holliedt, a native of Pittsburgh, but a Washington resident for many years, died Saturday at her home, 4604 Thirteenth street northwest. She had been ill several months. She was an active member of the Ladies' Aid Society and the Mission Study of the Concordia Church.

Mrs. D. L. Williams Dies at Age of 86

Funeral services will be held tomorrow at Lilesville, N. C., for Mrs. Sarah Simons Williams, 86, who died yesterday at the home of her niece, Mrs. Wade H. Allison, 1862 Ingleside terrace northwest.

Born in Lilesville, Mrs. Williams was educated at Ansonville College, near there. She married David Lewis Williams, Lilesville merchant, who died in 1905. For ten years Mrs. Williams had made her home in Washington. Besides Mrs. Allison, she is survived by several nieces and nephews in North Carolina.

Radio Waves and Ripples

LETTER to the editor:

"If you've ever witnessed a Presidential fireside chat broadcast, you won't be interested in this, but if you haven't . . .

"White House oval room . . . the humidity is terrific . . . the scene almost that bad . . . floor carpeted with wires running in all directions . . . amplifiers and battery boxes everywhere . . . microphones in profusion . . . six of different shapes and sizes on the desk from which the President speaks . . . 15 newspaper cameras lined up in a semicircle . . . six sound cameras and numberless Kleig lights . . . 30 or 40 radio, moving picture and newspaper men running in and out, making preliminary arrangements . . . the radio station managers are there, the program directors, the broadcast system's public events representatives, the engineers and control men with duplicate equipment, to guard against mechanical failure, and, yes, three announcers . . . Trout (WJSV) gets his cue to start his introductory announcement at 9:30 p. m.; Smith (WRC-WMAL), 9:30.15, and yours truly (WOL) at 9:30.05. Each of us has continuities of different length, but each has to be timed so that at a given moment all will say, 'Ladies and gentlemen, the President of the United States . . . try this some time . . .

"Trout, Smith and Yours Truly go into an adjoining room, away from the turmoil, and try to make our announcements run out at the proper time. Smith snaps a stop watch and each reads his announcement aloud. But at the finish we don't click; somebody has too many words or the announcement was read too slowly or too fast, and so we try again and, Eureka, we all finish at the same time!

"Someone announces the approach of the President, who is being wheeled into the Oval Room by an attendant. Everybody stands at respectful attention as he comes into the room. A cheery "Hello" and everybody is at ease again. Mr. Roosevelt makes you feel that way. It is now 9:30 p. m. Bob Trout gets his cue . . . then my control man gives me the wink . . . presently Carlton Smith takes up and, believe me, now you are hearing something but you can't understand a thing, because each of us is trying to talk loud enough to keep the other's voice from feeding into the other's microphone—without success . . . Smith moves quietly across the room to an outer office with a copy of the President's speech in his hand . . . Trout sits down behind the microphone and looks bored . . . I'm beginning to get a headache and not an aspirin in sight. . . . The President has concluded his speech and again we have the triple vocalizing of the announcers. . . . Thank goodness that is brief, but it is only the signal for more bedlam.

"The President reaches for a glass of water as engineers swarm around his desk disconnecting and removing microphones preparatory to the taking of pictures. The mikes have CBS, ABS and NBC printed on them, and these networks would like photos showing those letters, but the White House says no. So they are removed. And out of nowhere comes 15 photographers. . . . The President is a good subject, easy to take. . . . Then the sound cameras are shifted into position, the Kleig lights turned on and we realize about this time that this is no place for a harrassed announcer. . . . So we dash out in the general direction of Pennsylvania avenue and a cold glass of something that cheers. As I hungrily gulp this liquid, I begin to realize why the President doesn't give these Fireside Chats oftener. . . . The next time one of these affairs is scheduled, take a box of aspirin with you. . . ."

TED OSTENKAMP.

1. Lee Carol, a contralto, who sounds like a bass and sticks her nose into the microphone in doing it.
2. Irving Ginsberg and another violinist:
3. An accordianist.
4. Three Ramblers, darky harmony and piano.
5. Louis Benson, monologist.
6. Jack Tallon, whispering monologist, with piano.
7. Betty Beauchamp, who is a contralto at age 14; also three guitars.
8. Rock and Rye, comedians, and—
9. Peter Slaven, a tenor.

There was more, of course, but this is all Mr. Allen thought he could use for the opening of WMAL's Washington Airbreaks Saturday night.

PHIL DUEY, who has had a steady job with Leo Reisman's orchestra and N. B. C. since last fall.

Mr. and Mrs. Bart Simmons, bound for the West and a delayed honeymoon, will stop off in Washington long enough to sing a couple of songs, romantic ones, you may be sure, with the Pacemakers, another auto-sponsored show, opening on WRC at 8 o'clock tonight.

Mrs. Simmons is the former Desiree Tabor. She met her husband while they were playing a Schubert show together in 1926. They were married a year ago. In "Music in the Air," "The Laugh Parade" and one of the "Ziegfeld Follies" they were given star roles.

Local talent, including the trumpet soloing of Dana Garett, of the Fox Theater orchestra, will complete the cast.

WJSV has removed Arthur (the Great) Godfrey from its Moon Dial and has replaced him, effective tonight, with Warren Sweeney, an announcer who'd rather play Chopin.

Arthur, say the WJSV minds, has been overworked, Sun Dialing in the morning and Moon Dialing at night, &c.

The program, which for some time has been a catch-all for WJSV evening commercial announcements, has been rescheduled—Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday, 10:30 p. m.

We applied for the job of interviewing Gertrude Niesen, Columbia's blues-singing lass, now playing the Fox. We needed a tonic, we said. But the nomination went to Bob Trout. One should, after all, have an announcer for radio interviews, we suppose. La Niesen and Le Trout . . . WJSV at 10 tonight.

Whitecaps.

WRC—Gladys Swarthout, excerpts from the grand and light operatic works of Mascagni, Friml, Romberg, Straus, 7:30 p. m.; the Pacemakers, Desiree Tabor and Bart Simmons, 8 p. m.; Powhatan Orchestra, 11:30 p. m.

WMAL—National Education Association Convention, Glenn Frank, President University of Chicago, 5 p. m.; Radio Joe celebrates the Fourth with Nelson Goveart and a harmonica, 8 p. m.; N. B. C. composers—Rudy Vallee and the Yankees, Joe Biviano, Gould and Shefter, Lilliam Bucknam, Lucille Manners, George Buehler, 9 p. m.

WJSV—Washington-Philadelphia baseball, 3:30 p. m.; Rosa Ponselle, "I'm Falling in Love with Someone," Herbert; "Marechiare," Tosti, and "Reverie au Clair de Lune," Beethoven-Jackowska, 8 p. m.; Lud Gluskin and Henrietta Schumann, 8:30 p. m.

Stevedore Dies Of Riot Wounds

Seattle, Wash., July 1 (AP).—Shelby S. Daffron, Seattle longshoreman, died today of bullet wounds suffered when 100 striking seamen and stevedores stormed the Point Wells docks of the Standard Oil Co. at Richmond Beach last night.

Several others, including dock guards, were injured in the disturbance.

Charles Denny, prosecuting attorney of Snohomish County, in which Richmond Beach is located, said he planned to go to the scene of the riot to investigate the disturbance, the cause of which was not exactly clear.

Meanwhile the strike, which began May 9, continued at all Pacific Coast ports. A board appointed by President Roosevelt is attempting to conciliate differences between the 25,000 strikers and their employers. Operation of "hiring halls," where longshoremen are employed and assigned, is one of the principal points at issue.

Streets of New York Cleared by the Heat

New York, July 1 (AP).—City streets were deserted today as the third day of excessive heat sent hundreds of thousands of New Yorkers to suburban beaches.

The Government thermometer registered a maximum of 90 degrees at 3 p. m. (E. S. T.), 18 degrees above the average for July.

Good Company . . . good weather and something good to drink—there's a sure trio for making the hours gay and pleasant. And as the frosted glasses are sipped with approval, how often someone will add, "You must have used Canada Dry!"

For ever since it came from Canada, this fine old ginger ale has been considered in a class apart. The Champagne of Ginger Ales.

Of course, "it must be Canada Dry." And all the more so, since it's just as inexpensive as ordinary ginger ales.

"It must be Canada Dry"

Big bottles 20¢—12-oz. size 2 for 25¢ (plus bottle deposits)

Canada Dry is also made to order by the glass at soda fountains.

BLACKIE BEAR

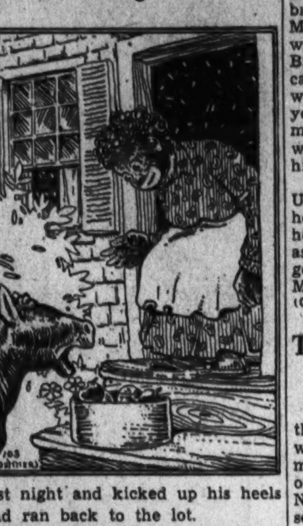
By D. SAM COX

The Truth About Uncle Joe.

It seems a shame to tell all these things on Uncle Joe, but it just can't be helped. There is nothing wrong about telling the truth about anything and it is the truth that Uncle Joe had said, time and time again, what he was going to do to Blackie when he caught up with him, and now when they met he didn't do any of those things. Always, it was Blackie Bear that did the things.

But he was going to get Blackie "tomorrow," and so tomorrow he got up early and went out to see which way Blackie's tracks went.

Aunt Judy went out with him. And now you may laugh if you want to. That's just what Aunt Judy did, for when she opened the back door, there stood Bully Calf who had come back to finish that apple he was eating last night when Uncle Joe ran in on him. There he stood, eating his breakfast just as if nothing had ever happened, and, with his black, curly hair he did look a good deal like Blackie. When Aunt Judy opened the door and caught him eating the apples, Bully seemed to know that he was doing something for which he might get a whipping and so he made that same bear noise that he made at Uncle Joe last night and kicked up his heels and ran back to the lot.



"So there is your Blackie Bear," said Aunt Judy. "And there lies your gun on the ground. And there are no bear tracks for you and the dogs to follow and there is no dog here to follow anything. It's a pretty come-off when you and Mr. Man and all the other folks around this country hunt for days and days for a bear and then let a little calf come here and scare you half to death. I reckon it's about time for you to get back to work at putting what things you have to eat into the crib and potato banks. Go over to Mr. Man's and bring that dog back, and tell Mr. Man that you are not going to waste any more time hunting Blackie Bear. When a little black calf can do what Bully did to you when you had your gun, what do you suppose a big bear with as much sense as Blackie Bear has would do to you if you did find him?"

And to tell another truth about Uncle Joe, he was mightly glad to hear Aunt Judy say just that, for he really didn't want to find Blackie as badly as he made out and so he got his hat and started off for Mr. Man's house for his dog.

Newlyweds Go Abroad For Month

Marguerite McDonough Is Bride of John Brennan Moore.

One of the most attractive weddings of the season took place Thursday at 10 a. m. at the Shrine of the Sacred Heart, when Miss Marguerite Therese McDonough, daughter of Mrs. Patrick Joseph McDonough, of Washington, became the bride of Mr. John Brendan Moore, son of Mrs. John J. Moore, of East Milton, Mass. The Rev. Michael W. Hyle officiated, assisted by the Rev. J. M. Moran, pastor of the Church of the Assumption, Congress Heights, Md.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Mr. John Joseph McDonough. Her wedding gown of white duchess satin was cut on princess lines, falling into a short, graceful train. Her veil of silk net was arranged on simple lines, cap style, and held in place with orange blossoms. She carried a white prayer book, with streamers of white satin ribbon ornamented with sprigs of lily of the valley.

Mrs. Clark Schilder, sister of the bride, was matron of honor. Her dress was of pale blue mousseline de soie with an off-the-face hat of the same material. She carried a shower bouquet of tea roses and blue delphinium. Mr. Thomas P. McDonough, brother of the bride, was best man. Mr. Clark Schilder and Mr. Keith Schwinley were ushers. Mrs. McDonough, mother of the bride, wore black chiffon with lace and a corsage of gardenias, and Mrs. Moore, mother of the bridegroom, was in black lace wearing white gardenias.

During the ceermony Mrs. Rose Pellie Jarman sang Riley's "Perfect Prayer," Gounod's "Ave Maria" and "Oh Lord, I Am Not Worthy." Mr. Edward Donovan accompanied at the organ. The sanctuary of the church was beautifully decorated with palms and huge baskets of lilies and sprays of baby's breath. Bouquets of lilies and inumerable candles decorated the high altar.

A reception and breakfast followed at the home of the bride's mother. The home also was decorated with palms and ferns while baskets of gay spring flowers added to the festive appearance of the attractive home.

Mr. and Mrs. Moore left for New York, whence they sailed on the Leviathan Saturday for a honeymoon abroad. On their return in August they will make their home at East Milton. Mrs. Moore's going away costume was a beige suit with brown accessories. The bride, who has a host of friends in Washington, is a graduate of George Washington University. Many persons prominent in official and social circles attended the wedding and reception.

A Strength-Showing Bid.

"But I had passed three honor-tricks and I had to show you the strength of my hand," was the remark of a rather inexpert player to her partner after playing the hand below in the absurd contract of four notrumps. She thought she was using the four-notrump bid in its conventional meaning of showing two Aces and the King of a bid suit, but her partner construed it as simply making a possible game practically impossible. In further extenuation of her unusual bid, the lady continued: "I had support for both your suits and I never thought you would drop me."

Perhaps South, her partner on this unfortunate occasion, should have bid five clubs, which could have been made, but to him it was amazing that North could have passed the Opening bid and then, without either supporting a suit or showing one of her own, jump to four notrump. Slightly afraid of such unusual things, he decided to pass.

The hand was:
North, Dealer.
East and West vulnerable.

	North
	♠ K 9 8 7 ♡ A ◇ A 10 6 ♣ Q J 9 7 4
♠ A ♡ 10 8 5 4 3 2 ◇ K J 7 ♣ 10 6 5	W — E	♠ 6 4 3 2 ♡ Q J 9 7 6 ◇ 9 5 4 3
	♠ Q J 10 5 ♡ K ◇ Q 8 2 ♣ A K 8 3 2
	S

The bidding: (Figures after bids refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

North	East	South	West
Pass(1)	Pass	1♣(2)	Pass
2NT(3)	Pass	3♠(4)	Pass
4NT(5)	Pass	Pass(6)	Pass

1—North should not have passed this hand. The correct opening bid is one club.

2—South's hand is barely more than a minimum, but fully comes up to the requirements for an Opening bid.

3—North, having passed an Opening bid, is in some difficulty in finding a good call at this point. She chooses the fairly strong bid of two notrump rather than showing immediate support for the clubs.

4—Of course, South is not interested in notrump with his distribution, and now bids the shaded spade suit, hoping to find an advantageous spot to play the hand.

5—Having support for both suits bid by her partner, North now makes another strong, but very bad, bid.

6—Completely at sea as to exactly what is happening, South decides to pass.

The result, when the battle was over, was that North and South had taken seven tricks and East and West six. In other words, the four-notrump contract was defeated three tricks.

The hand plays best at five clubs, which can not be defeated. A four-spade contract would be set if a club were opened by West, allowing East to trump it; but even a four-spade contract, though unsuccessful, could not be criticized. But a notrump contract had no chance to succeed.

Had North's subsequent bidding been correct, she would not have suffered at all from her unsound original pass of a strong hand. She was fortunate in that her partner opened the bidding and gave her a chance to show her real values; but she should not have attempted to correct her error by such a contradictory bid as four notrump. The best bids by all concerned would have been: (Figure after bid refers to numbered explanatory paragraph.)

North	East	South	West
1♣	Pass	1♠(1)	Pass
2♣	Pass	Pass
5♣	Pass	Pass	Pass

1—South does not wish to give the full number of Raises in clubs, because a three-notrump contract may seem desirable; so he makes a One-over-One response on a shaded suit. This response is practically Forcing, and thus there is hardly any danger of failing to bid game.

Miss Schafer Wed At Silver Spring

Maryland Girl Is Bride of Grayson E. Lehman.

Miss Ruth L. Schafer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Millard Schafer and Grayson E. Lehman, of Silver Spring, were married last Saturday afternoon at the Methodist Church, Bowie. The ceremony was performed by Rev. H. H. Howland, of Langdon, D. C., a former pastor of Bowie, assisted by Rev. Tabler. The church was filled with relatives and friends of the couple.

The bride was escorted by her father who gave her in marriage. Her gown of white mousseline de soie, made on simple and becoming lines, was worn with a small close-fitting white hat, and she carried bride roses. Miss Elizabeth Kuhl was maid of honor. She wore a green figured organdie with a navy blue moire sash and accessories to match. Her large hat was trimmed with green, and she carried an armful of delphiniums. The groom was attended by his brother as best man.

A reception was held at the home of the bride, with about 150 guests present. Numerous gifts of linen, silver, glassware and many other articles were received. The young couple left by motor on a honeymoon trip to Atlantic City. On their return they will reside at the Schafer home. Out-of-town guests included relatives and friends from Baltimore, New York and Washington.

Sunburn Goes With Generous Use of Lotion

It's Sunproof, Too; Can Be Used as an Effective Preventative.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

WHEN a young woman undertook nursing the victims of liquid fire burns she had no idea she was on the verge of a wonderful discovery. But her anxiety to relieve the pain of those suffering led her to experiment with a variety of preparations. Her knowledge of medicine and pharmaceutics combined with her eagerness resulted in the discovery of a lotion soothing to burnt skins.

Continuing her experiments along this line she concocted a sunproof liquid which prevents sunburn as effectively as it cures it. Only one store in Washington carries this preparation, and only a few people so far are familiar with its wonderful properties.

Those unfortunate sun worshippers who have knelt too long at the shrine and suffered for days with all the ills attendant on a really bad burn should greet this new remedy enthusiastically. Next time they go to the beach they can insure themselves against a similar ordeal by covering the exposed portions of their bodies with this new preparation. Or if they're caught unawares where the sun beams down devastatingly they can ward off ill effects by the same lotion.

For Washington Water.

Another new product comes to these shores from France. There an ingenious person catering to the luxury of the bath combined a water softener and a fragrant oil. The result is most successful.

Washington's hard water will soften up with a sprinkling of this new concoction.

Just watch the shop counters. The first large round box you see looking as though it were made of thin brown shingles is apt to contain these highly satisfactory ingredients.

* * * *

Travel Kits.

Summer vacationists who load their suit cases with half of the jars and bottles on their dressing room tables seldom escape without a spill or two. Next trip they should take added precautions with a travel kit.

There are two types of these, those already stocked and those containing empty bottles and jars to be filled with whatever one pleases.

A downtown store has some of bright plaid silk, rubber-lined, containing two jars and three bottles. There's space for other odds and ends of makeup, and even a toothbrush and wash rag. They're available in black, blue, or red.

Modernistic Toothbrush.

Even tooth brushes are going modern. Those featured in a downtown store have a number of unusual attributes. First they are adjustable to a 45 degree angle, both right and left. This permits easy up and down brushing as stressed by dentists. Furthermore, they clean in between the teeth, and massage the gums as no other toothbrush can. The small amount of metal on the brush is proof against rust, corrosion, or tarnish. The other portions are delightfully easy to clean, as the brush may be taken apart in the same manner as a safety razor and each part cleaned separately. When the actual brush part wears out it's a simple and inexpensive matter to buy refills.

* * * *

Linen Handbags.

While a person can talk at length about the inconveniences of linen dresses which wrinkle after a few minutes of wearing, they can also talk at length about the attractive features of linen bags. Whereas these come in white and pastel colors, they're easily cleaned and never the worse for wear afterward.

A Connecticut avenue store has some in pouch styles with large bracelet-like composition handles. Although they're roomy, they're lightweight, as summer bags should be.

No Sham Hero.

It really does a beautiful job. It's the soapless kind that requires a lot of rubbing in, around and about—all of which is the best thing in the world for the scalp. And then when the head has been cleansed sufficiently a few rinses will take all traces of shampoo away. No vinegar or lemon rinse is required. After the hair has dried, it is soft, fluffy, thoroughly cleansed, and the scalp revigorated.

Mouse Food.

Old homes which harbor these pesky nuisances may be rid of them quickly if the right measures are taken. And much less cruel and certainly more satisfactory than most means is this food. It's left out for the mouse to taste. Just a nibble sends him running out doors for air. And he never comes back again. It's 10 cents a platter.

Half-Forgotten Romances of American History

Jules Jusserand—Elise Richards

By Elisabeth E. Poe.

INTERNATIONAL romances have a habit of floundering, but the long, happy marriage of Jules Jusserand and Elise Richards is proof this not always need be so. Perhaps their success was due to their deep respect and love for the other's country. Jusserand, who was Ambassador of France to America for over 20 years, had a fine knowledge of our people. His wife was brought up in France and regarded it as her own country. The beloved statesman and his charming wife are still remembered here.

IN MERIDIAN PARK the feathered songsters never lack for water on these torrid days. They find it in a graceful bird fountain erected there by two Washingtonians—a man and a woman who, despite the fact the man represented for more than a score of years a great sister nation and his American-born wife, naturally reflected his citizenship—were truly citizens of this Nation—in the best sense of the word.

The fountain was placed there as a token to their bird friends by the late Jules Jusserand, Ambassador of France to the United States from 1902 to 1925, and his wife, just as they were leaving America. The gift was typical of them. They wished to leave behind some visible evidence of their joy in living here. They thought of their bird friends as well as their human ones and placed the fountain to care for the wants of the birds and to remind the humans of their enduring friendship for us and regret at leaving this post.

The traditional friendship between France and the United States begun by LaFayette and his gallant comrades was cemented and deepened by Jules Jusserand. He had a fine knowledge of the spirit of the American people, and Washington will long cherish its memories of the gay little man with his quaintly spoken but meticulous English, who followed every movement in this country with such unflagging interest. Nothing that was American was foreign to him, to paraphase a saying of one of his countrymen, and his kindly scrutiny was upon all our acts, political and social, during his stay and after he left.

Roosevelt's Friend.

Ambassador Jusserand had the unique distinction of being a member of President Theodore Roosevelt's Tennis Cabinet and he was a close personal friend of Roosevelt. He fulfilled in his person that remark of Theodore Roosevelt's before the Sorbonne in 1910: "France has taught many lessons to other nations: surely one of the most important is * * * that a high artistic and literary development is compatible with notable leadership in arms and statecraft."

Jusserand's interest in America was rooted in romance. His was an international marriage; he wedded an American girl who had lived in France since girlhood and absorbed the spirit of his people as well as retained that of her own Nation. In their lives together this dual citizenship of hers was a source of real gratification and joy to him and it was one of the reasons he felt himself "in part, at least, an American." Even as Lafayette, he knew a kinship of soul with this country that made it next to his own native France "the dearest spot on earth to him."

So many international romances have floundered against the rocks of misunderstanding that the Jusserand-Richards romance remains as an outstanding example of how successful such an alliance may become. The devotion of this couple was an exemplar to all. In Washington their home was the center of truly exclusive gatherings of the best minds and leaders of every school of thought in the Capital. Renowned for its hospitality, an invitation to the French Embassy in the days of the Jusserands was indeed something to be prized—and attended—a sequence not always universal in the whirligig of social life in the height of the season.

A Career Begins.

Jules Jusserand—or, to give all his names acquired at baptism—Jean Adrien Antoine Jules Jusserand—was born in Lyons, France, February 18, 1855. From boyhood it was apparent that he was of the scholar type—avid for learning and information, and with a special interest in history. Naturally, his parents thought of statecraft as an outlet for such energy and genius. When only 21 he entered the diplomatic service of France, his first post being as consul to London.

There began that abiding interest in English history and literature which made him a savant in regard to these subjects. Especially was his imagination captured by the genius of Shakespeare, and he eagerly gathered all possible information about him. So thorough was his study of England's great poet that in after years his writings on Shakespeare were considered classics of their kind.

Jusserand was not content to live and move within the circle of diplomatic life. He walked over the country, becoming thoroughly acquainted with the life of the English people.

He rose steadily in the service of his country. Romance passed him by; his mind was engrossed in literature and diplomacy—and they are two very jealous mistresses. But Cupid had a master-dart in store for the vivacious little Frenchman with the spiritual face, penetrating glance and quizzical expression.

A certain New York business man by the name of Richards—friend and acquaintance of the great names of the makers of the little Old York of yesterday—had set up residence in Paris in order to care for the foreign customers of his firm.

Romance Enters.

With Mr. and Mrs. Richards was their daughter, Elise, whose education was completed in Paris and who became much interested in her adopted country. When, nearing womanhood, she met Jules Jusserand she felt her interest in things French becoming more individualized. Jules Jusserand was indeed a happy man when Elise Richards said, "yes," and they were married in Paris on October 15, 1895. Jusserand was 40 but youthful in appearance and heart.

Three years after their marriage came his first major diplomatic appointment, that of Minister of France to Denmark, where he served from 1898 to 1902.

Theodore Roosevelt was writing a new page in the history of American Presidents when Jusserand and Mme. Jusserand first came to Washington. The scholar in Theodore Roosevelt recognized a kindred spirit in the little Frenchman and they became friends at once. The White House doors always opened gladly when the French envoy appeared; it was a signal for much animated discussion of English and French literature, while turns on the tennis courts and the vigorous give and take of unsparing racquets made new bonds of amity and good will between the two men.

Feminine Confidences.

While the men played tennis and argued, the Baconian theory Mrs. Roosevelt and Mme. Jusserand exchanged confidences and enjoyed their own friendship.

Jusserand was raised to the post of Ambassador and the Embassy became the center of Diplomatic Washington, especially as the years added to the length of his Washington service he became dean of the corps.

It was Jusserand whom the Tennis Cabinet selected as spokesman to present Theodore Roosevelt when retiring as President with a silver bowl as a token of their esteem. After a simple speech of much felicity of phrasing the Frenchman's emotion overcame him and his eyes and none of the company's were dry when he handed the gift to the recipient.

Jusserand was Ambassador of France during the World War. He demonstrated fully the restraint an Ambassador representing a belligerent nation should exhibit at the capital of a neutral country. Neither by word, act or suggestion did Jusserand endanger the delicate situation, but his joy was unrestrained when the United States after months of "watchful waiting" finally entered the conflict on the side of the Allies.

Then came victory and the mellow years of Jusserand's Washington service. Happy in Mme. Jusserand's companionship, he delved deeper into our habits and customs, content to serve his country in the country he loved so well.

Sad Parting.

In 1925, diplomatic policy caused his transfer. He hated to go and with many a backward glance he departed these shores.

To the end of his life Jusserand's interest in the United States never abated in the slightest degree. He kept up a steady flow of correspondence with his American friends and entertained many of them in his home in France.

There was sadness in Washington when the word came this kindly French friend of the American people had died. Tender thoughts were given to Mme. Jusserand in her bereavement when the beautiful romance was recalled by persons who had known them well in the world capital.

The Jusserands were part and parcel of the Washington of yesterday, the Washington of fine living, simple habits and village size.

And whenever the Washingtonians of today see that fountain in Meridian Park and the birds enjoying the largesse of cooling waters, they remember their friends from over the seas, Jules and Elise Jusserand, who did not forget them when they said "au revoir" to this city which had been "home sweet home" to them for so many years.

Gay Accessories "Make" Bathing Togs; They're Brimful of Style Tricks

By Amos Parish.

NEW YORK, July 2.—When you start checking up on those smart accessory trappings which follow the swim suit about the beach, it's not surprising if you come to the conclusion that the suit is really the accessory and the accessories are the main thing.

You top off your plain suit with a contrasting hat . . . yellow, brown, red, navy, white. A big sun-shading cartwheel of linen, pique, mesh, print or rough straw. And it's as flattering as it is protective.

There are many gay kinds of bags . . . in prints, Mexican stripes, rich-colored leathers . . . all capacious, usually with waterproof lining, slide fastener closing and convenient handles.

Swim caps, too, sometimes are part of an ensemble with shoes. And you can see how that goes if you'll look at the left-hand figure, who wears a gay printed rubber cap and matching shoes.

Many Sandal Types.

These shoes are one of the many sandal types which may or may not have toe exposure. Rubber, leather, pique, linen, canvas, mesh and novelty coarse weaves are all used on soles of rubber, rope, cork, leather and—of all things—wood. Actually thick wood soles . . . much like those of the French sabot.

Heels on these shoes, when they have any, are low, of built-up cork (as the ones in the lower left corner) or rope or leather or wood.

Your beach robe can make a great splash of color. They're making them of terry cloth, seersucker, gingham, linen, jersey . . . in bright stripes, plaids and plain colors.

An ingenious idea is found in the robe sketched. This has a hood which can be pulled over your head while you nap, if you like.

Swim togs of the types described may be found in Washington in all the better class shops and department stores.

SLANDER

By Arthur Somers Roche

As the story draws to a close, Dr. Peter Baxter and Herbert Cranston both are in love with Martha Blaisdell. Cranston is engaged to her, but she has run away because of the scandal attached to her name. Meanwhile, Millie Cragin is in love with Dr. Baxter. After a long struggle with her conscience, she visits him to unload what is on her mind.

PETER BAXTER looked up from his desk.

"You haven't rung me up," said Millie. She was conscious that she looked lovely as she walked down the long room.

"I've been frightfully busy," Baxter said.

He rose and took the hand which she extended. She sank, with conscious grace, into a chair, and looked up at him.

"It's no use, is it, Peter."

"What's no use?" he evaded.

"Bless the man's heart," smiled Millie. "Chivalrous always. You just will misunderstand, won't you, Peter?"

"I don't know what you're talking about," said Baxter.

"Then I'll have to put it in words of one syllale," said Millie. "Pete, I'm in love with you. Now where do we go from there?"

His embarrassment was agony.

"You don't mean that," he told her.

Wanted to Marry.

"Don't I. If you only knew," she said. She eyed him appraisingly. "Some day I'm going to give myself a great big laugh about this, Pete, but just now it isn't funny at all. You're the last man in the world I'd have guessed I'd care for. I don't like your profession, and I don't see myself in the picture at all. I'd be miserable as a doctor's wife. Yet that's what I want to be, Pete. I don't know why I want that, any more than I know why I've lost all my pride. You know, if you asked me to marry you now, I wouldn't do it. I would have pride enough to be unwilling to accept pity, even though I seem to have none left."

She raised a hand to stop the speech imminent on his lips.

"Don't say anything—not for a while, Pete. Let me talk." She lighted a cigarette and puffed it for a moment.

"I learned today where Martha Blaisdell is. I told Cranston. I know perfectly well that if he goes out to see her it won't take him long to persuade her to marry him. I didn't intend to tell you. I know you're in love with Martha. But if she marries Cranston—and she'll do it, and she'll do it right away if I know anything at all about women—you're the kind of man who will recognize that your hope is ended. You're not very modern, Pete. Lots of men, when a girl gets married, keep on hoping. They know there's such a thing as divorce. But you wouldn't recognize that. You'd die a thousand deaths and then a smart girl like myself might catch you. But I don't want to be smart. I don't want to be mean. So I've come down here to tell you. Martha Blaisdell doesn't know—she didn't know 10 days ago, anyway—whether she was in love with you or Herbie. Don't ask me to explain how I know this. I don't know it; I just feel it. But I'll back my feelings against any one else's certain knowledge. Pete. Herbie is on his way to Martha. If you want her, act quick."

"Aren't you being a trifle melodramatic?" Baxter asked.

In Mood to Be Won.

"Am I? Maybe I am. I think that all emotion is melodrama. I think that melodrama is life. I know that in the mood that Martha must be in it won't take much persuasion to make her give in. I know that you're in love with her. I know that Herbie is. I know that she feels she couldn't marry any one after all that has happened, but I also know that any woman in her mood is easily won by the right man. If you care enough—what are you going to do?"

Baxter looked at her gravely.

"I'm going to take you home and prescribe for you that you go to bed."

"And you're not going out to see Martha?"

"Of course not," he told her. He hesitated a moment, fumbled with a book upon his desk, avoided her eyes. Then he looked straight at her. "You're a grand person, Millie. I think you're about the gamest girl I ever knew. I think you're swell."

She rose and almost ran to the door.

"I've a taxi here," she called. "Don't take me home. And—and—I won't see you any more, so—good-by, Pete. I think I'll sail tomorrow night. On the Bremen. The shooting isn't over in Scotland and the Teasdales want me. Good-by and good luck, Pete."

The Scene Changes.

The chairman of the board of directors of the Missionary Medical Foundation looked around the table at his colleagues.

"Shall we ask Dr. Baxter to leave for a moment?" he asked.

"We have talked to Dr. Baxter and we have heard him talk. We have thoroughly investigated his record at St. John's Clinic. We know that he is not only an excellent physician and surgeon, but that he understands sanitation. We know that he is most emphatically the type of man that we need. But Dr. Baxter has figured, as we all know, in the newspapers as one of the participants in an affair that was unfortunate. My own view is that Dr. Baxter behaved indiscreetly. But if I had a son I would wish that he, under similar circumstances, would behave with the same gallant indiscretion. There is no flaw upon Dr. Baxter's morals. Shall we accept him, gentlemen?"

Approval Voiced.

This time there could be no possible misinterpretation of the murmur of approval that ran around the table. The chairman turned to Baxter. His thin, ascetic lips smiled faintly.

"I suppose that outsiders would think we were rather absurd in being so rigid about the qualifications and character of the physicians we send into the heart of China. Considering the small salary we pay, considering the life of sacrifice we offer, the world would be justified in thinking that we should be grateful to get any man no matter what his character or qualifications. That is because the world doesn't realize that the medical profession is crowded with men who think nothing of money and who laugh at sacrifice and privation. There were 50 candidates for the place which we have assigned to you, Dr. Baxter. Not one of those candidates was a failure. Every one of them is willing to abandon an honorable career with prospects of success in order that he may serve mankind according to his conscience. You are going into the interior of China. Your headquarters will be in the village of Tai Ping, and the nearest white man will be 300 miles from you. You will live almost as the natives live. You will be there three years before you will receive a holiday. You will live uncomfortably; there will be times even of privation.

Service Is Reward.

There will never be any monetary reward worth considering. The chances are that you will never gain fame. It may be that you will have a chance to invent some serum or other—I am not a physician and do not understand these things, but I doubt if you will ever have the opportunity to contribute anything important to science. But you will be able to serve ignorant and ailing people. That will be your only reward, and this knowledge will be your only solace in loneliness. You aren't even married; you will have no companion to share your trials. And yet, despite the hardships before you, I know that you feel elated and proud at the opportunity we are giving you. And we are happy that we are sending to Tai Ping a man as capable as yourself. We congratulate ourselves and we also congratulate you, doctor."

Baxter bowed.

"Thank you very much, sir," he said.

"And you're leaving today?" asked the chairman.

Baxter smiled.

"I've turned over the clinic to a young doctor who has occasionally assisted me. I go from here to the train."

"You were prompt," smiled the chairman. "We notified you on Saturday and you're leaving today. Two days is quick work. Good luck to you, doctor."

"Thank you again, sir, and thanks to all you gentlemen," said Peter.

He shook hands with the directors and went out into the sunlight.

CAPITAL KITCHEN

Here Are Some Tempting Menus for July 4th "Porch Picnics."

By Susan Mills.

YOU can't have too many ideas for the Fourth of July picnic. Whether you go away or stay at home for the celebration, the food should be festive and tempting.

Today, however, let's concentrate on the stay-at-home picnic.

Set the scene under a big shade tree or on the screened porch, with a table for the food and a few comfortable porch chairs or cushions. Place at one end of the table, the paper napkins, plates and cups and just the necessary flat silver.

Visualize a big salad bowl with a crisp vegetable salad, a tray of cold spreads and sliced meats for sandwich fillings, a cutting board holding all the necessary sliced bread and crackers to satisfy the biggest appetite, one hot casserole dish, if the day is not too warm, and a big pot of hot coffee or pitcher of ice tea with a tray of paper cups close by.

Dessert may be a big cake—brought out at the close of the meal, a big bowl of fresh fruit, a short cake or frozen dessert.

Porch Picnic Menu.

Assorted breads, rye, white, graham and finger rolls; assorted meats and spreads including salami cut in thin slices, spiced cold tongue, ground ham with grated pineapple and chopped walnuts spread, cream cheese and green pepper spread.

Arrange on a chop or cold meat plate with the sliced meats around the edge and the spreads in the center.

Jelly and pickles

Bowls of creamed butter and mustard butter

Shoe string potatoes

Cocoanut cake with orange custard filling

Hot tea or coffee

Porch Picnic Menu.

Hot ham shortcake, pineapple and cucumber gelatin salad, ripe olives, cheese crackers, iced tea, raspberries and sliced bananas, ice box cookies.

Hot Ham Shortcake.

Bake rich baking powder biscuits of:

2 cups flour
1-3 cup lard
2-3 cup milk
¾ teaspoon salt
4 teaspoons baking powder

Cut the biscuits thin, place two biscuits together with butter between and bake for 15 minutes in quick oven. Separate the biscuits and pour a creamed ham and olive mixture over the bottom biscuit, replace the top and serve with a garnish of parsley.

Creamed Ham.

2 cups cold cut ham
1½ cups milk
3 tablespoons flour
2 tablespoons butter
1 dozen stuffed olives

Make a white sauce of the fat, flour and milk. When thickened add the ham and the sliced olives. Use in ham shortcakes.

How to Keep Well

Increasing Death Rate of Appendicitis.

Appendicitis is no respecter of persons, age, sex, or occupation. We may wonder at the increasing number of deaths from this disease when competent physicians and surgeons are rarely out of reach. Many small communities can boast a well trained surgeon. In spite of widespread education in the recognition of symptoms of appendicitis the annual death toll has risen steadily in the last 12 years from less than 12,000 to approximately 20,000.

The appendix is a part of the intestinal tract, but it is an offshoot. It is like a trouser pocket without a hole; there is no outlet at the bottom. This organ may accumulate substances that normally pass along the intestinal tract and be unable to expel them. Any irritation in the intestinal tract is likely to be communicated to the appendix. Inflammation and ulceration may result, an abscess may form, and if neglected, may rupture into the abdominal cavity. This latter event is attended with great danger as inflammation of the peritoneum (peritonitis) nearly always follows.

While the appendix is located low in the right side of the abdomen, pain due to inflammation there may be felt in the stomach area. Because of this "stomach ache" patients are inclined to revert to a household remedy, namely, a strong laxative. This is about as effective as using gasoline as a fire extinguisher. The action of the laxative is to spread the inflammation, ofttimes driving it deeper into the appendix. Competent authorities have estimated that if the use of laxatives could be prevented, a much higher percentage of recoveries would occur.

For the safety in suspected appendicitis: Keep the patient quiet, do not give laxatives, give no fluid by mouth, give no enemas, call your physician. In case of doubt secure skilled surgical counsel.

When It Comes to That Mysterious Thing Called Personality, Voice Plays Big Part

Greatest Living Women? Savants Fail to Agree

Mrs. Roosevelt and Frances Perkins Cited in Four Out of Five Lists, But Otherwise the Field's Wide Open.

By Virginia Lee Warren.

THE three greatest living women in America—who are they? Six college professors and biographers have answered that question within the last week. Only three gave the same answer.

Dr. A. L. Sachar, biographer, historian and lecturer, began the whole affair by announcing that Jane Addams, of Hull House; Margaret Sanger, of birth control fame, and Helen Keller, of magnificent courage, are the three greatest women, alive in America.

After the Illinois educator had made his choice, five Washington college professors and biographers made theirs. Only two out of the five had Jane Addams on their list. Helen Keller was named by only one. And Margaret Sanger was not even mentioned.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt was given a place on four out of five lists. So was Frances Perkins. Mary Wooley, president of Mount Holyoke College, was named by two Washington professors as one of the three greatest living American women. Mrs. Nicholas Brady, a leader in social welfare work, received one vote.

True Individuality.

Those who gave Mrs. Roosevelt first place were Dr. A. Curtis Wilgus, professor of history at George Washington University and acting dean of Columbian College; Dr. Wesley Gewehr, head of American University's history department, and Dr. Dumas Malone, editor of the Dictionary of American Biography.

Said Dr. Wilgus, "Mrs. Roosevelt has not been content to be simply the wife of the President. She has developed true individuality."

Dr. Gewehr chose Mrs. Roosevelt because, "she is the First Lady in many ways, especially through her contributions to our economic and social civilization. She has even encouraged good taste in homes."

Before announcing his list Dr. Malone explained it was impossible to compare the relative greatness of persons in different lines of endeavor.

"Just as it is impossible to declare whether Theodore Roosevelt was greater than Edgar Allen Poe, so it is impossible to compare a woman in literature with a woman in public affairs," said the biographer.

Around the Dilemma.

Dr. Malone got around this difficulty by dividing his list into several sections. First he named Mrs. Roosevelt because, "she is a really fine woman and stands for fine things in American life. Although she undoubtedly gains some of her prominence from her husband's position, she has some quality within herself that makes her different from other First Ladies who have lived in the White House."

Frances Perkins, in Dr. Malone's opinion, is the greatest woman in public affairs. He believes she is the first Secretary of Labor who has approached labor problems from the viewpoint of a sociologist.

Dr. Malone selected Jane Addams as the greatest woman in the field of social service; Ada L. Comstock and Mary Wooley in the field of education; Willa Cather, Julia Peterkin, and Ellen Glasgow in literature. He concluded his list with Helen Keller, saying, "she is a great person."

Dr. Wilgus and Dr .Gewehr added Frances Perkins and Mary Wooley to their lists headed by Mrs. Roosevelt.

For Country's Youth.

Mrs. Roosevelt was given second place by the Rev. Dr. Joseph F. Thorning, S. J., professor of sociology and acting dean of the Graduate School of Georgetown University. He selected Mrs. Nicholas Brady as greatest of living American women because, "she has made the ideals of youth her prime concern, and because of what she has accomplished for religious education among boys and girls in this country."

Miss Perkins concluded the Rev. Mr. Thorning's list.

"She has won the confidence of the rank and file of workers by her fearless advocacy of social justice," he declared.

Prof. Elmer L. Kayser, dean of university students and professor of history at George Washington University, chose Jane Addams as the greatest woman. But when it came to selecting the second and third greatest, Prof. Kayser went outside America. Mme. Curie received his second vote. On the third one he gave up entirely.

Both the social service worker and scientist have magnificent intellectual ability, according to Prof. Kayser.

"Added to that ability is a personal nobility," he concluded.

Women's Deans To Open Meet This Afternoon

Women Voters Are Out to Sweep Patronage From Government.

THE opening session of the National Association of Deans of Women's conference will be held at 2 o'clock this afternoon at the Raleigh Hotel. The deans of women and the department of secondary school principals will meet jointly.

At this session, Miss Dorothy C. Stratton, dean of women, Purdue University, Lafayette, Ind., and Arthur C. Watkins, director of the National Student Forum of Washington, will speak. Miss Agnes Ellen Harris, president of the dean's department, and Charles F. Allen, president of the department of secondary school principals, will preside jointly.

* * * *

Miss Mary Stewart, assistant director of Indian Education, United States Bureau of Indian Affairs, will address a luncheon conference of the deans of women on "Educating Americans—Native and Other" at 12:30 o'clock tomorrow at Barker Hall, Seventeenth and K streets northwest.

After the luncheon a panel discussion on "Problems of the High School Dean" will be led by Mrs. Meta Steinhausen, Washington Junior High School, Rochester, New York, and participated in by local educators.

Miss Jessie Cooper, vice principal of McKinley High School and chairman in charge of the local arrangements, will preside at the luncheon.

War on Patronage.

War on the Federal patronage system has been declared by the Board of National League of Women Voters, which met here last week. Mrs. Walter S. Greenough, of Indianapolis, chairman of the department of government and its operation, is in charge of the league's campaign for trained and qualified persons in Government service. She said:

"There has been discussion by the Administration during the past year looking toward the elimination of patronage, but Administration leaders have only scratched the surface of a condition for which both the Republican and Democratic parties must be held accountable over a period of years. There are several regrettable situations already known to the observing citizen. Why should all postmasters, except those in rural communities, be chosen by the spoils system? Why are thousands of new positions created under emergency agencies in the last year, placed outside of the regular classified service? What about the amazing inequalities in salary between equally responsible positions?

"Not only have there been few improvements in public personnel management during the depression, but actually, previous gains have been undermined. For example, reports from our State and local leagues show that married women have been discriminated against all too frequently in law or administrative practice. The national league opposed the 'married persons' clause in the economy act of 1932 and considered it unfortunate the House committee failed to give the Congress which has just ended a chance to repeal section 213 of that act by not reporting out the bill."

Sentinels Campaign.

The National Sentinels, organized a year ago to work for the preservation of the Constitution, is conducting an active campaign to reach women voters in the country.

The group hopes for a membership of 1,000,000 by the time of its next convention April 13 of next year in Washington.

Mrs. Nicholson in her letter criticizes conditions of the result of the repeal of the eighteenth amendment and also the expanding power of the Federal Government.

The Washington branch of the American Association of University Women will entertain at a tea today for those members who are attending the convention of the National Education Association. Tea will be served from 4:30 to 5:30 o'clock at the club house, 1634 I street northwest.

Miss Mildred Green will act as hostess. Miss Sara R. Lerch will present a group of songs.

Didn't Have Easy Time, Says Woman Engineer

Doris Clinton, of Takoma Park, One of Three Girls in Country to Get Aeronautical Degree, Declares She Even Had Trouble Finding a School.

WHEN Doris Clinton decided to study aeronautical engineering her parents were skeptical, but tolerant.

"Just try it a year," they told her, "and then you will be glad to change to English literature or romance languages."

But the more Doris studied engineering the more she like it. This spring she was graduated in engineering at the University of Michigan, and she plans to return this fall to study for her master's degree.

"I didn't have an easy time of it," she said yesterday at her home in Takoma Park. "But ever since I first saw an aeroplane I wanted to study aeronautical engineering. I still think it the most interesting profession there is.

Refused Admittance.

"I even had a hard time finding a school to attend. Many schools refused admittance, giving no reason but that they did not accept girls.

"When I arrived at the University of Michigan and began work, I talked with the adviser, who told me the mortality rate among women engineering students was very high, and that few lasted beyond the second year. So far only 11 women have been graduated in engineering from the University of Michigan. Ten of these are married, and only one is a successful engineer. Doesn't sound so good, does it?"

Miss Clinton is one of three women in this country who have received degrees in aeronautical and mechanical engineering.

"At present there are few openings in our profession," she said, "but undoubtedly it is a profession with a future. Progress is slow, and work is still in the trial and error stage. The best one can do is to keep on studying and be ready for a position when things pick up."

Must Be Sincere.

Miss Clinton believes engineering is a good profession for women who are sincerely interested.

"If a girl is so fascinated by the insides of airplanes that she is willing to go out and work on them in a broiling summer day, then she would do well to make it her life work," she said.

The men in engineering are always cordial and helpful to the women in the profession, according to Miss Clinton.

"My professors were always very nice to me, too," she added, "although one of them did tell me I must have a great deal of money. That any woman would be silly to study engineering if she didn't have.

"They were so terribly polite to me," she added. "I used to be amused when they made a point of not swearing when I was present. It was so obvious they might as well have sworn."

Sports Complex Gets Analysis By an Expert

Girls Sacrifice Too Much Energy; Result Bad, She Declares.

By Ware Torrey and Janet Owen.

DANGEROUS — they said it when women first played polo; when they started to fly.

People in general don't worry very much about the dangers of basketball and track and field events, yet these sports are injuring more girls than the so-called violent sports. The top-notchers in competition in these fields seem to believe that today we play, for tomorrow we die.

"The martyr complex," of sacrificing anything to help one's team win, is what Prof. Agnes R. Wayman calls it. Miss Wayman, vice president of the American Physical Education Association, and director of physical education at Barnard College, is a National figure in the present progressive movement for sound health and sports principles.

This martyr complex, and the accompanying glamor of spotlights and cheering crowds, lies at the root of many cases of overstrain, serious physical and nervous ills, among girls in heavy competition.

"Stressing competition among young girls is apt to bring about definite bad results," Prof. Wayman says. "The girls get a wrong sense of values. They are apt to overdo. Their physical and nervous morale is often lowered."

Strained hearts and other organic ailments, serious lesions, and jangled nervous systems result from intense competition, in cases that climb into high figures.

Exploitation of girls' teams, for publicity for industrial houses, schools, clubs and counties, is widely characteristic all over the country.

An important factor that coaches and promoters of these teams, in basketball and track and field especially, do not know because they lack educational leadership, Miss Wayman says, is one striking difference between girls and boys in athletics. Emotional stability of girls depends on a proper balance between a variety of glands. This balance may be seriously upset by the excitement and nervous strain of intense competition.

COMPETITIVE SPORTS tend to develop a wrong sense of values in women participants, authorities hold. By overexertion, they permanently impair their physical and nervous morale, upset their emotional balance, and develop a "martyr complex" toward the game.

Cleopatra Charmed the Men, Chiefly by Melodious Tones

Egypt's Queen Controlled Her Vocal Cords Largely By Instinct; Modern Woman, Aided By Science, Has More Chance of Success.

Throughout the ages women have achieved, conquered, overridden sex prejudices and barriers, and written their names indelibly on the log book of life through the power of personality.

The following article is the first in a series on what modern science and art offer the women who develop the intangible magnetic graces that have characterized great women of the past.

By Frances Mangum.

IT IS surprising how many women still think that in order to emulate Cleopatra, immortal exponent of feminine magnetism, they must don slinky dresses and affect the facial make-up of tent show sirens. It is surprising that in 2,000 years they haven't learned better.

Would she depend on her face and figure to upset governments, or even to get herself a fat job, or a rich husband? Indeed she would not! Would she depend on her mysterious intangible allure to get herself elected to Congress or the presidency of the Daughters of Jezebel? Most certainly she would not!

It is a safe bet that Cleopatra would first of all practice a few good vocal exercises in her bedchamber and that when she appeared on the platform or before a microphone she wouldn't get breathy or nasal-toned. And that when she picked up a telephone receiver she would not shout a shrill, impatient, "Yes? Who is it?" into the mouthpiece.

Seductive, Says Plutarch.

History records that a large part of Cleopatra's magnetism lay in what women of today, particularly American women, neglect — the voice. The beauty of her voice is mentioned frequently by her biographers. Plutarch says it was wonderfully seductive, melodious, and persuasive. Philip W. Sergeant, British scholar, says of her: "Her voice was like a many-stringed instrument, capable of being tuned to any language."

Since Cleopatra, born in 68 B. C., was able to achieve so much with her voice, why should not women of today, with all the aids of modern art and science at their command, do even more with their vocal cords?

Both the talkies and the radio are making women voice-conscious. Many a nervous-voiced, shrill-toned woman today envies the rich, throaty tones of Greta Garbo, Ethel Barrymore, and Lynn Fontanne. Garbo, particularly, is one of the nearest approaches to Cleopatra—if voice be a means of comparison. Her deep, full tones emanating from the screen have made many a husband forget his dinner hour.

The Nordic Tones.

Is Garbo's voice such a masterpiece of nature that no woman may help to rival it? On the contrary, many of her northern European sisters likewise speak with deep, full resonance.

In fact, Carl H. Borgenstierna, Attache of the Swedish Legation, admitted in his best diplomatic manner that never in his country had he been swept off his feet by a young woman's beauty only to be let down with a bang by the incongruity of a shrill, piercing voice.

"It might be," he said "that the many vowel sounds in the Swedish tongue tend to give a resonant quality to the voice."

But it isn't necessary to learn Swedish to practice vowel sounds. It's only necessary to learn what the pure sounds are and how they should be formed, and to practice them until they become a habit.

That such practice will turn the trick was emphasized by Maurice Greet, director of the Clifford Brooke Academy of Stage Training.

"Many women come here for voice instruction, to learn how to 'play their voices'," he said. "By training and practice of vowel sounds they are able to lower strident voices and to give them fullness."

The marked tendency toward "throaty" voices is now frequently carried to an extreme. The so-called sweet young thing who sees some actress unfailingly lure with her siren sonority will make a studied effort to try the same. The results are painful. She acquires the unmelodious combination of a croak and a bass.

The "Throaty" Fad.

Speaking of this "throaty" fad, Mr. Greet said:

"Goodness knows how it ever got started! Maybe the deep voiced screen and stage stars, maybe the blues singers, who knows? But surely every woman must realize that her natural voice, cultivated and perfected, will be far more attractive than any mimicry basso!"

But what of the telephone voice? Let F. G. Macarow, manager of the traffic division of the Bell Telephone Co., answer. He sees hundreds of voices trained every day.

"Before we put a girl on the switchboard we give her a thorough course in voice technique," Mr. Macarow said. "It's amazing how quickly and easily unattractive voices are groomed to pleasantness!"

A Set of Rules.

Here are some of the ABC's of a telephone voice technique as set down by Mr. Macarow:

1. Do not speak loudly or shrilly.
2. Enunciate clearly.
3. Do not be afraid to use your lips freely in making sounds.

But the modern woman no sooner masters a telephone technique than she's confronted with the radio problem. She can not campaign successfully, speak at her club banquet or raise a fund for orphan elephants without knowing at least the rudiments of radio speaking.

Harry Butcher, general manager of Columbia Broadcasting System in Washington, who has given audition to hundreds of women, admits those with natural radio voices are few. But he also says amateur speakers can score a success if they would remember just these simple rules:

1. Be interested in your subject.
2. Let your voice ring with enthusiasm.
3. Enunciate clearly and cautiously.
4. Speak slowly and distinctly.

"If a woman speaker will remember these things it doesn't matter how green she is on the air, she can really pack a wallop!" Mr. Butcher heartily declares.

Another Recipe.

The simplest recipe for a good voice was proposed by Miss Caroline McKinley, teacher of speech at the King-Smith Studio School for the past ten years.

"Learn to pronounce your words correctly," she says, "and you can not fail to have a pleasing voice!"

Enlarging on her theory, she declared, "it is impossible, for instance, to slur, to mouth, or to swallow the word 'moon' if it is given the resonance that rightfully belongs to its proper pronunciation. Words are all marked for pronunciation to bring out the fullness, depth, and musical quality that belongs to [illegible] sound.

"The best textbook in the world for a pleasant speaking voice is simply the good old dictionary!" she finished.

Read in tomorrow's Post what part conversation plays in personality. Learn what outstanding Washington women and a well-known psychologist think of this art.

ETHEL BARRYMORE, modern exponent of a voice "full, deep and resonant," has charmed multitudes by the magnetic quality of her voice. Audiences have laughed and cried as she played on their emotions by the skillful manipulation of her vocal chords.

PILLAR To POST

Identical Twins.

THE 5-YEAR-OLD twins of Senator Bennett Clark are an interesting study in psychology to their mother, who was interested in this subject when in college. They are named Marsh and Kimball, the maiden names of their mother and grandmother, respectively. The 10-year-old son is named Champ Clark after his famous grandfather. Mrs. Clark says she took the opportunity to name the twins after her side of the family "while everybody was having a lot of sympathy for me."

* * * *

Like most identical twins, Marsh and Kimball do not compete with each other, are quite willing to divide in all things. However, they have developed a humorous trick of pretending to be each other when a scolding or spanking impends. At home they are a self-sufficient pair, and "wallow" by the hour, Mrs. Clark's way of expressing their habit of tumbling over and over each other on the floor.

* * * *

The self-sufficiency of identical twins prevents them from learning to talk as early as the single child who strives to make older playmates understand him. Marsh and Kimball had a jargon of their own, and they have not outgrown all of it. Even now they use a word they coined themselves in place of all personal pronouns. The word is pronounced "We-er." Recently they took part in an entertainment at school, dancing a minuet in costume. They described it as follows: "We-er put we-er hands on we-er heart and we-er made we-er bow."

* * * *

A Mystic Bond.

ONCE when they were babies their mother put them in separate bathtubs out of sight of each other with no means of communication. She was startled to find them doing the same things, such as playing with the soap in a similar way, at the same time.

* * * *

Young Champ is also a sympathetic observer of his young brothers. He claims that when they are engaged in games of hide and seek the twins seem to be able to find each other as if by instinct, which might have something to do with the theory there is some mystic bond between identical twins. Mrs. Clark quoted Thornton Wilder as saying he always had a sense of incompleteness which he attributed to the fact his twin brother died at birth.

* * * *

There is a story connected with the Clark twins which has been published but bears repeating. When the twins came here about a year ago they were taken sightseeing. They were much interested in the heroic statue inside the Lincoln Memorial. When they returned home, some one asked them what they had seen. One of them replied, "We-er saw a big statue of Jesus."

"That wasn't Jesus," corrected the other. "That was J. Ham Lincoln."

Strictly Speaking

Of Governments and Governors.

1. What is the name for the form of government having a dictator? What are the people who support such a government called?
2. Is Mussolini pronounced MEW-so-LEE-nee or MOO-so-LEE-nee?
3. Is Russia's government SO-vi-et or SOV-i-et?
4. Who is now head of the U. S. S. R., and how is his name pronounced?
5. What is Germany's present form of government?

Here Are the Answers.

1. Government by dictatorship is Fascism (FASH-ism). People supporting it are the Fascisti (Fa-SHIS-ti).
2. Mussolini is neither MEW-so-LEE-nee nor MOO-so-LEE-nee. It is Muss-o-LEE-nee—approximately Muscle-LEE-nee.
3. It is a SO-vi-et form. (The first syllable rhymes with "go."
4. Stalin—called either STAY-lin or STAW-lin—is head of the U. S. S. R.
5. Germany's present form of government, Nazi, is pronounced either NAY-tsi or NAT-si.

Catchy Tune What Makes State Songs

Mrs. Kahn Acknowledges Only "California, Here I Come."

This is the last of a series of articles on the reactions of members of Congress to their State songs.

By Mary Greiner Kelly.

A CATCHY tune is often a greater factor than a moving lyric in popularizing a state song. The dominant spirit of a State's pioneers can be expressed in melody when flowery words fall flat. But when neither words nor music "click," even homesick Congressmen can not be depended upon to know, much less to sing, their own State songs.

"California Here I Come" is what Representative Florence P. Kahn, of San Francisco, has been unconsciously humming ever since adjournment. It may not be the official State song—at least it didn't receive the benediction of the Women's Federation Council at Hot Springs this month—but to Mrs. Kahn, it expresses California better than any other.

"The music is lilting, gay and typically Californian in spirit," she declared. "The words too, are significant of the things we love out home. The lines speak of bowers of flowers blooming in the sun. They also mention our beloved Golden Gate. There is nothing forced or stilted about the song. It is carefree and friendly like the Californians themselves, and that explains it's wide popularity."

Doesn't Know It.

A verse from the official song for California, which Mrs. Kahn insists she never heard before follows:

"California, thee we sing.
From our hearts thy praises spring.
Let the echoes wake and ring,
Glorious California.
Beauteous land of heart's desire.
Sun is thy baptismal fire,
Softly singing winds thy choir, glorious California."

Wisconsin people prefer to record their historic events in books rather than songs, declared two of her Representatives, M. K. Reilly and C. W. Henney. For this reason the Representatives are willing to give that college favorite "On Wisconsin" their official sanction.

"If we really wanted to boast about our State," declared Representative Reilly. "It would take more than one song to do it. In fact, our paeans of praise would fill an operatic libretto." And with a characteristic twinkle in his blue eyes, he left it to his friend, Representatives Henney, to recount the wonders of the State of Wisconsin.

After the latter had listed everything from Wisconsin's beautiful lakes to her cheese industry, he sang the following verse "On Wisconsin" to prove it was a pretty good song after all:

"On Wisconsin, on Wisconsin,
Grand old Badger State.
We thy loyal sons and daughters,
Hail thee good and great.
On Wisconsin, on Wisconsin,
Champions of the right,
Forward, our motto,
We'll win the fight."

Representative Fred C. Gilchrist, of Laurens, Iowa, not only can sing his State song, but thinks its Nation-wide popularity is ample proof of its distinction.

Tall Corn State.

"Iowa is primarily an agricultural center," he said, "and reference to the 'tall corn' expresses it very well." Then as though some voice from the Laurens chamber of commerce had whispered in his ear he asked:

"Do you know that the soil of Iowa produces more wealth each year than all the gold mines in the world?" As he continued fragmentary packing preparatory to his homeward trip, he tried out a rich barytone voice on the chorus of the familiar song:

"I'm from Ioway, Ioway,
State of all the land,
Joy on every hand,
I'm from Ioway, Ioway,
That's where the tall corn grows."

If any song writer ever attempts to supplant "My Old Kentucky Home" as the official song of that Southern State, he will have not only the Congressional delegation but other indignant Kentuckians to answer to, according to Representative Fred M. Vinson, of Ashland.

"There is no other State song in existence, he declared, "that reaches the classic proportions of 'My Old Kentucky Home.' It is not only dear to all Kentuckians, but has tugged at the heart strings of the entire Nation, for generations. It will never be surpassed," he said.

So, those grown tearful over the shifting of old orders into new, might yet take heart with loyal Kentuckians in that chorus of a changeless song:

"Weep no more, my lady,
Oh weep no more today;
We will sing one song for the old Kentucky home,
For my old Kentucky home far away."

What Today Means

"Cancer."

If July 2 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9:30 to 11:30 a. m., from 2:30 to 4:30 p. m. and from 7:30 to 9:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 6:30 to 8:30 a. m., from 12:30 to 2:30 p. m. and from 4:30 to 6:30 p. m.

This July 2 may prove rather difficult in the way of making and keeping business engagements, due to interruptions. Business possibly will be "spotty," and deals you wish to close might be held in abeyance. Perseverance, however, will be rewarded, so do not allow discouragement in any way to mar your day. Social engagements, already made, should terminate successfully, but this is not an auspicious day to extend an invitation which requires an immediate acceptance.

The woman born on July 2 is, usually, of a rather dominating type. If you were born on this date, you might find it a mighty good policy not to try to force people to do things just the way you want them done. Bear in mind that everyone is entitled to have an opinion of their own. You will be far more popular and happier if you make up your mind to curb the tendency to always "boss" the job. You should be very fortunate in money matters, and do not be surprised if you should receive a substantial sum of money, or something of value. Love is symbolical of happiness where you are concerned. Marriage should prove the remedy for all your troubles.

The child born on July 2, from early childhood, must be taught not to be self-opinionated.

If a man and July 2 is your natal day, you are blessed with an exceptionally keen mentality and an enterprising spirit. If mechanically inclined, the engineering profession in one of its numerous branches offers a great opportunity. The legal and literary fields might also prove profitable. Early marriages may be advisable for men born on this date.

Control Group Is Satisfactory To Wall Street

Commission Expected to Proceed Slowly in Making Changes.

New York, July 1 (U.P.)—"As good as could be expected."

That appeared tonight to be Wall street's opinion of the commission appointed last night by President Roosevelt to regulate the Stock Exchange.

After studying the records of the three Democrats and two Republicans on the commission, the street tonight appeared of this opinion:

John P. Kennedy, New York, Democrat, chairman:

Generally highly considered. He knows the market, has common sense, will not "rock the boat."

Pecora Is Respected.

James M. Landis, Massachusetts, Democrat:

Has had the reputation of being something of a radical with "brain-trust" leanings but is brilliant and stable and ought to prove a helpful counselor to traders who want the exchange placed in a position to demand public confidence.

Ferdinand Pecora, New York, Democrat:

The Street has grown to respect him because of the ability he showed in acting as Government counsel during the recent stock market investigation in Washington.

George C. Mathews, Wisconsin, Republican:

Formerly on the Federal Trade Commission; an expert on the securities act of 1933 covering flotation of new securities; will harmonize the provisions of this act with that of the new 1934 act.

Robert E. Healy, Vermont, Republican:

An expert on corporation practice; dependable.

It was emphasized that only a part of the new securities exchange act goes into effect immediately; that the commission can proceed slowing and give Wall street time to adjust itself to the New Deal.

Traders Encouraged.

With the control commission ready to go to work traders thought higher prices might be expected were it not for three things:

1. The railway pension act signed yesterday by President Roosevelt will hurt some of the carriers and weaken railway securities;
2. The Frazier-Lemke farm mortgage act also signed yesterday by Mr. Roosevelt will discourage general securities activity;
3. July-August usually is a period of little market activity.

Wednesday is the Fourth of July holiday. According to normal procedure—even with clear-cut favorable factors—this should mean dull markets on Monday and Tuesday. But as has been repeatedly observed in Wall street in the last year, normal procedure has been junked in the current stock market.

Business factors included:

Steel production dropped 13 points to 46 per cent of capacity, and further sharp reductions are expected. A number of workers were laid off in Buffalo through decreased operations. Lower prices were instituted by some companies in an effort to attract buying.

Retail trade is undergoing a limited summer slump.

The German situation and the Anglo-German trade difficulties present a problem which concerns the entire financial community.

Youngstown Steel operations Monday will be at 20 per cent of capacity—a drop of 33 points since last Monday—with many mills shut down entirely for the week.

"Street" Gossip Summarized.

The "Street" talked about:

Reports that Glen Alden Coal will declare a 50-cent dividend in July . . . buying of Virginia-Carolina Chemical leading to reports that the company may buy up the 7 per cent stock outstanding.

In some speculative quarters of Poor & Co. . . . American Locomotive's announcement of 42 orders since first of year . . . some interest in Underwood-Elliott-Fisher . . . Royal Typewriter expected to show best sales for first six months of any six-month period in its history . . indications in some circles that the peak of tin prices has been reached . . . continued propaganda for establishment of a pepper futures market here with reports the London "syndicate" has a strangle hold on the present supply . . . increased interest in the corn market, with some public buying, as result of the high temperatures in the Middle West.

Soap Test Proves Gondola Is Ready For Stratosphere

Rapid City, S. Dak., July 1 (AP).—Shaving cream determined today that the thin metal gondola for the stratosphere adventure of Maj. William E. Kepner and Capt. A. W. Stevens is ready.

All last night tests were made to ascertain if the gondola were sufficiently airtight to retain enough oxygen within its walls to keep the pair alive in the rarified air of the stratosphere.

Today Capt. Stevens, scientific observer for the expedition, after checking up on the shaving cream experiments, pronounced the gondola airworthy.

A big Army liquid oxygen generating truck pumped air into the sealed gondola to a pressure of 29 pounds, 14½ pounds above the average pressure here. The air was left in overnight and this morning the gauge still showed 12½ pounds. Shaving cream, lathered on joints and over corked holes drilled to connect wires with scientific instruments, revealed a few small leaks, but Capt. Stevens said that despite the minute leakage the pair could go aloft and stay 24 hours with safety.

A practice inflation and take-off was deferred another day after a glance at the weather maps. There was indication of squalls and unfavorable winds.

By Ralph West Robey.

From the point of view of long term effects it is questionable if any measure passed by the last session of Congress exceeds in importance the Frazier-Lemke bill just signed by the President. To an unusual degree it is a law the effects of which will not be limited to those portions of the economic system it directly concerns. This is because it makes a basic alteration in the relationships between debtors and creditors—an alteration that will tend to undermine the confidence that is essential to a modern credit economy.

The bill itself, it will be recalled, provides a means whereby a farmer with a mortgage on his property is enabled to declare in effect a moratorium for five years. He does this by having himself declared bankrupt by a Federal court. As a part of this process his farm is appraised and thereafter his relation with his creditors is based upon this appraised value.

In the first year he pays 1 per cent of such appraised value. In the second and third years he pays 2½ per cent, and in the fourth and fifth years, 5 per cent. During the sixth year he either has to pay the balance or permit his property to be taken over for the benefit of his creditors. For five years, however, he is permitted to remain in possession of his farm with virtually no payments.

Bill Reverses Usual Debtor-Creditor Relation.

Such an arrangement, it should be noted, goes directly contrary to established practice. Heretofore if a debtor was unable to meet his obligations it has been the legal right of the creditors to force a readjustment and settlement. If the debt was secured by a mortgage such readjustment would come through foreclosure and liquidation. If there were no such special collateral the debtor would be declared bankrupt, his assets liquidated and the proceeds distributed among the creditors on the basis of their priority.

The effect of such a legal procedure has been to assure creditors a right which made it possible for them to lend money. Of course it furnished no guarantee against loss, but at least it enabled them to measure the risk they were taking with greater or lesser accuracy. They could feel sure that as long as the debtor had sufficient assets to cover his debts, they could force payment of his obligations. They knew that the borrower was the first line of defense against losses. Only after he had used all his assets to meet his indebtedness would those from whom he had borrowed money be called upon to absorb losses.

Creditors Forced to Scale Debts and Interest.

Under the Frazier-Lemke bill this relationship is reversed and the creditors are made the first line of defense against losses. The mortgages they hold on farms no longer enable them to protect themselves through foreclosure. On the contrary, they make it possible for the farmer to force his creditors to write off as a loss a part of the debt and then to carry the rest at a rate of interest—1 per cent— that is less than one-half as high as the Government itself has to pay when it borrows money for a comparable period.

The defense the President makes for the bill is that he has "sufficient faith in the honesty of the overwhelming majority of farmers to believe that they will not evade the payment of just debts." Perhaps this faith is justified. It remains true, nevertheless, that if one is to lend money he needs something more than the assurance that the "overwhelming majority" of borrowers will try to pay their debts. He needs the assurance that in case he is unfortunate and lends to one that does not belong to this majority, he can protect himself. The Frazier-Lemke bill eliminates this possibility. As such it is a body blow at the foundation of a credit economy.

Lead Declines $5 Per Ton as Buying Wanes

Zinc Gains $2 as Demand Revives; Copper Quiet; Tin Fluctuates.

New York, July 1 (AP).—Lead declined $5 per ton in the past week owing to poor consuming demand influenced by an unfavorable view of the May statistics, which reported an increase in refined stocks to the largest figure on record.

Buying interest developed at the decline and late in the week demand was said to have absorbed daily smelter intake with the undertone about steady.

On the other hand zinc advanced $2 per ton on moderate demand, as well as firmer sellers' views owing to reports from the Joplin district that a program of mine curtailment would go into effect beginning July 2, following recent large output which had caused consumers to adopt a cautious policy. Prospects for declining steel operations also accounted for some of the earlier unsettlement.

Copper Is Quiet.

Copper was quiet and unchanged at the basis of 9 cents for Blue Eagle delivered in the Connecticut valley. Business continued to be confined largely to small lots to fabricating subsidiaries and the main interest was centered in copper code authority activities, including the securing of temporary buying contracts from United States consumers.

The total obtained thus far is said to represent more than 90 per cent of current copper consumption. Foreign demand was small. Reports by the American Bureau of Metal Statistics indicated that foreign consumption of copper is steadily expanding.

Tin fluctuated irregularly, but within narrow limits, in a quiet market. Consumers were said to be limiting purchases because of the less favorable outlook for third-quarter steel production, although tin plate operations were estimated in the trade as being maintained at 70 per cent of capacity during the current week.

Antimony Is Unchanged.

Antimony was unchanged. Early in the week a slightly easier undertone reflected pressure to sell spots, but firmer conditions were reported later owing to higher Chinese cables and the appearance of bids from Europe.

Sharp reductions of about 12 points in steel ingot production reflected the completion of second quarter specifications, which must be shipped by tonight.

The trade viewed third-quarter prospects with some uncertainty and activity was expected to be dependent upon the amount of stocking during the second quarter, consuming requirements and demand from railroads and the building trades. Price reductions on some grades of sheets have been announced, effective July 7.

Trade Levels Well Sustained, Reports Reveal

New York, July 1.—In its weekly summary of the general business situation, the Standard Statistics Co., of New York, currently comments as follows:

"Broad-scale indexes, such as freight car loadings, continue to give a good picture of sustained business activity, in spite of the seasonal downtrend which is now a normal condition. Operations at the steel mills, however, have had a severe dip of approximately 20 per cent, because of the completion of orders placed in anticipation of higher prices and possible labor troubles. Activity in this and related industries will depend in considerable measure on the success of the automobile trade in working off its accumulated stock of cars, a process which evidently is being hastened by recent price reductions.

"Output of electricity is being well maintained, although it is now little above the level for a year ago, when production was rising rapidly. Stocks of gasoline have declined for 13 weeks, reflecting largely the pick-up in consumption. The outlook for autumn retail trade also has been measurably improved by rains in the drought areas, as well as by higher farm prices and Government relief.

"Broadly considered, recent business trends have been more reassuring than otherwise, and nothing is foreseen in the nearby outlook to disturb confidence."

Packers Report Hog Price Rise

Institute Survey Finds 40 Per Cent June Increase.

Chicago, July 1 (AP).—An increase of more than 40 per cent in hog prices in June was recorded today by the Institute of American Meat Packers.

Improved demand and reduced terminal market receipts were the reasons given for the rise.

In the domestic market smoked hams showed an "unusually strong" demand, the institute noted, with cooked hams a close second and bacon also more popular.

Fresh pork was strong in the middle of the month, but the demand fell off toward the close, with the hot weather.

Export trade in all forms was "only fair," the report added.

Dressed beef prices improved and those of dressed lamb declined in June.

Frances Perkins Elected Trustee.

South Hadley, Mass., July 1 (AP). Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins has been elected a trustee of Mount Holyoke College, it was announced today. She is a graduate of the class of 1902.

Cotton Prices Gain 25 Points During Week

Advance Is Attributed to Drought, Heat and Boll Weevil Damages.

Cotton prices advanced about 25 points during the week. The advance was largely attributed to continued drought and high temperatures in the West, reports of boll weevil infestation in other sections and to the anticipation of Government buying of cotton for relief purposes, along with advances in prices of other commodities and securities.

These factors making for higher prices were partly counterbalanced by reduced activity in the cotton cloth markets, by the prospects of decreased domestic consumption and continued low exports during the remainder of this season.

Cotton Prices Higher.

The average of prices for middling ⅞-inch cotton quoted in the ten designated markets on June 29 was 12.17 cents, compared with 11.94 cents on June 22, and 9.97 cents on the corresponding day last season. Grade premiums and discounts were the same as for the previous week with the ten market average for good middling and strict middling, 47 and 33 points more than middling, and for strict low middling and low middling, 38 and 79 points less than middling.

The premiums for middling 15-16 and 1-inch as quoted by the six markets remained the same as during the previous week at 21 and 59 points more than middling ⅞-inch. The quotation in the Memphis market during the week for middling 1 1-16 inches was reduced 15 points to 115 points on middling ⅞-inch, middling 1⅛ inches was unchanged at 155, and middling 1 3-16 inches was reduced 30 points to 275.

Important Southern spot cotton markets reported increased inquiries compared with the previous week for both foreign and domestic accounts but sales were restricted by the scarcity of offerings at acceptable prices. Reported sales of spot cotton by the ten markets for the week amounted to about 29,000 bales compared with about 25,000 bales the previous week, and although this week's sales were considerably smaller than in the corresponding week last season when they were unusually large, amounting to about 98,000 bales, they were well above the average for several preceding seasons.

Mill Inquiries Increase.

New England cotton markets, especially in the Fall River and Providence areas, reported increased inquiries compared with the previous week, with sales however, restricted. Transactions were largely confined to the lower range of grades in the lengths 1 inch up to and including 1 3-16 inches. Grades above Middling in all lengths were reported more or less neglected.

Southern mill centers reported slightly more inquiries than during the previous week for both prompt and deferred shipments. In some cases deferred shipments extended through May, 1935. Grades and staples mostly inquired for were Strict Low Middling, Middling and Strict Middling in the lengths ⅞-inch up to and including 1 1-32 inches.

World consumption of American cotton during May amounting to 1,135,000 bales, according to the New York Cotton Exchange, was practically unchanged from April, but about 205,000 bales less than during May, 1933. Consumption abroad of American cotton declined during May contrary to the usual seasonal tendency. Total world consumption of American cotton from August 1 to June 1, amounted to 11,621,000 bales.

Farley Reveals Boom in Stamp Collecting

New York, July 1 (AP).—Stamp collecting is booming, Postmaster General James A. Farley disclosed today in a report on stamp sales at the philatelic agency of the Postoffice Department.

During the fiscal year ended June 30, sales of stamps for collection purposes totaled $811,723, against $302,619.54 in the previous year. Stamp collecting, said Farley, has a "distinct educational, geographical, historical and scientific value to the collector and should be encouraged among both the young and the old."

Stocks Turn Dull as Half Of 1934 Passes

Summer Lull and Federal Control Uncertainties Reduce Trading.

New York, July 1 (AP).—The stock market, caught between the uncertainties of summer business trends, and the inauguration of Federal control, ended the first-half of 1934 this week in a state of lethargy such as Wall street had not seen in more than 10 years.

Business news was mixed and confusing. Steel production was drastically curtailed after completion of second-quarter contracts, and prices of automotive steel were reduced, textiles and some other consumers goods lines were dull.

But automobile production was strikingly accelerated; the week's electric power production figures showed a contraseasonal gain boosting the total to the highest in three years, and the movement of freight expanded to close to the spring peak.

Control Board Awaited.

Wall street anxiously waited all the week for President Roosevelt to announce the appointments to the Securities Exchange Commission, which brought securities trading under control of the Government as of midnight last night, but the announcement was delayed until the end of the week.

Professional activity in the market had been almost at a standstill all the month, and it was expected that it would remain extremely meager until the Commission has been operating long enough to make it clear what it considers legitimate trading and what it regards as savoring of manipulation.

With a turnover for the week of a bare 3,000,000 shares—that would have been considered modest for a single session in June of 1933—trading in the stock exchange kept at the lowest levels since 1923 or 1924. The Standard Statistics Co. index of 90 shares held to the extreme range of 1.5 points, and finishing at 77.9, was off two-tenths of a point for the week.

Nash Motors Rally.

Nash Motors rallied more than a point on the restoration of a quarterly dividend of 25 cents on the stock. Steel shares were steady in face of forecasts of another sharp reduction in steel operations next week. Leading rails firmed, with Santa Fe, New York Central and Pennsylvania up fractionally to about a point. U. S. Tobacco touched a new 1934 peak at 111 on a spurt of 4 points in a single transfer of 100 shares.

Chrysler, General Motors and Auburn rallied fractionally. Cram estimated automobile production last week increased 10,606 units to 80,936. Retail automobile sales were reported to be holding better than had been expected recently.

Wheat, which closed ¼ to ½ cent a bushel lower, was an exception to firmness in grain prices. Corn made an extreme gain of a cent. Cotton edged 35 to 45 cents a bale higher. Silver and rubber markets were closed.

Probe Demand Keeps Legislators in Session

Ottawa, Ontario, July 1 (AP).—Demands for a complete airing of riots, fires and other disturbances at Kingston Prison, on Lake Ontario, necessitated continuing sessions of the Canadian Parliament this week.

The stage was set for closing ceremonies Saturday night, but members who insisted on investigating the prison administration rallied sufficient numbers to keep the legislators here.

Dallas Churches Pray For End of Drought

Dallas, Tex., July 1 (AP).—Prayer services beseeching rain, were held in Dallas churches today as an eight-week drought continued in some parts of Texas.

The county agent at Austin said the dryness was most severe on corn and cane crops and was damaging cotton. He estimated the corn crop would be only half that of a normal year.

All Humanity 'Savage,' Finds Famous Woman Wanderer

Aloha Wanderwell Baker Claims Civilization Is "Geographical."

Humanity in all its racial manifestations from the untutored, stone-age tribes that inhabit the yet unexplored reaches of the Amazon Valley to its representatives in modern, present-day America is, at bottom, savage.

You have this on the word of Aloha Wanderwell Baker who, in keeping with her name, has spent the last ten years of her life doing just that—wandering through the continents to peek backstage at the human race.

She, the comely, blonde, mannish widow of Capt. Walter Wanderwell, whose mysterious murder aboard his yacht at Los Angeles two years ago attracted Nation-wide attention, was in Washington yesterday to take her first look at the American Capital, and, incidentally, to arrange for a jaunt into another little known corner of the globe—a jaunt that will be something in the nature of a honeymoon for her and her second husband, Walter Baker, 22-year-old mechanic, whom she married last year.

Wanderwell is a trade name, a name taken by the globe-trotting captain as befitting him as entrepreneur of a travel bureau, the Work Around the World Education Club, to the management of which Mrs. Baker has succeeded. Part of the arrangements to be made by the Bakers during their stay here involves the setting up of headquarters in the Lafayette Hotel for the recruiting of wanderers.

Savagery, according to Mrs. Baker, is relative.

"It depends upon how you look at it," she said. "There is a tribe of South American Indians living near the River of Death in Matto Grosso Province, Brazil, which chews the flesh from the bones of its dead before burying them by hanging the bones in bunches from tree tops. It is quite possible that they, coming to America, might find your marathons and wrestling quite barbarious indeed."

She cited more examples—bull fighting in Spain, war in China. She recalled a gentleman named "One-Armed Sutton," who "stationed himself in China, arranged for an arsenal and provided Chang Tso Lin with the equipment of war." She remembered also a newspaper correspondent who gave Bolivia and Paraguay "enough publicity ultimately to finance the Chaco war" by turning, she said, a Saturday night border brawl into an international incident.

And to those who would travel Mrs. Baker has this advice:

"Go with your hat in your hand and wherever you are they will treat you as a guest."

Here's That New Air-Mail Stamp

Meteor Check-up Shows Sound May Travel at Speed of Light

Old Theory on Acoustics Is Upset by Stories of 'Swishing' in Air.

By Howard W. Blakeslee
(Associated Press Science Editor).

Northfield, Minn., July 1 (AP).—Convincing evidence that a sound traveling in air at the unbelieveable speed of light is given off by meteors is reported in the official journal of astronomers, Popular Astronomy.

Under the familiar laws of acoustics, no air-born sound can travel faster than 1,090 feet a second. Lay stories that big meteors make a swishing sound that travels as fast as their light have been ascribed to imaginations.

But some new facts, which can not be dismissed as imagination, were unearthed by H. H. Nininger, secretary of the Society for Research on Meteorites, when he uncovered the trail of the giant meteor which illuminated New Mexico in 1933. This survey covering thousands of square miles has just been completed.

Report Swishing Sound.

"As with all the meteors investigated," he stated, "there were many people who reported a swishing or whining noise at the instant of the fireball's passage.

"Of course it is at once evident that a sound from the meteor passing 50 to 100 miles from an observer would require minutes to reach him, yet one meets this same story so frequently as to raise the question whether there may not be a method of sound transmission at the velocity of ether waves.

Although Nininger does not attempt to explain the sound as a possible manifestation of an electrical phenomenon, he tells of a huge, luminous cloud 200 miles long and 3 miles in diameter which hung in the sky more than an hour after passage of this meteor.

Cloud was Photographed.

There is no chance for imagination about the cloud. He found the photographs of it. Its height ranged from 50 miles down to below 35. It could be seen 20 miles. He refused at first to believe the stories that it was self-luminous. Scientists said the light must be reflection of sunshine high above the earth, as this meteor was seen not long before sunrise.

But measurement of the photos proved that no sun ray ever struck the cloud. It was too far up in intense cold to be made of hot particles. So an electrical phenomenon is the only present explanation.

Catalonians Today Due to Defy Spain

Madrid Cabinet May Fall in Crisis.

Madrid, July 1 (AP).—Formal defiance of the central Spanish government was expected from the Province of Catalonia tomorrow as the Catalonian cabinet prepared to place in effect its disputed crop cultivation law.

A political crisis at Madrid, with the fate of Premier Samper's cabinet uncertain, was feared in some governmental circles.

The central tribunal of constitutional guarantees had held that semiautonomous Catalonia had no authority to enact the cultivation laws, which embrace a scheme for the return of lands to small holders. The regional cabinet, it was indicated tonight, is determined to disregard the tribunal.

Woman Identified, Man Held in Death

Virginia Hotel Proprietress Is Gun Victim.

Stroudsburg, Pa., July 1 (AP).—The body of a woman with two bullet wounds in the head found last week near Marshalls Creek was identified today as that of Mrs. Mary J. Hastings, of Blue Ridge Springs, Va.

The identification was made by a cousin of Mrs. Hastings, Patrick Deady, of Bridgeport, Conn., and two sheriff's deputies, O. D. Lemon and T. D. Zimmerman, of Blue Ridge Springs.

The deputies said Robert C. Kent, jr., was being held without bail in Roanoke, Va., on a charge of kidnaping Mrs. Hastings, who was the proprietress of the Blue Ridge Springs Hotel. They stated Mrs. Hastings left the hotel with Kent on the night of June 24.

Fetes Scheduled In Prince Georges

Picnic, Games Are Slated on Independence Day.

Plans are complete for Independance Day celebrations at Baden and Leeland, Prince Georges County, Md.

The Ladies Aid of St. Paul's Church will hold its festival in the church grove at Baden. There will be a baseball game between Bradywine and the Martin & Boyd Spring Work team of Washington on the Baden High School grounds.

A dinner, baseball game, slow automobile race, volley ball, dancing and other diversions will mark the program in the St. Barnabas' Church grove at Leeland.

Hot Oklahoma Primary Seen

Murray Claims Neutrality, But Political Foes Flay Anglin.

Oklahoma City, July 1 (AP).—The figure of Gov. William H. (Alfalfa Bill) Murray, who likes his coffee strong and his political battles two-fisted, casts its shadow heavily over the Oklahoma primary election Tuesday.

The man with the bristling mustache has stated emphatically he is not attempting to dictate who will be Oklahoma's next Governor. His foes see it differently.

They have flayed Tom Anglin, speaker of the House, as the administration choice, ready to carry on Murray's program. The list of 15 aspirants includes E. W. Marland, who made and lost a fortune in oil, and Jack Walton, one of the Governors that Oklahoma impeached. Marland, now Representative in Congress from the Eighth Oklahoma District, proclaims himself the "New Deal" candidate. Walton has expressed confidence he will be one of the two high men to engage in a run-off July 24.

Attorney General J. Berry King is seeking the office on a strict anti-Murray plea. Lieut. Gov. Robert Burns has trained his oratorical guns on both Murray and Anglin.

Cat Is Mother of Three Caesarian-Born Kittens

Denver, July 1 (AP).—Three Siamese kittens, delivered by a Caesarian operation, were declared normal today by their owners, Mr. and Mrs. Donald I. Griffith.

The Griffiths paid $115 to H. C. Weigand, a veterinarian, to deliver the kittens. The operation took 20 minutes. The mother was nursing her offspring a few minutes after their birth.

Law Restores 4 Million Rail Pay Monthly

Workers are Jubilant Over Approval of Legislation.

Cleveland, Ohio, July 1 (AP).—More than a million railroaders were jubilant today over a $4,000,000 monthly increase in their pay envelopes and Executive approval of legislation which will retire at least 100,000 on pensions this year.

The wage increase, affecting 1,030,000 men, constitutes a 2½ per cent salary restoration provided in an agreement reached between labor and management April 26.

On January 1, the railroaders will receive another 2½ per cent, and on April 1, 1935 the remaining 5 per cent of the original 10 per cent pay cut of two years ago will be restored.

In addition, the last step in making a Nation-wide pension insurance system effective was taken yesterday when President Roosevelt signed legislation enacted by Congress at the recent session.

"The pension act is the finest piece of railroad legislation since the eight-hour day was achieved in 1916," said Alexander F. Whitney, of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, who retired yesterday as chairman of the Railway Labor Executives Association.

"Railroad men feel that they have obtained two great concessions in the wage restoration and the pension legislation. The first increases our purchasing power by $4,000,000 a month. On the basis of May pay rolls, the increases will mean an increase of $16,000,000 monthly by next April.

"The pension law, which becomes effective in 90 days, will permit retirement of 100,000 men this year alone. Not only will this take care of the men who have broken down in railroad service, but it will help the unemployment problem by elevating the young man who is looking for the opportunity to work.

"The brotherhoods have worked earnestly for four years to get this legislation. Congress and the President can not be commended too highly for coming to the front for the workers at this time."

The pensions legislation provides for deduction of 2 per cent from workers' salaries and 4 per cent from carriers' pay rolls to set up a fund which is expected to consist of at least $90,000,000 a year.

This fund will be administered by a three-man commission appointed by the President. One commissioner will be selected from railroad labor, one from management and the third will represent the public.

Men will be eligible for retirement on reaching 65, completion of 30 years' service with a carrier, or for disability.

Busy Production Season Promises Exhibitors in Excess of 633 Feature Films

Full Schedules Made Known at Sales Meetings

Higher Admissions Sought; President to See Films; Theater Chatter.

By Nelson B. Bell.

A year of extraordinary productional activity confronts the motion-picture industry, if present plans are carried out.

With Columbia Pictures the only one of the larger companies not yet to have held its 1934-35 sales convention, the industry may be said pretty thoroughly to have divulged its projected activities for the ensuing 12 months. Seven major companies, to date, have promised a total of 350 feature pictures fort he impending "season"—a complete misnomer for any entertainment enterprise that functions without cessation 52 weeks a year—and have detailed titles, stories and principal players for 277 of them.

Contemporaneously, 26 independent producers and distributors have signified their intention of releasing at least 243 features for 1934-35, giving the Nation's exhibitors an available 593 pictures from which to chose for their new year. With Columbia's expected 40 features in addition, the total output of features will be raised to the imposing figure of 633. This falls little short of being at the rate of two features a day throughout the year.

May Exceed Estimates.

The figures may even exceed these expectations, for Columbia, as indicated, has made no formal announcement of plans and there are several independents, also, that have made public no release schedules as yet.

Concurrently with the announcement of production and distribution plans for the coming year, there is manifesting itself among the leaders of the industry a concerted policy of stepping up admission charges to keep abreast of returning prosperity.

According to well-grounded reports published in the June 30 issue of Mr. Martin Quigley's Motion Picture Herald, the Warner Brothers have openly declared for a drive to increase admission scales and, as soon as necessary organization can be effected, will launch it. Coincidentally, the company will seek to abolish the showing of "double-feature bills" by withholding product from houses charging less than 15 cents in the afternoon and 20 cents at night.

The "double-feature" bill is something with which Washington has not been appreciably afflicted.

Contracts May Stipulate.

The M. P. H. goes on to say that the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer contracts for the new season may go so far as to stipulate that its features will only be available to houses charging not less than 15-cent admissions. The 15-cent minimum admission suggested itself as a result of improved business conditions in the Chicago territory and other sections of the country.

The foregoing pertains only to feature picture production, distribution and exhibition. If the total output of short subjects were to be gone into exhaustively, the installation of latest improved tabulating machines would be necessary. For instance, M-G-M alone will release 181 short subjects during the next year.

Carry that proportion all the way down the line and it will give you a rough idea!

One learns from the Loew executive offices in the Fox Theater that City Manager Carter Barron, who left town only a few minutes ago to drive Mrs. "Chic" Barron and Carter Tait Barron, jr., to their ancestral home, will be back at his desk tomorrow morning. "Chic" and Baby Carter Tait, jr., will remain in the South for several more weeks to afford the junior member of the family further opportunity to familiarize himself with his distinguished Georgian ancestry.

Pastime for President.

Those who imagine that President Roosevelt, aboard the U. S. S. Houston on a vacation trip into the Caribbean to the Virgin Islands and Puerto Rico, through the Panama Canal and on to Hawaii, will have nothing to do during his hours of relaxation but sit on deck and watch the flying fishes are sorely mistaken.

In addition to a vacation library of 300 books, the ship's motion picture library will carry 40 feature pictures and 35 or 40 short subjects, some of them not yet generally released.

The films were supplied by United Artists, Warner Brothers, Fox, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, RKO-Radio, Universal, Paramount and Columbia. Each film aboard is said to have been checked against a list of more than 300 features President Roosevelt has seen during the past year. Ten of the films have already been viewed by the President, but are being taken along to be shown for the particular enjoyment of the ship's crew.

List of Titles.

The features aboard the Houston are as follows: "The Last Gentleman," "Bulldog Drummond Strikes Back," The Affairs of Cellini," "The Personality Kid," "Dr. Monica," "Fog Over Frisco," "Return of the Terror," "The House on 56th Street," "Baby Take a Bow," Shirley Temple's latest; "Handy Andy," Will Rogers' latest; "Spitfire," "Tarzan and His Mate," "Twenty Million Sweethearts," "Nana," "Manhattan Love Song," "Melody in Spring," "Speedwings," "Half a Sinner," "Little Miss Marker," "The World Moves On," "Murder on the Blackboard," "Cockeyed Cavaliers," "Crime Doctor," "Gambling Lady," "The Mystery of Mr. X," "Viva Villa," "Operator 13" and "I'll Tell the World."

Still More.

"Counsellor at Law," "Scarlet Empress," "The Most Precious Thing in Life," "Twentieth Century," "The Party's Over," "Murder at the Vanities," "Many Happy Returns," "Looking for Trouble," "The Key," "Now I'll Tell,' "Sadie McKee" and "Thirty-Day Princess."

A special portable loudspeaker has been added to the Houston's regular equipment, in the event the President experiences any difficultyhearing from his box high over the well deck, where the rest of the audience is seated. The screen, a 9 by 11 foot sailcloth, will be 45 fee from the President's box—not an exorbitant distance as projection "throws" go.

One of Satrday afternoon's cordial callers was Miss Ruth Abbott, leading woman of this season's National Theater Players, who closed at the National Saturday night. Miss Abbott is one of the most enlivening and most gracious personalities I know. Although looking as cool and unwilted as an orchid on ice, she confessed that last Thursday, Friday and Saturday had pretty well disabused her mind of the notion that she would like to spend the entire summer in Washington—a thought that was engendered when she arrived here last spring with a heavy snow on the ground.

So she departed the Potomac shores Saturday night for New York, where she will plan a midsummer vacation, preparatory to seeking a part in some Broadway production later on. One gathers that, for the time being, at least, Miss Abbott would not be annoyed by the possibility of dodging the necessity of learning a new part every week.

It is pleasant to look back and perceive that all of the enthusiastic things Leona Powers, last year's leading woman, wrote to friends in Washington about Ruth Abbott before the National Players' tenth "little season" opened, turned out to be understatements rather than exaggerations.

Au revoir and good luck to Miss Abbott and all the Players.

Don't Drop a Pin.

Patrons of Loew's Fox Theater are now being made the beneficiaries of the latest invention in the development of the public address system. William Boettcher, of Loew's New York organization, has just made the new installment at a reported cost of $10,000.

This new high fidelity, or wide range, system, as it is known, is the first in Washington. It consists of a sound reenforcement and crooner system. The new mechanism provides a uniform sound volume throughout the theater. That is to say, patrons sitting in the last row of the top balcony can hear every word and every sound emanating from the screen with the same distinctness and clarity as those sitting in the front row of the orchestra.

The new system is said to be so sensitive that heart beats can be heard over it—provided, I presume, that the heart has a "murmur" or one cylinder missing.

Manager Hardie Meakin of RKO-Keith's Theater has changed his system. Instead of announcing a change in opening date of the attraction to follow the current Wheeler and Woolsey whimsy, "Cockeyed Cavalier," Manager Meakin has been content, this time, merely to change the attraction. The latest bulletin from Fifteenth street has it that the feature picture opening on Friday, July 6, will be "Let's Try Again," costarring Diana Wynyard and Clive Brook, who already have scored together in "Cavalcade" and "Where Sinners Meet."

Leslie Howard and Bettie Davis, in "Of Human Bondage," by W. Somerset Maugham, originally announced for the week of July 6, we are assured will come along the following week, on July 13.

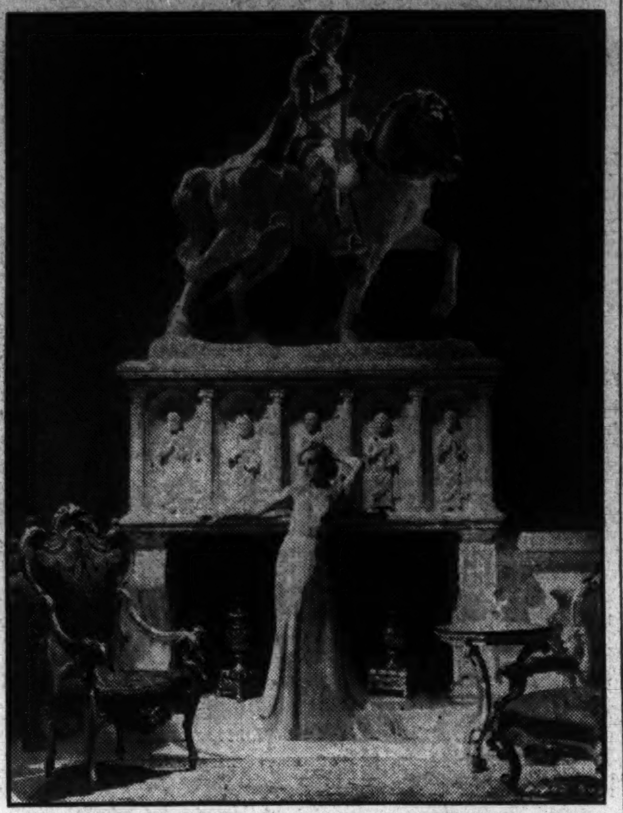
Scofflaw Note.

The usual "noiseless Fourth" has already begun keeping the neighborhood awake at night and awakening it too early in the morning out Gallatin street way, where, apparently, if it isn't wild rabbits to eat up your flower garden, it is high explosives to unravel the sleeve of care you're trying so desperately to knit up.

But then, I have vague recollections—very vague—of having been a boy once myself. And did I pester those bedroom windows at 5 o'clock in the morning!

So, go ahead, kids—and I'll wring your darling little necks if I catch you!

A Star Is Deluded By Setting



When Carole Lombard, one of the blonde beauties of the screen, permitted the "still" cameraman to snap this picture of her it was probably in the thought that the mantel of the grate would look well on her shoulders! The pose was made beween scenes on the set of Paramount's "Now and Forever."

EDDIE CANTOR.

Hollywood, July 1.—When Eddie Cantor finishes work on "Kid Millions," for Samuel Goldwyn, he will leave for his first visit to England in nine years. His wife, their five daughters, his father-in-law, Bennie Holtzmann; his manager, and Frenchie, his major-domo, will go with him. They expect to leave in September.

Eddie thinks it might be cheaper to charter a yacht!

"Travel used to be a great adventure," said Eddie yesterday. "You had a heartbreaking farewell with your family. You might never see them again. What was Yuma going to be like? Would the people in Newark like you? But the newsreels, the travelogues and the rotogravure sections have changed all that. You know Rome as you know your own back yard, and people who have never been in London have their favorite London street."

Eddie will play two benefits for charity in England.

Besides London, Eddie will visit Holland, Belgium and Switzerland with his family. He has never been in the first two countries and he wants to show Switzerland to his eldest daughter, Marjorie.

"I've heard that song about the little Dutch mill so much that I want to investigate and see for myself the song writers have been lying," remarked Eddie.

Pertinent And Impertinent.

Alan Hale was once a member of the Metropolitan Opera Company and he admits that he still can and does sing.

Claudie told us that she and Mr. Shippee will take a honeymoon trip through the Panama Canal . . . Desserts were dainty—oranges filled with orange ice and decorated with orange blossoms.

Helen Twelvetrees told about playing golf. Her mother, an accomplished golfer, had just come from the East. "No, I myself don't play very well," said Helen. "But the game is like acting—even if you don't make good at it, you always hang on, thinking tnat some day you will."

Mrs. Robinson said she brought her daughter, Jeanne, West with her for the summer. Jeanne is not the least interested in acting, but is to become a social service worker, and will take a course in this subject at the University of Chicago next year . . . Mrs. Gleason says that son Russell is all thrilled because, back there in Ogunquit, Me., where he has joined a stock company for the summer, he will appear in "Twelfth Night" with no less great an actress than Maude Adams . . . Ed Breese dashed in to kiss his wife good-by, being on his way to location for a picture . . . Alan Hale, former "heavy," says that since his success in "Little Man, What Now?" in a dashing and sympathetic role, he is through "stepping on flowers and kicking cats" . . . He is up for two important leading roles at Universal . . . And, besides, he is going to talk on the radio on three inventions in which he is interested . . . Hollywood never had any glamour for Lee Tracy until he became an actor, he revealed at Paramount today, where he is heading the cast of "You Belong to Me." "I seldom went to motion picture shows," Tracy said. "And I spent an entire summer in Long Beach the year before I became an actor without once thinking of Hollywood or even wanting to see the studios."

Takoma Park Band Concert Set Tonight

C. Gray; selection, "Bohemian Girl," Balfe; march, "Saber and Spurs," Sousa; concluding with the "Star-Spangled Banner."

Post's Fourth Home Opened

New Model Dwelling on Thirty-First Street Draws Crowds.

Fulfilling, like its predecessors, all the requirements of a Washington Post model dwelling, the fourth exhibit residence to be sponsored by this publication during the current year opened yesterday at 5479 Thirty-first street northwest.

Presented by William H. Saunders Co., Inc., furnished by Hutchison, Inc., and draped by John F. Ligon, it will be open for inspection daily until further notice.

It is one of the display house sensations of the year and delighted many visitors at its initial showing yesterday. It is one of the coziest, best built and best located homes ever offered for the price, $11,950.

To visit this latest fine home presentation, drive out Connecticut avenue to Nebraska avenue and out Nebraska avenue to Thirty-first street, then to the model home.

A. K. Besley to Address Prince Georges Club

World's Largest Door on Way Here

A mighty bronze door, one of two made for the new Archives Building in Washington, is shown above as it started recently on its journey to the Capital. Each door, the largest and heaviest ever built, is 35 feet high, 9 feet wide, 1 foot thick and weighs more than 10 tons. They were made by the John Harsch Bronze & Foundry Co., of Cleveland.

3 Die in Rush To Shore From Humid Capital

One Drowned, Two Killed in Traffic; Today Due to Be Cooler.

Comparatively moderate summer weather prevailed in the Capital yesterday after one of the hottest June weeks in the city's history.

Temperatures ranged from 72 in the early morning hours to a high of 85 at 3 p. m., and Government forecasters promised even more temperate thermometer readings and fair skies for today.

Though lower temperatures put an end to the heavy toll of prostration and death directly chargeable to the heat, an abnormally high humidity again drove thousands to beaches and resorts, killing two in the rush of traffic and one by drowning.

William H. Wright, 27, an Army Signal Corps private stationed at Walter Reed Hospital, was the drowning victim. He was believed to have suffered a heart attack while bathing in the Severn River near Annapolis, Md.

Mrs. Mary Brenna, 59, of 1224 B street northeast, was fatally injured when struck by an automobile, and Robert L. Swann, 24, of Issue, Md., died after his auto hit a telephone pole felled by Saturday's heat-breaking storm.

To the weather casualty list were added Martin Unahan, 10, of 721 H street northeast, who received a fractured skull as he slipped in jumping from an ice wagon at Florida avenue and Eckington place northeast, after a cooling ride; Robert Simmons, 57, of 3141 N street northwest, whose foot was severely cut while bathing in the Potomac near the Key Bridge, and Robert Grayson, 34, colored, of 1937 Wisconsin avenue northwest, who received severe head injuries in falling from a boat near Chain Bridge.

The Unahan boy was taken to Sibley Hospital where his condition was reported critical.

Loudoun County, Va., was cleaning up the debris of one of the most severe storms of the season. Trees were blown down, corn fields laid flat and telephone and telegraph lines put out of commission.

Thomson Center Opens For Season Tomorrow

Thompson Community Center, Twelfth and L streets northwest, under the supervision of Mrs. A. C. Driscoll, community secretary, will open for the summer season tomorrow at 7:30 p. m., when a number of community groups will assemble for weekly activities, including an adult recreation group.

This center will be open Tuesdays from 7 to 10 p. m. regularly throughout July and August and all groups desiring to make use of the facilities at Thompson Center are asked to communicate with Mrs. Driscoll, or the Community Center Department, in Franklin Administration Building, Thirteenth and K streets.

Child Slightly Hurt By Falling Cement Bag

A bag of cement, tossed from the porch of a house at 1302 L street northwest, slightly injured 7-year-old Gertrude Bilbo, of 1226 Thirteenth street northwest, yesterday.

The child, playing near the porch, was struck. It was thrown by an unidentified man, police were told. Gertrude was treated for slight bruises at Georgetown Hospital.

Stop Laughing! Bare Wedding Isn't News! Read Ben's Paper

'Twas in Maryland, Too, With Sheet Between Bride and Pastor.

Ho! Hum!

Just when the public was chuckling over the nudist wedding in Chicago, wondering what these moderns will do next, and dwelling on how the world moves, one of these historians comes forth to remind us that it's nothing new, that, in fact, a similar occurrence was duly reported in the public press 182 years ago.

Charles Mueller, of Milwaukee, and Jean May, of Amarillo, Tex., were married "in the raw" at the Chicago Fair on Friday. The Associated Press duly reported it and The Post printed the story. There were laughs and comments everywhere.

But now Edwin Melvin Williams, 5915 Blair road northwest, appears to remind us that way back in 1752, in Frederick County, Md., there was a wedding in which the bride, as duly chronicled in Benjamin Franklin's Pennsylvania Gazette, participated in her "birthday suit," shielded from the minister only by a sheet held between her and that dignitary by two women. But here's the reprint, as Mr. Williams submits it:

"Annapolis, Jan. 4 (1752).—About a fortnight ago, there happened in Frederick County, in this Province, as comical a Wedding as we remember to have heard of. A Couple, with their Guests (having obtained a license) came to the House of a reverend clergyman, late in the Evening, after he had been some time in Bed, with his Wife, and desired to be married; he, willing to oblige them, got up and dress'd himself, in order ot perform the Ceremony; but the Bridegroom, having imbibed a Notion, that if he married a Woman with any Thing, he should be obliged to pay her all Debts, and not otherwise; and as she came from the Province of New Jersey, he was doubtful about her Circumstances; the obliging Bride, to remove all incumbrances, stripped . . . . and two women held a Sheet between her and the clergyman, while he performed his Office; and she, having forgot her Cap at undressing, it came to her mind in the midst of the Ceremony, and she pull'd that off too, and flung it on the Bed, and was married to her Spouse (if not in a Wedding Suit, in her Birth Day Suit). After the Ceremony, the Bridegroom put on her one of his own Shirts to cover her . . ."

The item appeared in the Pennslyvania Gazette of February 25, 1752, under a head-line "A NAKED TRUTH," with the following editorial comment:

"This Account, the Reader may perhaps look on as improbable and untrue, but he may be assured, it is a certain and naked truth."

D. C. Regiment Marches Off to Charlottesville

Anti-Aircraft Unit Will Hold Maneuvers in Shenandoah.

Three hundred strong, the 260th Coast Artillery, anti-aircraft regiment of the District National Guard, departed yesterday for two weeks of maneuvers in the Shenandoah Valley, and last night was in bivouac in a quarry near Centerville, Va., on the Lee highway. Under command of Maj. Walter W. Burns, the regiment will proceed today to Culpeper and thence to Charlottesville, where it will participate in the Fourth of July celebration.

Thursday morning the troops are scheduled to defend a mountain pass against the Twenty-ninth Division at Afton, later proceeding through Harrisonburg, Elizabeth Furnace, Winchester and Charles Town, W. Va. They will return to Washington through Frederick and Gaithersburg, Md.

Maj. Burns and Lieuts. A. B. Graves and Carl Santilli arranged the itinerary, and Lieut. Graves has arranged a series of officers' and noncommissioned officers' schools each day, with a regimental field inspection next Saturday.

The Headquarters detachment is commanded by William J. Heale; Battery A by Capt. Clifton Royston, Battery E by Lieut. Max G. D. Prentice, the Medical detachment by Maj. S. M. Grayson, Battery B by Capt. Rex P. Mulligan and Battery C by Capt. Perry O. Huff.

The regiment is traveling by truck and will return to Washington on July 15.

Alarm Scares Off Cracksman Gang

Burglars Flee Without Loot From 7th Floor.

Would-be safecrackers visited seventh floor offices of Von Steimer & Baumgartner, manufacturing jewelers, 514 Tenth street northwest, yesterday, but fled empty-handed after setting off a burglar alarm.

The intruders gained entrance to the building by climbing from an adjoining roof. They smashed a window into offices of the American Multigraph Sales Co., ransacked several rooms and finally broke into the jewelers' quarters.

The combination was ripped from a small safe, but nothing taken. The burglar alarm sounded when the robbers opened a wooden cabinet housing a larger safe.

Nine-Foot Plunge Injures D. C. Youth

Robert fell while in pursuit of a hawk, he told physicians. Dunlop lost his footing and fell. He was treated for minor bruises and lacerations.

Program Is Set For Celebration At Monument

Cabinet Members, Other Personages to Watch July 4 Festival.

Distinguished leaders in National life will attend the city-wide Fourth of July ceremonies Wednesday evening at 7:15 o'clock on the North Monument slopes.

Attorney General and Mrs. Homer Cummings, Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Claude Swanson, Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Henry C. Wallace, Senator and Mrs. William H. King and Rear Admiral H. G. Hamlet of the United States Coast Guard, all will be in a huge audience.

Members of the committee and other well-known leaders are taking boxes for this celebration. The ceremony will include massing of the colors by military, patriotic and veteran bodies and a spectacular display of fireworks which will form a climax of the Independence Day's events here.

The boxes and the 8,500 chairs to be placed on the sloping hillsides north of the Monument will insure the funds for the expenses of the occasion, for which $1,000 worth of fireworks have been ordered.

Special rules for handling traffic have been issued by Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, and by Capt. P. J. Carroll, of the park police. All persons are being asked to refrain from bringing any small fireworks to the celebration at the Monument.

Maj. William T. Roy will be the officer in charge of the "procession of flags." All participants are asked to report at 7:15 p. m. July Fourth, at Sixteenth street and Constitution avenue, for instructions.

The committee on tickets is in charge of Harry H. R. Helwig, and the committee has announced that tickets for chairs for the Monument ceremonies are on sale now at the Shoreham, Mayflower, Washington and Willard Hotels, the A. A. A. headquarters, and other downtown ticket bureaus, at 25 cents each. Tickets will also be available all day on July Fourth at the Monument. Seating of the audience will be in the hands of John G. Scharf.

The large number of community celebrations to be held during the day will be in the hands of citizens' bodies in cooperation with the committee on community participation, headed by Thomas Ellis Lodge, and the committee on contests and carnivals, headed by Winfree E. Johnson, with Richard Tennyson as vice chairman.

McElvenny, Welsh Gain Finals

Triumph in Impressive Straight Sets Over Markey, Mangan.

Good and Bad Playing Mark Semifinals at Columbia Club.

By John R. Vosburgh.

A PAIR of hard-hitting veterans of intercollegiate tennis impressively stroked their way into the final round of the annual District championships yesterday afternoon at Columbia Country Club. Tall, angular Barney Welsh, No. 1 man on Duke University's net team, eliminated fighting Tom Mangan, 6—1, 6—4, in short order, and Ralph McElvenny, former Stanford tennis star, nearly as decisively ousted Bud Markey, conqueror of the defending champion, Dooley Mitchell, 7—5, 6—2.

Strive as he might, Mangan, seeded No. 4, whose game the years appear not to affect, could do little to stem the Welsh onslaught. With his pounding service practically assuring him games on his own delivery, Welsh had only to match Mangan's ground-play in order to give him his margin of victory.

Outsteadies Opponent.

The No. 2 seeded Duke ace was equal to the task, actually outsteadying his experienced opponent with an assortment of groundstrokes in which he mixed an aggravating chop with a whistling drive which had Mangan exerting all his efforts merely to keep the ball in play.

From the moment play commenced, Welsh took the upper hand, his whip-lash service time after time giving him needed points at vital intervals either on aces or

Braves Down Phillies In Double Bill, 6-3, 3-0

Boston, July 1 (AP).—The Boston Braves took both ends of a double-header from the Phillies today by scores of 6-3 and 3-0. In shutting out the Phillies in the nightcap Bobby Brown allowed them but five hits, three of them coming off the bat of George Davis. Boston left none on base in the first game to tie a major league record.

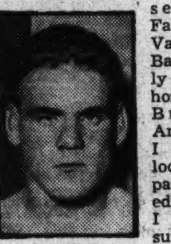
This Morning

With Shirley L. Povich.

I AM taken slightly to task by Mr. Mushky Jackson for the seeming indifference with which The Post regards the pugilistic exploits of his bread-winner, Mr. Reds Barry, the Southeast zephyr who, in his short fistic career, has made more attempted comebacks than the starlings, with not half the success.

From New York comes the dispatch from Mushky, who puts his pen to paper in the interest of Barry:



BARRY

"Dear Sir, Red Barry and myself was in Fairmount, W. Va., where Red Barry decisively beat the home-town boy, Buddy McArthurs * * * I happen to look at your paper Friday's edition, which I was really surprise to see that their was no story about the fight printed in your paper.

"As the local boy from Washington, when he does win a fight, they don't mention it, which he should have his name in your paper and give him a little credit when he wins. Barry look very good in his fight against McArthur, as McArthur never lost a fight in his home town . . . I wish you would say something about his fight in Fairmount as he got the referee and two judges and won very easily.

"Hoping you will give me a little consideration in regards to this letter, I ramain as your—Mushky Jackson."

In behalf of The Post, I plead not guilty. If Mr. Jackson did not see the report of Barry's fight with McArthur in the Friday issue of The Post, I fear that Mr. Jackson's eyesight has become as weak as Barry's punch.

Waving the scepter of its authority over the Washington promotorial field, the District Boxing Commission has called a conference of the promoters for today to correct the evils that have already made its appearance in the Capital's brief siege of legalized larruping, and it is well.

Fan interest quickly reached the saturation point as a result of the haste with which promoters attempted to wean the elusive dollars from the comparatively small Washington fight-going public and the boxing game here is seemingly headed toward the rocks unless preventative action is taken.

Fewer and better fights is the goal of the commission which has gone into debt attempting to sustain its pay roll from the meager proceeds of the fight cards that have been vieing with each other for patronage so frequently that the big gates have been killed off.

Washington can stand one good fight card a week—no more. And, truth to tell, there aren't enough good fighters extant and available to Washington promoters to supply more than one attractive show to the Capital each week.

Neither Frankie Mann, who makes the matches for Joe Turner at Griffith Stadium, nor Goldie Ahearn, the matchmaker at the Riding and Hunt Club, has distinguished himself by his matchmaking acumen. The less seen of plodding heavyweights like Johnny Risko and Natie Brown, the better, and the more seen of sockers like Tony Galento, the better.

Ahearn, particularly, has been a disappointment with his Riding and Hunt Club cards. The only fighter he has brought to Washington with even a chance to popularize himself here is Harry Serody, and for him, Ahearn obtained no opposition.

The commission has the authority to make the promoters toe the line. The 5 per cent takeout that the local commission demands from the gate is indeed a modest cut, and under threat of increasing its "take" to 10 per cent, the commission can force the promoters to thin out their cards with an eye to quality instead of quantity.

Stoefen, Lott, Shields Face Tough Foes

Wood Favored, However, to Advance Today at Wimbledon.

WIMBLEDON, Eng., July 1 (AP). America still held a strong hand—six aces to be exact—as the all-England tennis championship field rested today preparatory to resuming play in the quarter finals tomorrow.

All four members of the American Davis Cup team, Sidney B. Wood, Frank Shields, Lester Stoefen and George Lott, as well as the two Wightman Cup stars, Helen Jacobs, United States champion, and Sarah Palfrey, of Brookline, Mass., still are in the running for the singles titles.

Stoefen Meets Crawford.

Trouble looms just ahead, however, for three of the four male survivors in the upper half of the draw, Stoefen is paried against the defending champion, Jack Crawford, of Australia, and the erratic Shields against H. W. (Bunny) Austin, England's stylish shotmaker whose steadiness is proverbial.

In the lower half, Lott seems to be face to face with summary elimination at the hands of Fred Perry, first ranking English ace and second seeded player. Wood, however, is a distinct favorite over Vernon G. Kirby, of South Africa, despite the latter's upset victory over Gottfried von Cramm, German favorite, yesterday.

Opposes Cilli Aussem.

An all-American final still is a possibility in the women's division with Miss Jacobs in the lower half and Miss Palfrey in the upper. The United States champion's next opponent will be Cilli Aussem, of Germany, while Miss Palfrey will tackle Mme. Rene Mathieu, of France.

If victorious in the quarter finals, Miss Jacobs will play the winner of the match between Margaret (Peggy) Scriven, of England, and Joan Hartigan, of Australia. If Miss Palfrey disposes of Mme. Mathieu, she will meet in the semifinals the survivor of a match between Dorothy Round, of England, and Lolette Payot, of Switzerland.

Veterans Get Call in Poll For Major All-Star Berths

NEW YORK, July 1 (AP).—The Nation's baseball fans, balloting to select the personnel of the all-star American and National League teams which clash in the Polo Grounds here July 10, have decided to string along with stars of established reputation.

The complete results of the poll, announced today, reveal a conspicuous lack of support for the freshman luminaries of the game who have flashed into the headlines for the first time this year. Experience, the public seems to have decided, will be a valuable asset for both teams, meeting for the second time in what is planned as an annual midseason classic. The American League won the first all-star game at Chicago last year, 4 to 2.

Although Joe Cronin, of the Senators, and Bill Terry, of the Giants, managers, respectively, of the American and National League outfits, will not be bound strictly by the results of the Nation-wide balloting, the poll nevertheless will furnish a valuable index when the two teams are selected.

Terry himself polled the largest number of votes of any player in either league. The world champion's manager and first baseman received 121,110 votes, against 120,781 for Charley Gehringer, crack second baseman of the Detroit

Cronin Names Schacht As Aid in All-Star Game

Chicago, July 1 (AP).—Al Schacht, coach and half of the Washington Nationals' comedy team of Schacht and Nick Altrock, was selected today by Joe Cronin, who will lead the American League's forces against the National League in the all-star major battle at New York July 10, as one of his assistants.

Cronin yesterday picked Walter Johnson, former Nat manager, and now pilot of the Cleveland Indians, as his other coach. Joe Fitzgerald, Washington bull pen catcher, also got a break when Cronin named him to catch Eddie Rommel, of the Athletics, who will serve as batting practice pitcher on the day of the big contest.

Giants Conquer Dodgers on Homers

Clouts by Jackson, O'Doul Provide All of Runs in 5-4 Victory.

NEW YORK, July 1 (AP).—Two home runs, hit by Travis Jackson and Lefty O'Doul, accounted for all the New York Giants runs today as the world champions defeated the Brooklyn Dodgers, 5 to 4, in the odd game of the series, played before 16,000.

Except for the home runs, the game was a hurling duel between Hal Schumacher and Leslie Munns, with the latter going the route for the first time and pitching well enough to win most games. He held the Giants to six hits, while the Dodgers nicked Schumacher for seven.

Doyle Reduces Odds on Nats; Now 4 to 1

Detroit Tigers Rise to 2-1; Yankees and Giants Are Favorites.

NEW YORK, July 1 (AP).—A sharp reduction in the odds against the Detroit Tigers winning the American League pennant marks the midseason betting prices announced tonight by Jack Doyle, well-known Broadway commissioner.

Where Doyle quoted 15 to 1 against Mickey Cochrane's club in April, he will give no better than 2 to 1 against the Tigers now. The New York Yankees, jointly favored with Washington at 6 to 5 at the start of the campaign, still are favored at 7 to 5. The Nats have dropped to a third choice at 4 to 1 in Doyle's book. The Chicago White Sox have taken a terrific tumble, from 10 to 1 against in April to 1,000 to 1 against now.

Giants Are 7 to 5.

In the National League Doyle still quotes the New York Giants as favorites at 7 to 5.

Doyle's prices, giving the odds against each club finishing first, second and third, follow:

American League—New York, 7-5, 1-3, 1-6; Detroit, 2-1, 3-5, 1-4; Washington, 4-1, 6-5, 3-5; Boston, 6-1, 8-5, 7-10; Cleveland, 15-1, 3-1, 8-5; St. Louis, 60-1, 15-1, 6-1; Philadelphia, 100-1, 40-1, 20-1; Chicago, 1,000-1, 250-1, 100-1.

Cards Win, 8-6, Over Reds in 18 Innings

Second Game Is Called in Fifth With Score 2-2; 12,00 Look On.

CINCINNATI, July 1 (AP).—St. Louis won an 18-inning game, 8-6, and tied a five-inning game, 2 to 2, in a double-header with Cincinnati here that provided some 12,000 fans with more than six hours of baseball. The second game was called on account of darkness.

The first game was a nip-and-tuck battle until the eighteenth. The result see-sawed until the final frame, when the Cards hit Paul Derringer, who had relieved Tony Frietas, and scored two runs.

Tony and Dizzy Dean pitched 17 innings, but the decision finally went to the eccentric St. Louis twirler, even though he had been lifted for a substitute batter.

Nat Catcher Handicapped Once More

Sewell Called Home as Wife Suffers Attack of Appendicitis.

By Frank H. Young.

MISFORTUNES never come singly, 'tis said, and Luke Sewell, Washington catcher, now subscribes to this theory 100 per cent. He was scheduled to have returned to action behind the bat for yesterday's game; in fact, Manager Joe Cronin had announced him as a starter, when word was received from home that Mrs. Sewell suddenly had been stricken with an attack of acute appendicitis. So Luke, of course, immediately forgot all about baseball and hustled home. He returned before the game was over when advised that Mrs. Sewell's illness was not critical.

This is the third stroke of ill luck which the first-string catcher has suffered this season. In training, while playing the Clevelands well before the start of the season, a foul off Joe Vosmik's bat injured a finger so severely that he was unable to play in a regular game until June 13.

In his tenth game, not all complete ones, after getting back into harness—on June 26, to be exact—Sewell was hit in the head by a wild heave by Pitcher Irving Hadley, of the Browns, and brain concussion was feared. The injury proved not to be serious, however, and he was planned to try again yesterday when called away by Mrs. Sewell's illness.

Babe Ruth Reports Ill.

Babe Ruth came down with a mild attack of ptomaine poisoning yesterday morning and so was missing from the Yankee line-up. The Bambino is not expected to miss more than a couple of games. As a result of Ruth's absence, the Yanks started a right-handed hitting outfield yesterday for the first time in years. Sammy Byrd, the great golfer, filled in for the Babe in right.

The Nats leave for Philadelphia this morning, where they are booked for single games this afternoon and tomorrow. The two return to Washington tomorrow night for a July Fourth double-header. Al Thomas will hurl for the Nats today.

This holiday twin-bill will mark the Nats' last appearance here until Saturday, July 28, when they meet the Red Sox in a double-header. They leave for New York Wednesday night, play a four-game series

Broaca Tight in Pinches; Dickey Hits Homer as Whitehill Bows.

By Shirley L. Povich
(Sports Editor of The Post).

YOUNG Johnny Broaca, who was graduated from Yale last month to a job on the Yankee pitching staff, introduced himself to the Nats yesterday and the pleasure of the meeting was entirely Broaca's, what with the Nats being held to seven hits.

The Nats sent Earl Whitehill, an old hand, out to tilt with Broaca on the pitching mound at Griffith Stadium, but a home run off the bat of Bill Dickey with a man on base persuaded Manager Joe Cronin to persuade Whitehill to leave the scene in the sixth inning. The upshot of the matter was that the Yankees won the ball game, 5 to 2, and nursed their winning streak safely through its seventh game in full view of 15,000 fans.

Yanks Increase Lead.

The effect of Broaca's peformance was two-fold, sending the Yankees into a one-game lead over the Tigers, who split a twin bill with the Browns yesterday at St. Louis, and dropping the Nats into fifth place behind the revivified Red Sox, who ground the Athletics under foot up in Philadelphia.

There was nothing spectacular about the pitching of the bespectacled Broaca—just a good day's work by a journeyman pitcher, but his control was perfect. Nary a Nat did he walk, and in the one inning that he appeared in distress, he whipped a nice fast ball into the plate that delivered him from jeopardy.

One reason the Nats didn't win was because they didn't get any runners on base after Joe Cronin made the seventh hit off Broaca with none out in the sixth inning. After that, the college lad retired the next twelve batters in one-two-three order, which is letter perfect.

Score In First.

The Nats led the Yankees for about five minutes at the start of the game. Buddy Myer, who was

Millers Win Section B Crown

Rout Griffith Blue Coals in Series Final, 13-5; Porter Effective.

Pig 'n Whistle, St. Joe's Are Among Winers in Section A.

MILLER FURNITURE gained Section B first-half title in the National City League of The Post Association yesterday by defeating Griffith's Blue Coals, 13 to 5, in the final of a championship series, which saw the Blue Coals eliminate the Dor-A Team, 4 to 3, in the opener of a double-header on the Ellipse.

Hugh Waldrop's Pif 'n' Whistle nine bunched three of its four hits to nose out Congress Heights, 3 to 2, in the feature battle of Section A, which launched its second-half play. St. Joseph's routed Federals, 21 to 3; R. G. Dunne beat Wash B. Williams, 6 to 3, and Murphy's 5 & 10 Store, behind the pitching of Payne, shut out Gordon's Cafeteria, 7 to , in the other Section A openers.

Piles Up Eight Runs.

Blasting the offerings of tired Blue Coal pitchers all over the lot in the second and third innings, the Miller team, led by Milton Riegleman and Waverly Wheeler, piled up eight runs to sew up the game. Under this advantage, Joe Porter, the Millers' ace hurler, coasted along, bearing down in the pinches. Reigleman's home rn in the seventh, with Nelson on base, assured victory for the Furniture team. It was Jack Wesley's brilliant pitching that won for the Blue Coals over the hard-hitting Dor-A nine, which was held to five scattered hits. Joe Keegin, former Eastern High star, collected three of these.

Edger "Giggles" Adair, hurling for Pig 'n' Whistles, won his own game when his double in the second inning scored Watt with the deciding run. Adair struck out 13 of the Heights batsmen and scattered his opponents' seven hits. Wahler also pitched a bang-up game, giving the Pigs only four hits.

Other Features.

Prominent in other games were the two-hit pitching performance of Payne for Murph's Store, the hitting of Marvin Brown in R. G. Dunne's win, and the slugging of Long, Bozek, Roberts, Cinotti (six for six), and Pusaterri in the St. Joe-Federal tilt.

Heights Takes First Half Pennant

Pohl Wins His 6th in Row in Beating Jewelers by 9-4 Score.

AUSTIN POHL, whose pitching has been the sensation of the District Independent League, added the strong Ross Jewelers to his list of victims yesterday as Capitol Heights won, 9 to 4, to gain the first-half title in its battle for The Washington Post Sandlot Baseball Association.

Duvall hurled D. G. S. Warehouse to a 7-5 victory over the Compensation Commission;; Mount Rainier shut out Kenilworth. 4 to 0, behind the fine twirling of Billy Liggett, and Postal A. C. beat the Grace A. C. by the score of 6 to 4.

Pohl retired 11 via the strike-out route and limited the opposition to four hits, in winning his sixth straight league victory for the Heights. Without taking any credit from Capital Heights, it is doubtful whether the Suburban Nine would have won as easily had Spencer Usilton, the Jewelers' ace, been able to pitch. A sore shoulder made it impossible for Usilton to throw a ball with any degree of speed and he was shifted to the outfield.

Infield Is Unsteady.

The Jewelers' infield was unsteady in the early innings and Capitol Heights took full advantage of several errors to pile up a substantial lead. Lare and Keister blazed the way with their hitting, each getting two hits in four times at bat.

Patterson's three bingles featured the hard-fought victory of the Warehouse Nine over the Compensation Team. Duval, winning pitcher, gave up only 4 hits.

Billy Liggett, granting only four safeties, was seldom threatened as Grenn and Scott produced hits at the opportune time in Mount Rainier Grays' 4-0 victory over Kenilworth. Hudson also turned in a creditable performance.

Hurling a Feature.

The hurling of Al Williams and the batting of Forsythe were the chief factors in Postal's surprising victory.

Woodbridge Car Race Captured by Ted Horn

Woodbridge, N. J., July 1 (AP).—Ted Horn, of Los Angeles, Calif., today won the 0-mile feature automobile race at the Woodbirdge speedway. The race, originally scheduled for 25 miles, was cut to 20 due to the "crackup" of Malcolm Fox, of Philadelphia.

Fox on the twenty-seventh lap hit the top guard rail on the three-quarter turn. He was thrown clear of the car, and suffered only slight injuries to his arm.

Horn swept all the events in which he participated.

3 Store Teams In Deadlock For Lead

Managers of Palais Royal Hecht and Kann's to Set Play-Off.

KANN'S young and spirited ball club climbed into the scramble for Post Association honors in the Departmental Store League yesterday by defeating the league-leading Palais Royal nine, 5 to 4. These teams now share first place with Hecht's in a triple tie.

A meeting of the managers has been called for today to arrange the play-off series.

Kann's came through with a rally in the final inning to put over the winning run. Bob Wallach, the Kannsmen's ace hurler, settled down after a shaky start and was invincible in the pinches as the game drew to a close.

Bassin Bat Leader.

Harry Bassin and Joe Mills were outstanding in the play of the victors. Bassin led the teams in hitting, while the daring baserunning of Mills paved the way for three of Kann's five runs.

Clarendon Jrs. Are Defeated By Maids

Merchant Is Hero at Bat as Leaders' March Is Halted, 9 to 6.

WASHINGTON MAID halted the pennant march of the Clarendon Juniors in the National City Junior League yesterday, when it beat the lague leaders by the score of 9-to-6. Clarendon Juniors will now meet Eastern All-Stars in the deciding game for The Washington Post Association honors.

A betting uprising in the eighth inning, good for six runs, decided the issue in favor of Washington Maid. Clarendon countered gamely in its half of the inning, but was unable to overcome the advantage of the enemy, as McIntosh settled down after allowing four runs.

Merchant Hero at Bat.

Bob Merchant, with four hits in as many times at bat, was the batting hero of the day, although Schwab, of Clarendon, pressed him for honors with his fine stickwork, which included a listy home run clout. Behind McIntosh the Maid infield played a fine defensive game, turning in three fast double plays to cut off several Clarendon rallies. The game was called in the eighth besause of expiration of time limit for the diamond.

Hall Crushes Sutter For Eastern Net Title

New York, July 1 (AP).—J. Gilbert Hall, of South Orange, N. J., won the Eastern clay courts singles tennis championship today by defeating Clifford Sutter, of New Orleans, 6—3, 3—6, 6—3, 6—2.

Save for the second set, Hall, the defending champion, held Sutter under subjection all the way.

White Star Nine Wins North Va. Feature

Beats Clarendons in 10th; Middleburg and Falls Church Score.

EXCELLENT hurling performances and a few slugging exhibitions characterized yesterday's games of the Northern Virginia League as the teams battled their way through the third round in quest of The Post Association title.

White Star Market won a ten-inning thriller from Clarendon Business Men's Association by a 3-2 score; Francis Jones' granted only three hits as Falls Church defeated McLean, 6 to 2; Middleburg stamped itself as one of the outstanding contenders by its impressive victory over Arlington in a 6-1 game on the latter's field, and Park Lane yielded to Fairfax Station in a 4-1 contest.

Go On Hitting Sprees.

The Ballston and Manassas teams went on hitting sprees, each whacking out a total of 22 hits during the slugfests. Ballston routed the Fort Myer nine, 17 to 3, and Manassas surprised the strong Herndon Market nine with a batting assault to bury Herndon under a 19-3 score. A. Mahoney, Fairfax Station; Donaldson, White Star Market; Furr, Middleburg, and Jones, Falls Church, shared the day's pitching honors. McQuinn, Wolverton and Purvis (five for six) of Ballston, and Woodward, Saunders, Wardman, Kidwell, of Manassas, grabbed the hitting laurels. The fine performances of Mohler and Keys for Fairfax; Davis, of White Star, and Clarence Fox, of Falls Church, were also chief factors in their teams' victories.

Rutgers Team Retains Outboard Racing Title

Individual honors were captured by Gar Wood, jr., of Algonac High School (Michigan), son of the world speedboat champion. Wood won four championships in class B and C.

Assuerus Victorious In Saint Cloud Race

Saint Cloud, France, July 1 (AP). Count de Rivaud's Assuerus defeated the Begum Aga Khan's Mas d'Antibes by a length and a half in the Prix President de la Republique today. Edouard Jonas' Marvillars was third. The winner paid 20 francs for 5.

The race carried a purse of 300,000 francs (about $19,770).

Simpson's Nine Captures 5th Straight

Defeats Locksmiths, 10-3; Service Cleaners and Versis Also Win.

SIMPSON'S PHARMACY continued to set the pace for The Post Association championship in the National City Midget League by defeating Wizard Locksmiths, 10 to 3, yesterday for its fifth consecutive victory. Service Cleaners trimmed the Jack Pry Nats, 8 to 2; Versis Food Products came from behind with a 4-run rally in the ninth inning to overcome Schwartz Cleaners, 7 to 5, and Sligo forfeited to Clarendon in other league battles.

Coakley and Bob Merchant were chiefly responsible for Simpson's decisive win over the Wizards. Coakley pitched effectively throughout, permitting only 5 hits, while Merchant's three timely hits put his team far in the lead.

Prominent in the other games was the sparkling performances of Joe Slattery, Larner Kelpy, Poole, Southcombe and Pennbroke.

Bokar Extends Streak to 7 In Rout

Encore and Condor Victors in Other A. & P. Loop Encounters.

BOKAR extended its winning streak to seven straight games in its drive for Post Association honors by routing Bonday, 16 to 9, in the Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. League yesterday.

Encore hung close to the heels of the leaders by winning from Rajah in a 5-4 thriller, and Iona bowed to Condor, 6 to 4, in other games.

Cecil, Gregory, Waple and Ensor fattened their batting averages considerably in Bokar's 22-hit assault on the Bonday pitchers. Johnson hit a home run for the losers.

Rajah staged a desperate rally in the last inning in an effort to overcome Encore's advantage, but fell one short of tying the score. Rhyne's circuit clout was the feature of the game.

Gets Two in Sixth.

Led by Preston and Moore, Condor pushed across two runs in the sixth to break up an interesting hurling duel between Claggett and Johnson. Claggett, the winner, struck out 12 Iona batsmen.

Cincinnati Grid Pros Acquire New Players

New York, July 1 (AP).—The Cincinnati Club of the National Professional Football League put in a busy day as the league's annual meeting concluded today.

Dr. Scott Kearns and Myron Greentree, directors of the club, announced the Reds had obtained Tay Brown, former Southern California tackle, and Marger Aspit, former U. S. C. back, from Boston in exchange for Frank Abbruzzino, former Colgate captain. They bought the contract of John Lyons, Tulsa end, from the Chicago Cardinals, and took over the contract of Frank Stevenson, Arizona back, from the Chicago Bears.

Elmer Critchfield, guard of Grove City College, goes from Pittsburgh to Cincinnati for Jim Bausch, former all-around athlete at Kansas. The Reds also signed Jim Dildie, end, and Bo Kirkland, guard of the Alabama team of last year, and sent Ray Smith, center from Missouri, to Brooklyn for a player to be named later.

Chevy Chase Shut Out By St. Mary's Celtics

Alexandria, Va., July 1 (Spl.).—The effective pitching and timely hitting of Archie Scrivner enabled the St. Mary's Celtics to blank the Chevy Chase Grays today at Baggett's, 5 to 0.

Scrivner led both teams with the willow, getting a double and two singles in three appearances.

Women's District Net Play To Open Today at Columbia

WITH entries from Washington, Baltimore, Philadelphia, Richmond and Morgantown, W. Va., pratically even choices to carry off the title, the annual Women's District Tennis championships opening this afternoon at the Columbia Country Club promises to be a warm and wide open scramble.

While the 1933 champion, Louise Hofmeister, of Chicago, is traveling abroad and unable to defend her crown, some of the outstanding luminaries in women's tennis of the South and Middle Atlantic sector will be bittling with Washington's top-ranking players for the championship which a Washington player has not won for years. First and second round matches will be played today.

Heading the seeded list in the draw made yesterday is Reba Kirson, of Baltimore, runner-up last year. Mrs. Ruth Martinez, the Capital's No. 1 ranking player, was seeded second; Frances Grimes, of Morgantown, third, and Charlotte Darling, of Philadelphia, fourth. Miss Grimes was finalist in the annual Wardman Park tournament last summer and is one of the ranking stars of the Middle Atlantic section. Miss Darling is one of Philadelphia's foremost feminine players.

Tournament officials also felt justified in "placing" the following players: Mrs. Dorette Miller, powerful-stroking Washington star; Margaret Anderson, of Richmond, and Mary Ryan and Peggy Keyser, of Washington. The doubles draw will be made this evening. Play to commence tomorrow.

None of the seeded entries will be meeting particularly tough opposition in their opening matches today. Miss Kirson faces Eleanor Finckel, of Washington; Mrs. Martinez meets Eleanor Colston, of Baltimore; Miss Grimes plays Lisa Bloede, of Baltimore, and Miss Darling opens against Mrs. Connie Thompson, of Washington.

Mrs. Miller meets an unknown quantity in Mary Cootes, of Smith College; Miss Anderson clashes with Ruth Collada, Miss Ryan faces Betty Whitfield, and Miss Keyser plays Mary Jane Underwood.

2 o'clock—Ruth Martinez vs. Eleanor Colston, Baltimore; Margaret Anderson, Richmond, vs. Ruth Collada; Frances Grimes, Morgantown, W. Va., vs. Lisa Bloede, Baltimore; Corinne Frazier vs. Edith Hahs, Philadelphia; Martha Osborne vs. Eleanor Craven; Kay Johnson vs. Rebie Ford.

3 o'clock—Reba Kirson, Baltimore, vs. Eleanor Finckel; Charlotte Darling, Philadelphia, vs. Mrs. Connie Thompson; Eleanor Cooper, Baltimore, vs. Betty Cochran; Peggy Keyser vs. Mary Jane Underwood.

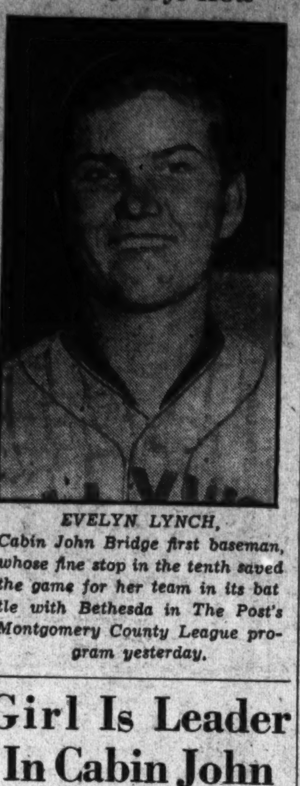
Shows Boys How



EVELYN LYNCH, Cabin John Bridge first baseman, whose fine stop in the tenth saved the game for her team in its battle with Bethesda in The Post's Montgomery County League program yesterday.

Girl Is Leader In Cabin John Triumph

Evelyn Lynch Saves Game With Great Catch as Bethesda Bows.

EVELYN LYNCH, former star of the famed Bloomer Girls baseball team, now playing with Cabin John in the Montgomery County League, saved the game with a spectacular catch of Bayer's line drive yesterday in the tenth inning, which ended the game in favor of Cabin John over the Bethesda A. C. by score of 9 to 8.

White Haven defeated Langdon Mills, 6 to 1, and North Washington routed Wheaton A. C., 26 to 4, to share the league's leading position with Cabin John in a triple deadlock.

Miss Lynch also was conspicuous in Cabin John's 3-run rally in the eighth, which tied the score and enabled it to win out in the tenth. In her two times at bat she banged out a single and was given a walk. Bernard and Parkhill led the hitting, while H. Best and Guyer were outstanding for Bethesda.

Feature in Hitting.

The hitting of George Robey and Jack Kaldenbach and the effective hurling of Calhoun proved the downfall of Langdon Mills, while Liezear, Ed Daniels, Schnable and Demott feasted on base hits at the expense of the Wheaton pitchers.

Entries should be filed on the regular U. S. G. A. public links entry blanks, which may be procured from Al Farr and Ed Burns at East Potomac and B. Harry Graham at Rock Creek.

Former Coast Pitcher Hurls No Hit-Run Game

Stockton, Calif., July 1 (AP).—A no-hit no-run game was turned in here today by Elmer (Spec) Shea, veteran former Coast League pitcher, as he hurled the Stockton Amblers to an 8-to-0 victory over Burlingame in a State League contest.

Only five invaders reached first base, three on walks and two on errors. Shea, a right-hander, struck out six.

Mathias Hurls No-Hit Game; Wins, 6-0

Blanks Anacostia Eagles for Colmar Manor in County League.

FOSTER MATHIAS, making his second appearance on the diamond this season, pitched a no-hit, no-run game yesterday against Anacostia Eagles as the Colmar Manor team won, 6 to 0, in the outstanding Prince Georges County League game. Joe Sullivan allowed only three bingles as Benning A. C. retained the league leadership by disposing of Stadium A. C., 3 to 1, and Mount Rainier A. C. white washed the Sigma Alpha Kappa nine in an 8-0 contest.

Pitcher Mathias was out the first of the season because of illness. In his brilliant feat yesterday he was ably supported by his brother, who played a heads-up game behind the plate. Gilbertson's home run in the eighth with two men on base was the feature of Colmar Manor's attack. Smootz' hitting also was an important factor.

Wilson Is Effective.

Purci Wilson turned in another impressive bit of pitching, limiting the S. A. K. nine to three hits, as Mount Rainier came through with timely hits to amass a substantial lead.

A lad by the name of Veihmeyer and his bat was the nemesis of Heinie Newman in the Benning-Stadium game. Two of Veihmeyer's three hits scored enough runs to beat the Stadium team under the circumstances, the same being the excellent 3-hit twirling of Sullivan.

District Police Beaten By Rally at Annapolis

Annapolis, July 1 (Spl.).—Deadlocked at 5 to 5 as they went into the ninth inning, both the Metropolitan Police nine, of Washington, and the Annapolis Baseball Club staged final rallies, with the home team getting the better of it, and winning, 8 to 7. It looked rather blue for Annapolis after the Coppers put their two runs across, but the locals made it a dramatic finish, when Oscar Johnson, heavy hitting outfielder, poled one over the fence for the circuit, sending two runners home ahead of him.

Three of the Blue Coat regulars failed to put in their appearance, so local talent was recruited in order to stage the battle. Woytych started o nthe mound for Annapolis and went well for four innings. The Coppers found him in the fifth, and he gave way to Southpaw Catlin. Kane and Williams were on the receiving end for Annapolis. Murphy went the full route for the Policemen.

Catoctin Club Beaten By Manor Golf Team

Frederick, Md., July 1 (Spl.).—A 12-man golf team from the Manor Club, of Norbeck, Md., defeated the Catochin Conutry Club team, 12½ to 8½, here today. A return match will be played on July 22 at Manor.

In the feature match of the day, Al Treder, visiting pro, and Harry Pitt, star District golfer, broke even with Leo Colliflower, host pro, and Hirman Smith, club champion. Pitt set the pace with a 74. Treder and Colliflower scored 76s, each, and Smith a 78.

Chesapeake Tossers Beat Marines, 7 to 6

West Point, Va., July 1 (Spl.). Chesapeake team of this town defeated the Quantico Marines, 7 to 6, for the second time within a week. The game went 10 innings. Red Rhea, Birmingham, Ala., right-hander, hurling for the Marines, was bested by Tom Proctor, former minor league twirler, in a pitching duel.

Chesapeake has won 21 of its last 25 games.

The West Point team won out on two successive hits in the extra inning.

The Marines meet the Washington, D. C., semipro team, Chevy Chase Grays, tomorrow afternoon.

Sasscer Beats Nolan, 2 and 1, in See-Saw Battle to Win Indian Spring Golf Title

Each Shoots 150 Medal In Finals

Baggett, Williams and Brown Bogey Victors at Beaver Dam.

Dr. Huffman Cards a 72 in Washington Club Tournament.

LEROY SASSCER, one of the hardy golf veterans, sounded a bit of warning to fellow companions at Indian Spring Country Club yesterday by winning the Tribal Bowl championship in the 36-hole finals with M. Parker Nolan, the Don Juan of the fairways. Sasscer triumphed by 2 and 1 in a tight battle that saw the lead change hands at least half a dozen times. Sasscer was 1 up at the end of the morning's play. Each had a medal of 150 for the 36 holes.

John C. Holzberg and Dan Freshman, with 70—8—62, won the best two twosome event at Indian Spring. C. S. Runswick and H. H. Schinnick, with 77—12—65, were second, and E. B. Wagner and G. W. Buehm, with 75—9—66, third.

R. M. Brown, Frank M. Baggett and C. Williams were the winners in the first flight of the modified blind bogey at Beaver Dam. L. E. Meany, E. R. Strong and H. L. Jones won in the second flight; L. F. Johnson, J. Goings and P. Nutwell in the third flight, and B. Kimbell, V. Cameron and J. H. Vance in the fourth flight.

I. J. Mazo, with 100—30—70, won the sweepstakes at Woodmont. Lester Olian, 83—11—72, and Cecil Kaufman, 94—22—72, tied for second.

The thrill that comes once in a lifetime to a golfer came to Dr. G. F. Huffman yesterday at Washington Golf and Country Club, where he scoring a sizzling 72 in a match play against par tournament. Dr. Huffman had a brace of 36's, finishing 8 up on par, and turned in the greatest score of his links career. His handicap was 11.

F. L. Marx, 3 up, with an 11 allowance, was second; W. F. Persons, 1 up, 10 allowances, third; J. Hartfield, 1 up, 10 allowance, fourth, and Charlie Molster, 1 up, 18 handicaps, fifth.

Roland Mackenzie, Congressional pro, played his course for the fourth time in six days in 70 or better. Yesterday he banged out a 36—33—69. On consecutive days last week he had 68, 69, 70. His 68 included a 31 on the back nine. Those who played with Roland yesterday were Frank Cooper and Dick Mullowney. His card:

Chisox and Indians Split Double-Header

Chicago, July 1 (AP).—Cleveland and the White Sox divided a double-header before 14,000 fans today, the Indians taking the second game, 1 to 3, in 11 innings, after the Chicagoans won the opener, 12 to 5. They also split the series with two victories each.

Willie Kamm's single with the bases loaded in the eleventh scored Sam Rice with the winning run in the nightcap, after Hal Trosky's fifteenth home run of the season tied the score at 3-all in the eighth.

there, and then hike West for their second invasion of the year.

Myer came in fast for Dickey's slow hopper to throw him out at first by a whisker for the third out in the third. It was a great play and came in particularly handy, for Byrd was crossing the plate with the third Yankee run of the inning at the time.

Gehrig made a great try for Manush's foul in the home third, reaching over into the field-boxes in short right for it. He caught the ball but dropped it while trying to prevent himself from falling into the seats.

Pitcher Bob Kline was all be decked in a new Nat uniform yesterday. They could not think of any number big enough to cover Bob's back so left it blank. It is reliably reported the club plans to rent it out as advertising space.

McColl received a wicked clout on his right knee from Heffner's bat in the eighth, but insisted upon remaining in the game. The clout came after the batter apparently had struck out, but Umpire McGowan ruled that his swing had not quite reached the plate.

All-Star Berths Given Veterans

Tigers, and 120,141 for Frankie Frisch, manager and second baseman of the St. Louis Cardinals.

Although he failed to threaten these figures, Babe Ruth, admittedly playing his last season for the Yankees, topped all American League outfielders with 114,999.

Left-handers dominated the balloting for the American League pitchers, Vernon Gomez, of the Yankees; Earl Whitehill, of the Nationals, and Bob Grove, of the Red Sox, finishing on top in that order. Gomez' 84,712 votes gave him a wide lead over all rivals in that contest.

Carl Hubbell, the Giants' southpaw world series hero, led the National League pitchers with 86,048 votes, but trailing him were two right-handers, Jerome (Dizzy) Dean, of the Cardinals, with 62,201, and Lon Warneke, of the Cubs, with 56,928.

Gehrig Tops Foxx.

Gehringer was so far out in front in the battle for second base in the Americna League there was no contest. Manager Jimmy Dykes, of the White Sox, enjoyed a wide lead over Pinky Higgins, of the Athletics, for third, and Cronin outdistanced all shortstop rivals. Bill Dickey beat Mickey Cochrane, Detroit manager, decisively for the first-string catching berth. Ruth, Earl Averill of the Indians, and Heinie Manush of the Senators, would form the first-string outfield on the basis of the balloting.

With Terry and Frisch dominating the first and second-base situations in the National League, Travis Jackson, of the Giants, was chosen shortstop with 82,430 votes, against 27,340 for Arky Vaughan, sensational Pirate youngster. Pie Traynor, Pirate manager, polled 115,018 votes, against 6,696 for Pepper Martin, of the Cardinals, for third base, and Al Lopez, of Brooklyn, defeated Gabby Hartnett, of the Cubs, 77,785 to 38,820, for the backstopping post. Klein, Joe Medwick of the Cardinals, and Walter Berger of the Braves, would furnish the first-string outfield trio.

Harper Downs Burke for Golf Title

Wins Third Virginia Crown 7 and 5; Has Subpar 69 Morning Round.

PRINCESS ANNE COUNTRY CLUB, Virginia Beach, Va., July 1 (AP).—Cracking one stroke from par through 31 holes of match play, Chandler Harper, 20-year-old Portsmouth shotmaker, defeated Aulick Burke, of Petersburg, 7 and 5, to win his third State amateur golf championship here today.

Chandler clipped three strokes from par with a dazzling morning round of 69 and coasted to victory in the afternoon despite Burke's courageous comeback effort.

His victory gave the Portsmouth ace a bigger niche in Virginia's hall of golfing fame, tying the record of Billy Howell, of Richmond, who also has three championships to his credit.

Happy Day for Family.

It was a happy day for the Harper family, which yesterday watched little Lily, Chandler's 17-year-old sister, win the women's amateur over the nearby Cavalier course.

Starting the afternoon round with a discouraging six-hole deficit to overcome, Burke played gallantly, but Chandler's experience and steadiness under fire counted almost as much as his remarkable shots.

Burke reduced the champion's margin to 5 holes on the eleventh hole of the afternoon round, with a sensational 25-foot putt that fell for a birdie 3, but he smashed his drive into the woods from the twelfth tee and Chandler was 6 up again with a well-played par 4.

Settles Issue on 13th.

Chandler settled the issue on the thirteenth, sending his tee shot far down the fairway and pitching his second within 10 feet of the cup. Burke, in the woods again after a vicious slice, came out nicely and sent his third to the green. When Harper curled his putt to within a few inches of the cup, Aulick, needing a long putt for a half which would have done him no good, conceded.

Harper, two over par for the afternoon, played one of his most sensational rounds in the morning, when he finished with a 69 despite a dismal start. His morning card showed 6 birdies, three of them in a row on the par 5 fourteenth, the par 3 fifteenth and par 5 sixteenth. He had only one birdie in the afternoon, 4 on the long first hole.

In winning his third championship Chandler found the going rough at times after winning the medal in the qualifying round with a sensational 68. He took the measure of Clarke Lea, jr., of Richmond, 6 and 4, in the preliminary round, but was hard pressed to whip his fellow townsman, Charley Cross, jr., 1 up, in his first round. Chandler whipped Sam Bates, 4 and 3, in the quarter-finals, but the champion needed his best shots in eliminating the determined Norfolk opponent.

Pressed by Riegel.

There was even more drama, however, to Burke's unexpected march to the finals. He started his sensational and courageous bid in the preliminary round by eliminating Wilson Vellines, of Virginia Beach, runner-up to Harper for the medal, 1 up on the nineteenth green.

He disposed of Frank Sutton, 4 and 3, but had to go 19 holes and finish with three birdies on the last four to whip the veteran Charley Kent, of Richmond, 1 up. He moved into the finals by defeating Bobby Riegel, Richmond, 1 up.

to make three of the seven hits credited to the local boys, led off the first inning with a double to left field and eventually scored on Joe Cronin's single to give the Nats a 1-to-0 lead that lasted no longer than the Yankees' next turn at bat.

Whitehill issued a walk to Byrd with one out in the second inning that was translated into the tying run when Dickey singled and Hoag swung with all his might to dump a grounder in front of the box for a scratch hit that sent Byrd across the plate. But there was nothing fluky about the Yanks' two-run uprising in the third.

Chapman Starts Rally.

Two were gone, as the saying is, when the Yanks started erupting against Whitehill in the third. Ben Chapman banged a double up against the left field fence. Lou Gehrig smacked a ball through the box and beat it out for a double. The Yanks were specializing in doubles it appeared, when Sammy Byrd rammed a two-base hit to left. When the smoke of the doubles cleared, the Yanks had two more runs and a 3-1 lead.

The long-distance hitting of the Yanks broke out in another rash in the sixth, starting with a double to left by Byrd and ending in a loud cresendo when Bill Dickey smacked his home run over the right field fence that blasted Whitehill out of the box. Jack Russell finally put a stop to the fuss, but the Yanks had their 5-1 lead.

The Nats had been getting runners on base here and there against Broaca, but with no degree of success until the sixth when, with none out, Manush beat out a single to Gehrig, and Cronin singled to center. He was the last Nat to get on base. Manush finally scored on a pair of outs, but the Nats were as helpless in the last three innings as a Communist before a Hitler firing squad.

Red Sox Rout A's; Regain Third Place

Pound Out Benton in 4th With Six-Run Rally.

Philadelphia, July 1 (AP).—The Boston Red Sox drove Alton Benton from the mound with a six-run rally in the fourth inning today and went on to defeat the Athletics, 10 to 3. The Sox regained its third place in the American League.

Up to the fourth, the youthful Benton had held the Red Sox without a hit or a run. Two more runs were pounded in at the expense of Mort Flohr, former Duke University hurler, in the fifth. Then Connie Mack sent in an untried rookie, Clarence Vaughn, recently of the battleship Oregon. Vaughn held Boston without a hit or a run until the ninth, when Bill Werber hit a homer and the Red Sox followed it with their tenth run of the day on a double by Morgan and a wild throw by Higgins.

Walker, of Tigers, Draws Suspension

St. Louis, July 1 (AP).—Outfielder Gerald Walker, of the Detroit Tigers, was indefinitely suspended without pay today by Manager Mickey Cochrane.

In a game with St. Louis yesterday Walker was caught between first and second bases, forcing Greenberg at third. Later in the same game he was caught off second and Cochrane said he had displayed poor base running in a recent series at Philadelphia. Walker left tonight for Detroit.

Pirates' 2 Runs In Ninth Trim Cubs, 5-4

PITTSBURGH, July 1 (AP).—Lambasting a scorching double with the bases loaded and two gone in the ninth, Tommy Thevenow today robbed the Chicago Cubs of what seemed a sure victory by driving in the tying and winning runs for the Pittsburgh Pirates. The score was 5 to 4.

It looked like curtains for the Pirates as Bud Tinning retired two hitters in the ninth, and many of the 11,000 fans started for the gates. Lloyd Waner halted the march by gaining a walk, and Paul Waner got a sharp single to center which sent "Brother Lloyd" to third. Paul went to second on Cuyler's fumble.

Traynor Is Passed.

Manager Pie Traynor was up. The Cubs, their manager, Charlie Grimm, having been ejected in the fifth for disputing a decision, went into a huddle. Pie was passed, the Chicagoans figuring it would be better to pitch to Thevenow. The latter had gone in for Arky Vaughan after the shortstop was banished for protesting an umpire's decision.

Tigers Divide Pair With Browns

ST. LOUIS, July 1 (AP).—After dropping the opener by the close score of 3 to 2, the Detroit Tigers came back in the second half of a double-header here today to rout the St. Louis Browns with a lop-sided 12-to-3 victory.

Newsom, Coffman and Mills each took a turn on the St. Louis mound in futile attempts to check the rampaging Tigers, who got 15 hits in the victory march. Rogell opened the attack with a first-inning triple that scored Fox and Gehringer. Owen got a homer in the fifth scoring two runners.

Prizes Offered Playground Athletes

Program at Takoma Park for Fourth to Start at 1:30 P. M.

IN addition to the finish of the A. A. U. District of Columbia ten-mile championship—sponsored by the Municipal Playground Department and Takoma Park citizens—the Takoma playground at Fourth and Whittier streets Wednesday will be the scene of a program of athletic events, beginning at 1:30 p. m., under auspices of the American Legion of Takoma Park, Md.

Features of the program will be an exhibition of gymnastics, boxing and wrestling by the Fifth Precinct Boys Club, a water battle between the firemen of Takoma Park and Silver Spring, and an invitation tug-of-war tournament between teams representing Takoma Park, Silver Spring, Bethesda and Kensington Fire Departments.

There also will be a number of races and other activities for boys and girls of Takoma Park (both the District and the Maryland sides), the prizes in the unlimited class being gold, silver and bronze medals given by the District Fourth of July celebration committee through Richard S. Tennyson, assistant supervisor of the D. C. Department of Playgrounds.

The progress of the marathon will be broadcast at the playground through a public address system, giving the location, times and placing of the leading runners every few minutes.

Judges Are Announced.

John C. Post, chairman of the athletic committee, has announced the following list of judges and events: Referee, E. Brooke Fetty; starter, E. J. Hibbs; timer, Ralph E. Gould; track judges, David A. Penney, Abbie Clark, Chester Dean; field judges, Peter Remsen, sr., Eugene Penney, Philip Fox; tug-of-war judge, John R. Adams; gymnastic judge, Herbert W. Rutledge; girls' events judges, Misses Jeannette Adamson, Norma Lewton, Doris Griffin; clerk of course, Herman Riley assistant clerk of course, Peter Remsen, jr.; announcers, Ralph Harries, Wilmer Steiner; recorder, Miss Josephine Irey.

Program—Finish of 10-mile marathon, invitation tug-of-war, water battle, exhibition of gymnastics, boxing and wrestling. Boy's events—70-pound and 90-pound classes, 50-yard dash, running broad jump, 200-yard relay. 115-pound class—60-yard dash, running broad jump, 240-yard relay. Unlimited class—100-yard dash running high jump, half-mile race. Girls' events, under 9—40-yard dash; under 12, 50-yard dash, balloon blowing contest; under 15, 60-yard dash, skipping rope race. Unlimited—60-yard dash, egg-and-spoon race. Open to all—50-yard obstacle race.

Chiron Auto Winner.

Montlhery, France, July 1 (AP).—Louis Chiron, noted French pilot, today won the famous Grand Prix automobile race, covering the 500-kilometer course at an average speed of 136.881 kilometers an hour. The Italian, Achille Varzi, was second, and Guy Moll, of France, third.

Petrolle 7-5 Favorite to Defeat Furr on Hunt Club's 32-Round Card Tonight

Both Boxers Are Tough Punchers

Have Good Records and Can Absorb Plenty of Punishment.

Joey Zoda Seeks Third Victory in Row Here, Facing Falegano.

MONS. GOLDILOCKS AHEARN, majo domo of the Riding and Hunt Club salon of sock, who dedicates his promotorial efforts to the paradoxical propositions of keeping his covered pavillion cool and his fights hot, promises to achieve both his aims in tonight's 32-round card, which is headed by a session of slug between welterweights Frankie Petrolle and Phil Furr.

Both of the contestants in the 10-round main event are punchers pure and simple, or at least the latter. If either of them knows anything at all about the business of blocking punches with portions of the anatomy other than the chin and ears, it is Petrolle and his scrabled features bear mute testimony to his ignorance of the subject. Furr is a kindergarten student in the ducking and blocking business, but both are postgraduate students in the subject of sock and absorb.

Is Knockout Artist.

In his one and only previous appearance here, Petrolle had Ray Bowen on the floor three times before the courageous local welter started to work in real earnest and hammered out a close decision. His record, not including a few recent bouts, credits him with 12 knockouts in 59 fights, which is enough knockouts for any welterweight.

Furr's ability as a good right hand swatter can not be questioned. He has thumped his way to clear-cut victories over Roy Manley, Hughey Gray, Don Whitlock, Glenn Morgan, Buster Brown, Pug Snyder and Lew Raymond. Lew Raymond decisively decisioned Tootsie Bashara in a recent Norfolk bout, which just gives you an idea of the real ability of the local lad.

The chief flaw in Furr's ring style is his inadequate defense, a flaw that has caused the gambling gentry to install Petrolle a very shaky 7-to-5 favorite to win on a decision.

Zoda Opposes Falegano.

In an interesting six-round semifinal, Joey Zoda, promising New York lightweight prospect, will attempt to stretch his local winning streak to three against Henry Falegano, crack Filipino swatsman, now fighting out of Norfolk. Falegano stopped Bucky Taylor, the Baltimore lightweight, in three rounds in Norfolk last week and is here looking for better, if not bigger, game.

In two other sixes, Mike Scipio, of Baltimore, will stack up against Pete Bevans, local welterweight, and Al Dintaman, Washington bantamweight, will sling his powerful right against Sammy Sweet. A four-rounder will bring together Wild Bill Howell and Dallas Palmer, a duo of lightweights.

Around the Ring Selections—Furr to beat Petrolle, Zoda to outbox Falegano, Scipio to outpunch Bevans, Dintaman to ditto Sweet, and Howell to ditto Palmer.

Front Royal Stars Nose Out Culpeper

Front Royal, Va., July 1 (Spl.).—The Front Royal All-Stars lived up to their reputation as the leading ball club in northern Virginia by scundly trouncing the Culpeper nine, members of the Shenandoah Valley League, here this afternoon by the score of 4 to 1. Bobby Cassell, former Washington rookie, and Lefty Jewett, well-known sandlot ace, hooked up in a beautiful pitching duel, Cassell winning due to his ability to bear down in the pinches.

Lyle McFall was the defensive star, making several spectacular plays to quell Culpeper rallies. Goodwin and Huffman, with two hits each, and Casarotti, who drove in two runs, were offensive stars for the locals. Lowery, Culpeper left-fielder, robbed Cassell of a shut-out by hitting for the circuit in the sixth.

At the Post . . .

with Bill Bennings.

Dear Al: Charles Town, July 1.

I love a parade—I mean a parade of winners like the one Bennings, Inc., slipped over yesterday. S-I-X (big type, Mr. Printer, please) W-I-N-N-E-R-S. If you don't believe it, count 'em: Burleigh, $6.80; Pink Post, $13.60; Dixie Bee, $4.40; Flageolet, $7.80; Bright Bird, $10.60, and Miss Catalan, $4. Yea, bo! No scratches, no technicalities—just six horses right on the osenay. A half dozen honeys. Oh, me, oh, my! I'm beginning to like this place. It's peaceful here in the mountains tonight and the whole world was smiling all day long. Clocker Mike is over there in the hammock sleeping. As I'm going over the speedbooks, he snores a little now and then. It sounds like "sisss winnerssss" to me.

BILL.

First Race—Sea Finn is partial to this 5 furlongs and finds a field here that seems to suit. Not lock but a fair betting proposition. Barnstormer comes to this well recommended by Clocker Mike and ready for a fast race. Wise Pete has had several chances to show his stuff. Might go well here.

Second Race—Golden Measure may never be headed in this test. Breaks off the rail and needs only a hustling ride to gain the major end of the pay-off. If trouble materializes I expect it to come from Wild Blonde. This one upset a fair field last out and will be dangerous. Boogie Man for show end.

Third Race—Jobs Dido seems to be an in and outer. Gets in this with light weight. Needs help from the saddle but he has an excellent chance. Dutiful is fairly consistent. Mazyniata hasn't run particularly well for her new owner but may awake.

Fourth Race—Aldershot, holder of a track record here, seems ideally placed. He will have Flageolet, a recent winner, to take care of in the stretch. Handley made a determined bid last out and can not be taken too lightly.

Fifth Race—Aella should have this situation well in hand. This one is good again and I see no reason for mistakes. Veritas and Arras are fit and seem headed for parts of the purse.

Sixth Race—Clocker Mike is passing Nisia along to his friends as a three * special. Maybe so, maybe not. Hosain figured on top in my book. Mint Bud is improving and may be heard from.

Seventh Race—Dunair meets rather cheap company in this and needs only to run his race. Dark Star has been tipped often. Rozell is a possible surprise.

Martinsburg Swamps Hagerstown, 13 to 4

Martinsburg, W. Va., July 1 (Spl.). Battering Bill Young all over the lot, the local Blue Sox continued in the running for the first half Blue Ridge League championship by defeating Hagerstown, 13 to 4, here today.

The Hubs proved no match for the Sox, who saw a pennant beckoning. They punched over five runs in the first inning, and the remainder of the game was a walkaway. The winners used three pitchers,

Around the Ring . . .

By Bill McCormick.

IN view of this column's avowed penchant for baiting boxing commissioners and our self-confessed failure to discover a single opportunity of baiting Washington's solons of sock for anything larger and gamier than minnows, it hardly seems possible that we would overlook an opportunity of ribbing the chairman of a commission, or all people. Yet, from various and sundry sources recently have come pot shots at Maj. Lucian H. Vandoren, the leading legal light who presides over meetings of our Moguls of Maul, for ordering the purse of Senor Pedro Nieves held in abeyance pending investigation by the commission as a whole of his recent bout with Signor Pete Mascia.

It will be recalled that Referee Denny Hughes interrupted the proceedings in the ninth round, ejected Senor Nieves from the ring and gave public utterance to a belief that he was doing a burlap or bag waltz and had absolutely no intention of harming even a single hair on the head of Signor Mascia. As is right and proper, the American Legion officials who were staging the show, appealed to Chairman Vandoren for guidance in the matter ow whether or not they should recompense Senor Nieves for his efforts, if any.

Everyone Squawks.

As is right and proper, Chairman Vandoren ruled that the Nieves purse should be held in abeyance, pending the outcome of the regular meeting of the commission, which becomes history today. Then came the war! Mr. John Romano, who arranged to bring Senor Nieves here for the feeble fisticuffing, squawked; Senor Nieves squawked and squawks have been coming from all quarters since then—all of them directed against Vandoren.

Under the rules of the District Boxing Commission, Vandoren had no alternative for the action he took. Rule 55 readst in par,, as follows: "Should the referee decide that one or both the contestants are not competing * * * he shall stop the bout and order the purses of both boxers held pending investigation by the commission."

Rule 50, reads, in part, as follows: "After a contest starts, the referee has the power to forfeit the purse of one or both contestants. * * *"

Referee Hughes chose to leave the matter up to the commission, and, as there was not a quorum present, Chairman Vandoren, who, after all, is only one-third of the conclave of clut controllers, could not, if he had so desired, have settled the matter definitely.

Vandoren's mistake, if any, seems to have been in not ordering the purses of both fighters held pending investigation, as provided in rule 50. Then "the boys" could have squawked twice as loud.

Fighters Too Busy.

We have a sneaking suspicion that today's meeting of the boxing governing board will not be dedicated entirely to the matter of paring the number of shows per week to reasonable proportions and forstalling future gate gyps. If our Operative No. 679, Ye Olde Ringworme's third assistant vice president in charge of covering the boxing commission, is not leading us astray, we are firmly convinced that the commission also will, in no uncertain terms, clamp down on the business of boxers being popped back in for action before the number of days prescribed by rules and regulations have elapsed and the business of one manager having more than two fighters on any one card, in direct violation of the commission's standing orders.

Secretary Major Harvey L. (Heinie) Miller gets all burnt up at the thought of fighters giving burnt-up performances because they are working too often and points with great indignation to the colorless efforts of Manny Tillman and Johnny Mays as a result of too-frequent bits of box-fighting. Secretary Major Harvey L. (Heinie) Miller is perfectly right about the whole matter, and when Secretary Major Harvey L. (Heinie) Miller is perfectly right about any matter, things sually happen.

Will Answer Criticism.

Ye Olde Ringworme has informed us definitely that the commission absoltely will answer the critics of the 8-ounce gloves today. It seems that the Olde Reprobate got it direct from his brother, Angle Worme (the lug who figures out angles on the fights), who got it straight from Secretary Major Harvey L. (Heinie) Miller.

The commission will issue a manifesto purporting to show that eight-ounce gloves are not as dark as they have been painted. In the manifesto it will be pointed out that mittens that size are required in New Jersey, where fighters develop great punching muscles slapping at mosquitos; that some other States require their use on fighters above 160 pounds; that the weight of the blow not the size of the glove makes a knockout; that good matchmaking results in no knockouts anyway; that professionals are constantly seeking to wrap more and more tape around their hands before a fight to protect them; that what's the difference between wrapping them with tape and having the padding in the gloves; that the knuckles are as unprotected as with six-round gloves because the extra weight is in the elbow; and if a pug can't lug eight-ounce gloves for the full distance without becoming arm-weary he should throw up the sponge and become a crooner or wrestler.

All I know about the subject is what myold friend and counsellor, Harry Raskin, the Old Sage of the Sagebrush, has to say. Harry, it will be recalled, was a boxfighter of no mean ability not so many years ago and his opinion on the matter of stopping punches with the chi carries considerable weight.

"T'hell wid dese eight-ounce gloves," opines Harry. "Y'can get hit on the button easier wid dem—dey cover more territory."

Sarpolis to Face McLain, Boesch Meets Nabors Thursday Night.

ALREADY having complied with public demand in doubling up on wind-up rassling features when he matched Everett Marshall with Rudy Dusek and Ernie Dusek with Abe Coleman for next Thursday night, Promoter Joe Turner yesterday advanced still another notch in local favor.

In supporting 30-minute lead-ups to the Earl McCready-"Bibber" McCoy main preliminary feature, Turner succeeded in pitting Dr. Karl Sarpolis against Mayes McLain and Paul Boesch vs. Sid Nabors.

Sarpolis' return will be warmly welcomed by local enthusiasts.

Following a long rest prompted by overwork, Boesch has been coming back stronger than ever of late.

Frederick Wins, 11-3, Over Chambersburg

Frederick, Md., July 1 (Spl.).—Frederick easily defeated Chambersburg in the Blue Ridge League at McCurdy Field before a large crowd this afternoon 11 to 3. The Hustlers rapped Hamil and Harrison for 16 hits, including a double, two triples and two home runs. Frederick scored three in the second frame on singles by Angleberger, Huffman and McLainsie, a walk to Fraley and two errors and one in the next inning, and double by Garner. A triple by Angleberger and an outfield fly by Baer accounted for two more.

Fraley was touched for ten hits he kept the blows scattered except in the sixth inning when two runs were made, and was very effective with runners on bases. The Maroons were blanked for the first five innings and made but one run after two were shoved across in the sixth. McLainsie with three singles and a triple four times up, Huffman, with three singles in four trips to the plate, and Steele with two circuit blows led at the bat for the winners.

Takoma Trips All-Stars.

Sergt. Leroy Snyder, of the Montgomery County police, piloted the Takoma Park A. C. to a 10-3 victory yesterday over the hitherto undefeated All-State All-Stars on the Takoma diamond. Gordon Freas, Takoma first baseman, banged out a homer, triple, double, and received two walks in five trips to the plate.

WHY SHOP ENDLESSLY FOR A USED upright or grand piano when right under one roof you may see, test and compare prices of good used pianos in great variety. You'll see, too, the wisdom of buying instruments thoroughly regulated or rebuilt by Kimball factory experts, including guaranteed service without additional cost following purchase. These Kimball advantages are seldom realized in dealing elsewhere while the additional expense contingent in purchasing pianos at auction or private sale reacts severely upon the price of so-called bargains. Visit KIMBALL'S before you buy, not afterwards. 721 Eleventh st. nw., 3 doors north of Palais Royal.

SIDNEY SMITH

Walt Mason, Himself

Care of the Dog.

One who loves his little pup tries to keep it tight side up, free from troubles that will make bow-wows' lives a constant ache. And he reads the magazines telling what ill treatment means; if he lets his doggie roam in the streets, away from home, 'twill associate with curs, full of fleas and cockleburs. Dogs have democratic tricks, and they'd rather go and mix with the mongrels, chasing rats, than with true aristocrats. So the petted dog breaks loose from its kennel, leash or noose, and hunts up some bow-wows strange which have itch and fleas and mange, and when he goes home again, he's a shock to decent men, for he's scratching day and night, he is in an evil plight. Then he must be washed and boiled and anointed where he's soiled. One must watch him and repeat or he's liable to eat something poisonous and foul that will make him weep and howl. So he's fed the finest things that the vet'rinary brings, but it is his dearest plan to hunt up a garbage can and devour the rancid meat that no pious dog should eat. So some morning he is found lying gasping on the ground, full of garbage that would slay any bow-wow, black or gray. Says the owner, all agog, "I'll ne'er have another dog."

The Federal Diary

By Morgan Baker.
(Trade-mark Applied For)

Pictures of the 96 typical young Americans that represented the 48 States in the Federal Diary's Parade of the States will be on display this month in windows of Harris & Ewing, 1313 F street northwest opposite Loew's Palace Theater).

RESTORATION of an additional 5 per cent of the Government workers' pay yesterday not only will bring some relief to thousands of distressed men and women, "but it serves to focus attention again upon the deplorable economic conditions faced by Federal employes who have been the victims of an unjustified and ill-advised program of so-called economy," Miss Gertrude McNally, secretary-treasurer of the National Federation of Federal Employes, declared yesterday.

BAKER.

Return of this additional 5 per cent should not obscure them in the public mind, Miss McNally holds, as Federal employes today form the largest group of underpaid and overworked wage earners in the country.

"With the 'five and five' restoration effective," the employe leader said, "there is a general disposition to consider the Federal wage question settled. Nothing could be farther from either justice or a true statement of the facts.

"Federal employes always have been underpaid. When the so-called economy legislation came along, with the 15 per cent cut and pyramiding furloughs, which frequently ran the reduction as high as 50 per cent, thousands of Federal employes were brought to the brink of ruin. Underpaid before, their incomes often reached below subsistence levels.

"The Government has responsibility which it has failed to meet. The 'five and five' restoration is simply a step in the direction of overcoming a terrible injustice. Return of the additional 5 per cent should be a reminder that much remains to be done before the Government may say truthfully that it is in the vanguard as a progressive, forward-looking employer of labor," Miss McNally continued.

Meanwhile, headquarters of the National Federation of Federal Employes announced that it will continue its efforts at the next session of Congress to bring about a more equitable wage policy.

James Earle Miller (*), formerly with Veterans' Administration, has been appointed architect in charge of PWA projects in the Bureau of Agricultural Economics. Mr. Miller served 11 years in the Construction Service at Veterans' Administration, the past three years of which being chief of the Architectural Department.

LOW gross honors in the Income Tax Unit (Internal Revenue) Golf League's mixed foursomes at East Potomac Park go to Miss Era Tillotson (*), and Warren Lucas. Under ideal weather conditions 32 couples participated, the four leading low scores being: First low net, Mrs. John Hughes and Joseph Gross, 53-16—37; second low net, Miss Era Tillotson and Warren Lucas, 50-12—38; third low net, Miss Hollis Dunlop and John Seward, 52-13—39, and tied for fourth low net were Miss Grace Sexton and Allen Hendrix, 54-14—40, and Mrs. Isel McCormick and Arthur Adair, 53-13—40.

Fred Ruby and Miss Estelle R. Richardson, both of Hydrographic Office, Navy, were married Saturday afternoon at Elkton, Md. They immediately left on a honeymoon.

N. F. F. E. Meetings.

The N. F. F. E. program for the week includes a testimonial dinner to Lee R. Downs, Bureau of Standards employe, who retired Saturday after 31 years service. The Standards Local, No. 260, is honoring their fellow member and fellow-employe at the Tilden Gardens, adjoining the Bureau, at a banquet, Thursday, July 5, at 6:30 p. m.

Other meetings to be held at local headquarters, 710 Fourteenth street northwest, are that of the Navy Department branch, Local No. 2, Monday, July 2, 8 p. m.; Executive Council, Local No. 2, Friday, July 6, 5 p. m., and Local No. 71, colored employes, Friday at 8 p. m.

Diary Guest Tickets.

IF your name is followed by (*) call in person on the Federal Diary editor the same day. You will receive tickets to Loew's Columbia (Marion Davies and Gary Cooper in "Operator 13"); or to Loew's Palace (Wiliam Powell and Myrna Loy in "The Thin Man"); or to Loew's Fox (stage, Will Mahoney and Gertrude Miesen; screen, Shirley Temple in "Little Miss Marker").

Diary office hours are: Daily, except Sundays, 12 noon to 1 p. m., and from 4:30 to 6 p. m.; Saturdays, 12 noon to 2:30 p. m.

H. H. Sullivan, Identification Unit, Justice, received an LL. B. degree from National University this week.

Barden Wins Carolina Democratic Run-Off

Charlotte, N. C., June 30 (AP).—Graham A. Barden, New Bern attorney, won the Democratic nomination for Congress in the Third District in today's run-off primary, on the face of nearly complete returns tabulated here tonight. He was opposed by Luther A. Hamilton, former State senator of Morehead City.

Barden and Hamilton, both young lawyers, entered the second primary as survivors of the first primary when Representative Charles Laban Abernathy, who represented the district 12 years, and three other candidates were eliminated.

Maryland College Plans New Building

Westminster, Md., July 1 (Spl.). Contract for construction of a new girls' dormitory at Western Maryland College has been awarded Thomas Hicks & Sons, Baltimore. The building will cost $165,000 and will house 160 students.

McNaught Syndicate, Inc., N. Y.

Ten times as powerful as the largest station in the country heretofore, the new Cincinnati station WLW broadcasts with 500,000 watts of power. This means that power equivalent to 700 horsepower goes into space from its huge antenna continuously when the station is operating.

Although this power diminshes very rapidly as the distance from the station increases, it has played strange pranks in the neighborhood of the transmitter. The sending station is located in Mason, Ohio, 22 miles from the Cincinnati studio.

At the residence of G. I. Gerard, in Mason, electric lights continued to glow even after they were turned off. This, radio engineers explain, was because the wiring of the house acted as an antenna which picked up enough power to light the bulbs. The Gerard home is located several hundred yards from WLW's antenna, but not until engineers rewired the house's lighting system was the unwanted power supply cut off.

If, however, all the power used by WLW was wired direct into homes it would be sufficient to serve all the domestic lighting needs of a city of 150,000 population—instead of lighting just a few lamps as it did by radio. Under normal operation the station will use 15,450,000 kilowatt hours in a year.

Tomorrow: The first father of his country.

"My Mother Took It, Too"

Here's Strength for Rundown Women

"My mother used to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. After I grew up she gave it to me. I have been doing housework for eleven years. I felt weak and tired at certain times. Your medicine gave me more strength and built me up when I was rundown."—Mrs. Mary Garant, 415 Adams St., N. E., Minneapolis, Minnesota.

If you are weak, nervous and rundown give this medicine a chance to help you too. Your druggist sells it.

ENJOY THIS WAY OF INCREASING YOUR ENERGY

Smoke a Camel—and notice its "energizing effect"

With the pleasure of Camel's distinctive flavor comes an added benefit—an actual increase in your flow of natural energy. That exhausted, "dragged-out" feeling slips away...your "pep" comes flooding back. This discovery, confirmed by a famous New York research laboratory, means that by smoking Camels it is possible to restore the flow of your natural energy—quickly—delightfully—and without jangling your nerves.

"Camels give me a refreshing 'lift' in energy when I feel tired out. And they don't interfere with my nerves."
HELENE MADISON OLYMPIC AND WORLD'S CHAMPION SWIMMER

"Get a LIFT with a Camel!"

● Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE TOBACCOS—Turkish and Domestic—than any other popular brand.
